Free World Security

As the Southeast Asia drama enfolds, compounded by the hypocrisy and duplicity of the Communist world which broke the Paris peace agreement, our own, for-the-present peaceful, society is gripped by an unconcern and apathy that may bode ill for us.

Southeast Asia is far enough away in the physical sense, but television brings its horrors very close. In the context too of our free world status, events there have upset the spirit and intent of east-west detente, as well as striking a blow at the morale of the entire free world.

Bilingualism And Three Rs

Some time ago we observed that with so many young people unable to use the English language properly, what is the use of going to such lengths to promote bilingualism?

Now we have the federal government's language czar, Official Languages Commissioner — to give him his full title — Keith Spicer calling it all a "national disaster."

Spicer blames the schools for churning out unilingual and barely literate graduates and the government for failing to make full use of its own costly language training programs.

He says school boards are cutting down on French language instruction and giving students too many course options, while government language graduates are being sent to jobs where their new skills are not needed.

There is no quarrel with the concept of bilingualism itself, only the steamroller effort of the government and the expense which, taken together, represent a blunder for which taxpayers are paying dearly.

Outlets for the Young

Reading John Harbron's melancholy impressions of the New York urban — and suburban — crime-ridden scene is to be more and more convinced of the need here for such facets as family discipline and a strong judicial system with back-up services to show the errant among us a better way. A need too for appropriate outlets for the young that provide a counterbalance to the often stultifying urban scene.

The summer camps afford many youngsters release from urban demands and schedules, while at the same time offering them other necessary disciplines. It's a good setting too for young people who find themselves in trouble of one kind or another in an urban environment. In an old May 1969 issue of The Vancouver Sun, which we happened upon recently, was a story regarding rehabilitation of youth offenders. It pointed out that 90 per cent of first-time marijuana offenders were being sent to wilderness camps to learn responsibility and the ability to fight for the social reforms many of them sought.

Their daily schedule included mountain climbing, canoeing, search and rescue, forest fire fighting — and all aimed at teaching the responsibility to themselves and others.

In the same vein overseas is a School of Adventure in the Scottish Highlands run by John Ridgway, a one-time British paratrooper who with a companion rowed a boat across the Atlantic in 1966. Participants are all ages from 11 to 70.

It is the kind of lifestyle also cultivated by the Scouts and cadet organizations and it would be a bad day for society if for one reason or another it was dispensed with. That's unlikely though, and the hope surely is that more young people can be introduced to such outdoor training.

Viewpoint

Sherbrooke La Tribune

Contemporary man faces diminished hope in light of bombings, famines, political assassinations, scandals and the various injustices that happens only in a world where uneven distribution of resources exists.

Our current frame of mind is such that we no longer are upset by the daily parade of misery and injustice, and we detach ourselves from these problems by telling ourselves our efforts to remedy them would be wasted.

Low incomes, indecent conditions for social welfare cases . . . we no longer are impressed by these things. . .

Man's depravity no longer disgusts, or even embarrasses him. We are growing farther from the church probably because of this.

No one doubts the forces of evil and injustice are spreading here.

One who is concerned about this drift says he is appalled by the indifference of many people, an attitude too that senses no peril in this stark evidence of Communist imperialism, and even a kind of approval — that if it came to any ultimate takeover here, well, it would not bother them too much.

Unhappily, there is little comfort either from Ottawa, which once roundly condemned U.S. bombing of North Vietnam, but is now silent on the continuing Communist advances. There are few in Ottawa expressing any degree of concern over the turn of events.

Instead we have in this same centre of government a sort of holding of hands with the Communist world. Back in January for instance an entry permit was issued to a Marxist economist, Andre Gunder Frank, to permit him to teach as a visiting professor at the University of Montreal. And there are the growing alliances with, China and Cuba.

And that, while at the same time church leaders were asking Premier Davis to cease the importation of South African wines through the LCBO, imports from a country which itself may well be next on the Communist world's list for stepped-up subversion. No matter that South Africa should go under with all its wealth, including gold, and no matter what that might do to the economy of the free world. And all for the sake of a few bottles of wine.

It would seem also that a great deal of the criticism of the United States, as leader of the free world, is from within our system, directed at those who supposedly are our friends and allies. And this should be of very grave concern to anyone who wants the free world to survive.

Housing Outlook Remains Grim in Bumpy Economy

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

For Canada's economy, the year ahead looks better—but not a smoother stretch can be seen towards the horizon.

That seems to sum up the outlook by economists at Canada's largest investment house. Here are key points in the forecast update, just published by Wood Gundy Ltd.:

—Inflation rate will approach 7.5 per cent of the Canadian labor force this summer, and average 7.5 per cent for the full year. At last count, the jobless rate was 7.2 per cent, or one out of every 14 people in the labor force.

—Corporate profits after taxes are likely to fall about 17 per cent by mid-1975 from the peak they reached in July-September, 1974. For 1975, the Wood Gundy economists look for a gain of about 15 per cent.

—Business investment in new plant and equipment (a key factor in creating new jobs) is likely to grow much more slowly this year and next than in the recent past.

—Outlook for both costs and supply in one of the most basic industries—housing—is grim.

Here, in Canada, the economic property taxes and home-heating costs are rising rapidly this year.

The number of housing starts may have bottomed out in the first three months of 1975 at an annual rate of 158,000, but is unlikely to exceed the modest rate of 225,000 over the year-end.

"Builders are likely to be unwilling to build speculatively to the extent they did in 1973 and 1974," say the Wood Gundy forecasters.

This will contribute to the above-average unemployment rate, as will the slowdown in activity in the steel and forestry industries.

But with organized labor continuing to seek huge wage increases, there could be heavy loss in Canadian production as a result of strikes before mid-1975.

"Employers are facing weak demand," according to the economists at Wood Gundy, "and will be tougher bargainers than usual."

(Latest figures from Statistics Canada show that major new contracts signed in fourth-quarter 1974 called for wage increases averaging a record 17.4 per cent a year. In the same period, wages, salaries and supplemental labor income in the economy as a whole went up at an average annual rate of 12.3 per cent.)

Sales of durable goods fell sharply in the second half of 1974, as many consumers—faced with big price rises and a slower growth of their real income—decided to postpone the purchase of big-ticket items.

Some recovery in consumer spending is likely in the final six months of this year, according to the Wood Gundy forecast, as the growth of real disposable income picks up and the public responds to 1976-model cars designed for the economy mid-sized.

One sure bet is that consumers will be paying more and more for petroleum-based energy. Wood Gundy economists suggest that the Canadian domestic price of oil at the wellhead will rise by $1 in June, from the current $6.50 a barrel, and by another 50 cents next January.

The world price—set by a cartel, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries—is expected to fall by between $1 and $2 a barrel from the current level of about $11.

The big bumps in the price of Canadian oil will be followed—as were the 1973 and 1974 increases—by further boosts not only in gasoline prices but also in transit, train and air fares. By this time next month, CP Air will have raised its domestic fares, from just under 10 per cent to more than 34 per cent.

Liquor...Soft Drink...Coffee Anyone?

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The proposed changes in the liquor system are hardly revolutionary. But most of them are good.

Generally speaking, the changes do are clear up the particulars of the system and most pertinently put some curb on the extreme powers which the Liquor Licence Board exercises.

In fact, to the extent that they bring control over liquor more into the open they could probably be regarded as the most important single step since cocktail bars were introduced nearly 20 years ago.

One of the welcome minor steps that is proposed is that all establishments selling liquor should have coffee and soft drinks also available.

New York state has had this provision for years and recently Manitoba has adopted it.

It is something for which the writer has been pressing for years.

The rationale behind it is quite simple.

A lot of the drinking today is done by crotchety groups. Groups that get together regularly after work or for lunch and have a few.

If a member of the group is a teetotaler he will still want to meet with his cronies, but as things stand today about his particular bar happens to serve coffee, he is in a trap that lies him down to drinking liquor.

Then that famous rubber sandwich may be on the way out, or at least partially.

Another of the proposals is that a new "cabaret" licence be established which would cut down on the amount of food an establishment would have to sell to keep its licence. There would be no need for a compulsory food order.

From the point of view of principle, the most important proposal probably is that which would set up an appeal tribunal.

Also an advisory board which would be established for special occasion (banquet) permits.

There over two of the most offensive points in the power that the Licence Board has now.

They also have been two of the most troublesome points to the government, with the board turning down applications, at times, without any apparent good reason.

Actually in its 30 years history the LCBO has been a very automatic body.

At first this was intentional, and perhaps was necessary.

But it doesn't suit this day and times.

Funds for Overseas Aid

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

In January leaders of five major Canadian Churches (Anglican, Lutheran, Presbyterian, Catholic, Roman and United) submitted a brief to the Ontario Cabinet on behalf of thirty-five international voluntary agencies.

The brief asked the Ontario Government to set up a system of provincial matching grants to match dollar-for-dollar the donations of individual Ontario residents to the overseas development program of their church or favorite charitable agency.

Similar systems of provincial matching grants are already operating in Alberta and Saskatchewan. Under these programs the churches and agencies are often able to multiply by four times each donation given them by the residents of these two provinces.

Private agencies have a vital role to play in Canada's total effort to aid developing nations. We can do many things our government cannot. We deal directly with individuals and small communities; our government is bound by international protocol to deal only through centralized national governmdets or the United Nations in its own aid programs. Both the large and the small, scale efforts are important; but we believe Canada's total international development effort needs to be strengthened if more dollars are put into the people-to-people work of the churches and voluntary agencies.

The Ontario Government's initial response to the brief was warm and receptive. We hope they will consider the recommendations important enough to merit quick and positive action.

The Metric Controversy

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Mr. Meeks metric remarks are "MADNESS." Instead of seeing all the advantages of the metric system he has racked his brains to come up with some remarks about the disadvantages.

Of course the changeover will be confusing for a while but once we are totally metric we will appreciate its economies. Products now list both measures — standard and metric and most practical people are starting to catch onto it. People with closed minds will make the changeover tough. If we grew up with the metric system we would think it was great. It's too bad we ever had the other system in the first place, but all we have to do is accept metric and put an effort towards understanding it. We need a common sense system to keep in step with world trade.

His statement about taking a plebiscite is a joke. For our sakes we hope it never, but we never have plebiscites about any important issue, so why worry about it. Things like that just don't happen here.

If Mr. Meeks is worried about regression, it's too late. He's already gone too far.

Celsius by Any Other Name

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Our first reaction was that the overhead announcement at TBQ thought the word was "Celsius" not "Centigrade" which is not the case. We have a one man crusade on the air to "buck the system" which all of Canada seems embarked upon. A "Celsius Hollow" attitude which the citizens and council of Belleville should reject. Ask the students who understand the merits of the advantages. Their reaction to this resolution by one person would prove interesting.

Belleville is progressive not backward. When incentives are this summer we should not lead them to believe that the rest of Canada has converted — except Belleville. It is a slur on the intelligence of his listeners when he implies that we only understand old measures.

Fortunately — for the moment — "Celsius" is not forbidden words from his vocabulary. He now refers to the Celsius. How will anyone learn?

Understandably some people may be confused. Give them a period of time to use both methods — which is a good idea. But please use the proper terms and do not confuse the metric system.

Do others agree with my annoyance at this "resistance to change"?

Information Booth Costs

The following is the text of a letter addressed to the president of the Trenton Board of Commerce.

With regard to your statement as reported in Belleville paper, I beg to advise that the Highlands of Hastings Tourist Region cave the Chamber of Commerce, Tweed, $100 in 1974 to assist you in placing personnel in your Information Booth.

We also provided advertising to the value of $464.78 for Winter Carnival.

At the last COTA meeting in Peterborough, at our request, it was approved that a College Student Internship be set up at no cost to you for your information booth for 16 weeks. It appears that this would have to be cancelled if the Booth is to be manned by paid staff. We will have to notify COTA immediately that this will not be required.

Nuclear Energy and Health

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

The following is the text of a letter addressed to provincial Energy Minister Gordon Carton:

Are you aware of the recent discovery that British scientists and technicians who handle plutonium, which is produced in nuclear reactors, are at least 7 times and possibly 30 times more likely to die of leukemia than anyone else?

Michael Cope, U.K. correspondent for the Daily Mirror of Toronto, Saturday, April 12, 1975, reported that a similar increase in leukemia incidence by x-rays or gamma rays would require very large doses indeed, while the dose produced by plutonium at maximum occupational levels is several thousand smaller."

"This suggests that some entirely unknown mechanism may be at work, for in theory the body's ability to repair radiation dose from plutonium should be no more than three times more effective than radiation from X-rays.

Are plutonium handlers in Ontario being carefully medical checked-up?

Papineau Lake Park Postponement Praised

By NAN WHITLAW
Staff Correspondent

BANCROFT — Reaction of area residents and municipal officials to the announcement Tuesday by resources minister Leo Bernier that the province had postponed indefinitely its plans to develop a 600-acre park on Papineau Lake was unanimously favorable.

Sybil Saylor, past president of the Papineau Lake Cottage Owners' Association and permanent resident of the area, said: "We are very pleased. I am delighted, that the government has seen fit not to put the park on our lake. You have no idea how happy this makes me."

Myrtle Davis, matriarch of the 40-member family that jointly owns a 500-acre property on the lake that would have been expropriated, when she was told of the announcement:

"My, that really pleases me. That certainly is contrary to everything they told me. I spoke to a man at the ministry last Tuesday and he told me they still planned to go ahead.

"If Mr. Bernier really made that statement, I guess I'll be able to sell lots in my cottage subdivision. I'm sure the cottage owners will be as pleased as I am."

Mrs. Davis added that at no time had she entered into negotiations with the province for the sale of her property.

Reeve Felix Browne, of Bangor, Wicklow and McClure townships ,in which the park would have been located:

"This comes as a complete surprise to me. Apart from the statement about budget restraints leading to the decision, it seems strange to me that the decision should be so indefinite. I'm happy for the cottagers, though."

Mr. Browne's council in May, 1974, passed a resolution opposing the establishment of the park on Papineau Lake and suggesting an alternative site be found in the township.

When asked what he saw for the future of land development in the township, the reeve said he could see no any way that future development would be restricted.

Hastings MPP Clarke Rollins, when he learned of Mr. Bernier's announcement, said: "This decision is in keeping with the provincial government's policy of cutting government spending. This comes from a real concern for the economy of the province." Mr. Rollins added that he felt the indefinite aspect of the announcement was attributable to the possibility of an upcoming election.

"The provincial government can't make a commitment until it gets a mandate from the people.

"I can assure you there will be no park development on that site now and in the future for as long as I am the sitting member."

Mr. Rollins said the Papineau Lake decision would have no bearing on future decisions involving the Algonquin Park Master Plan.

Marmora Crusade Gains Momentum

MARMORA — The Good News Crusade being sponsored by the four Marmora Protestant Churches is now into its second week.

More and more people are coming from a distance for the daily meetings that see conversions, healings, Bible teachings, singing and inspired preaching by the six-member team from England.

Evangelist Don Double, who heads the team, preaches on all nights except for the twice weekly Youth Emphasis meetings, bringing a special message that God answers all needs in body, mind and spirit. The Crusade service starts at 7:30 p.m. every night of the week.

Simon Matthews conducts the Youth Discussion meetings at 8 p.m. nightly, leads the crusade service nightly and preaches at the Youth Emphasis nights, Tuesday and Friday evenings.

Presiding at the organ at all services is Anthony Mittrick, organist and choirmaster of St. Mary Magdalene Anglican Church, at Peckham, England.

The children of Marmora are turning out in large numbers for the daily meetings at 4 o'clock conducted by David Abbott. Mr. Abbott leaves later this year for Africa where he will spend three months ministering to kings among them.

The Bible Exploration classes and other prayer meetings are led by Muriel Darwood, whose unique Bible teaching ministry has been of help to many in Britain, Africa, Japan and the United States.

The sketch member of the team is Muriel Darwood, wife of Michael Darwood, who is in charge of the counseling room where people who feel they want to receive Christ into their lives are invited to go for prayer, after the Crusade service, counseling and perhaps make a commitment to God.

A local or out-of-town singing group is an added feature each evening at the Crusade service.

A full program has been lined up for the remainder of the week, which ends on Sunday evening. All the evening meetings are held at the Earl Prentice School.

Tweed Gardeners Meet

TWEED — Tweed and District Horticulturist Society's regular April meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S.H. Connor. It was reported the membership for 1975 has now reached 106.

Guest speaker was Intell columnist Ross Hawthorne, an enthusiastic horticulturist who works hard and enjoys it. Mr. Hawthorne presented the society with a gift certificate which will be honored by Bishop's Seeds in Belleville.

Many questions were asked and answered by the guest, pertaining to lawn and garden needs and a discussion developed on growing seeds indoors with lights.

Mrs. T.E. Moffat thanked Mr. Hawthorne for an informative and interesting evening.

At the next meeting, Gordon Mahon, President of District 3, will be the speaker.

Open House Campers

These two grade 12 students, Steven Bonisteel and David Fargey, both 17, literally carried out at the Belleville Collegiate Institute's Open House Tuesday night. The students were exhibiting an outdoor scene.

This is just one of many activities going on throughout Hastings County to celebrate Education Week.

Stirling Arena Group Wants Council Action

STIRLING — Bert Bastedo, chairman of the Stirling district arena committee, told that group Tuesday evening there is now a bank balance of $6,000.

He went on to point out that the new Ontario-run lottery will endorse such things as new hockey rinks, and said an application should be put in for consideration, and the committee decided to "pursue the matter.

The committee is going to have a meeting with the Stirling and District Business Association regarding the arena. A couple of months ago at a Stirling council meeting, a businessman informally suggested to council that several businessmen as delegates from the association would like to meet with council prior to the village budget being set.

Before the businessmen met with council, the arena committee wants to talk with the businessmen. The arena committee hopes this can be done next Tuesday.

Deputy-reeve Fred Brandt told the meeting that it is difficult for new people on a council to make a decision on matters such as a new arena until they know all the financial requirements of the village.

Committee members expressed concern about the length of time it is taking for Stirling council to make a definite financial commitment to the porposed arena.

"Everything I s getting bogged down. It is pretty frustrating. We just have to mark time," finance committee chairman Jack Bush said.

"The activity of the arena is being strangled," Doug Patterson said.

"It must be individuals pressuring councillors," Andy Brown said. "I don't know of any organization antagonistic toward the arena."

Silversmiths Create Their Own Jewelry

Crafting tiny pill boxes with agate lids and sterling spoons or original design, pendants and broaches and rings and earrings is an art and a skill learned this winter by nine silversmiths students at Belleville Collegiate Institute evening classes.

Instructor for the class is Harley Leach, of Kingston, who has been creating with silver for 16 years.

Mr. Leach, who is teaching in Belleville for the first time this year, is a genuine carver who couldn't find fittings for his work. Consequently, he decided to make them himself.

The nine students who are studying with Mr. Leach are all artistic, he says, and possess the one prerequisite for silver smithing — an eye for balance and design.

They began with simple jewelry — pendants with relatively uncomplicated settings, for example — and progressed to rings and tiny pill boxes with genuine form.

"That was the most difficult project of all," Mr. Leach says. "They even made the hinges. Without exception, all the little boxes were of professional quality."

Tuesday night, at BCVI's open house, many of the students were working on their current project, a silver spoon.

The small piece of silver the student must buy to make the spoon — the bowl shape is cut out and hammered into its curved shape — costs more than $8.

It's not an inexpensive craft to begin, Mr. Leach says, but the tools one must purchase initially are not prohibitive — they cost about $30.

However, he points out, when you've been in it 16 years you'll probably end up owning 18 different pairs of pliers just as he does.

The course will be offered again next year.

Harley Leach advises Natalie Foley.

Try These Chicken Recipes for Variety

Chicken with Pineapple

one chicken cut into pieces two cloves garlic
one large sliced onion four red pepper
two tbsp. butter
two tbsp. oil
one can tomatoes
two tbsp. chopped parsely
½ tsp. basil
one bay leaf
one cup chicken stock
two tbsp. butter
two tbsp. flour

Melt butter and oil together. Add Chicken pieces and brown. Season. Remove from pot. Add onion and peppers, garlic and herbs. Toss in pan for five minutes. Add tomatoes and stir. Add stock and return chicken to pan. Season. Cover and cook 30 minutes. Thicken sauce with mixed butter and flour. Serve with plain egg noodles and a green salad.

Pineapple Chicken Bake

one cut up chicken
one small can pineapple
½ sp. dry mustard
salt and pepper
one chopped onion
one cup white wine

Place chicken pieces in a shallow pan. Drain pineapple, reserving juice. Surround chicken with pineapple chunks. Combine pineapple juice, wine, mustard and onion. Pour over chicken and bake uncovered for 35 minutes at 350 bastiing occasionally. Remove chicken and pineapple chunks and stir one tbsp. cornstarch mixed with two tbsp. cold water into juice. Replace meat and fruit and bake an additional 10 minutes.

The word food writers most often pair with chicken is "versatile". To avoid the cliche, we won't say it. We'll just let these recipes — which include a method for fried chicken you don't fry — speak for themselves.

Chicken Stew

three tbsp oil salt and pepper to taste
flour
½ tsp sage
½ tsp rosemary
½ tsp thyme
two tbsp parsley potatoes carrots
peas

Dredge chicken pieces with flour and salt and pepper. Brown in oil in large heavy pan. Add cut up vegetables and herbs and enough water to cover generously. Simmer one hour. If desired, thicken stew with a mixture of one tbsp corn starch and two tbsp cold water.

Chicken Creole

one cut-up chicken
large tin tomatoes
one green pepper
one rib celery
one large onion, diced
salt and pepper

Sauté onion, green pepper and celery in a small amount of fat in a large heavy skillet. Add tomatoes and about one cup of water. Add chicken pieces and simmer slowly about one hour.

Crisp Baked Chicken

3½ lb. chicken or chicken pieces
½ cup evaporated milk (unmixed)
one cup cornflake crumbs
1 tsp. seasoned salt
¼ tsp. lemon-pepper
½ tsp. paprika
½ tsp. ground herbs (thyme, savoury, oregano, rosemary or marjoram)

Combine crumbs with seasonings. Dip chicken pieces in milk, then roll in crumb mixture. Place, skin up, in foil-lined shallow baking pan. Bake in moderate oven of 350 degrees F. until fork-tender — about one hour.

Japanese Style Dry Garlic Chicken Wings

24 chicken wings (2½ lbs.)
one cup corn syrup
½ cup soya sauce
¼ cup water
one tsp. garlic powder
one tsp. ground ginger

Cut off and discard wing tips; cut each wing in half. Divide equally between two (9 by 13-inch) baking dishes. Mix together remaining ingredients; divide in half equally, pouring over chicken wings. Cover and marinate in refrigerator at least 3 hours or overnight. Bake uncovered 350 degrees F until tender, for 30 to 40 minutes, turning after half an hour.

Makes 8 main dish servings, or 10 to 15 appetizer servings.

Orange Chicken d'Ouvre

two cups ground cooked chicken
½ cup fine bread crumbs
one tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
one tsp. minced onion one egg
one tbsp. chicken broth

Orange sauce

Combine all ingredients in medium bowl. Form into small balls, three-quarters to one inch in diameter. Place on greased baking sheet; bake at 400 degrees F. for 15 minutes. Place in small chafing dish; add Orange Sauce and keep warm. Serve with cocktail picks, or serve on the picks with sauce as dip.

Orange Sauce

½ cup currant jelly
½ tsp. minced onion
½ tsp. Tabasco
¾ tsp. salt
½ tsp. dry mustard
½ tsp. ginger
one tbsp. chopped dill
1½ cups orange juice two tbsp. cornstarch
two tbsp. cold water

In small saucepan, heat first eight ingredients until boiling. Blend in cornstarch with water; stir into mixture in saucepan. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly.

Roast Chicken

one - 4lb. roasting chicken
three cups stuffing
salt and poultry seasoning
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 cup white wine

Singe, clean, and wash the chicken. Dry thoroughly inside and outside with a clean towel. Rub inside of fowl with salt, allowing about ¼ teaspoon salt for each pound of chicken. Fill lightly with bread and celery stuffing allowing some room for the stuffing to expand during cooking. Place a small amount of dressing in the neck to round out the contour. Close by sewing with needle and thread, or insert skewers and lace with string. Truss. Place chicken breast side down in an uncovered roasting pan. Cover with cloth saturated with fat; and bake in moderate oven (325 degrees F.) for about 1 hour. Turn chicken breast side up. Cover with same cloth and bake 1 to 1½ hours longer. Remove cloth for last half hour to permit deeper browning. Baste at intervals during baking time with the melted butter or margarine and the wine. Allow 30 to 35 minutes per pound for a four to five pound chicken. Prepare gravy from wine-flavoured drippings in bottom of pan.

Bread and Celery Stuffing

1½ cups bread crumbs
1 cup celery, finely chopped
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. thyme or marjoram
½ onion, minced
three tbsp. butter or margarine
one egg, beaten

seasonings and onion. Add melted butter or margarine and the beaten egg. Mix lightly with a fork. Stuff bird lightly. Do not pack.

Coat chicken in seasoned crumbs before baking golden-crisp.

Ann Landers

Should Elderly Complainers Be Kept Alive?

Dear Ann Landers: "Amen" to the reader who signed her letter "A Relative." I go to see my elderly mother at least once a week and after each visit I am depressed. Fortunately I have an understanding husband who goes with me. I could never make it alone.

It is impossible to carry on an intelligent conversation because the Mother is so deaf. So we sit for what looks like an eternity and listen to her crazy chatter.

She is crippled with arthritis, but otherwise is in excellent health for 88. Mother made a fantastic recovery from a breast removal a few years ago but she still insists "there's a lump."

She is very comfortable in a large, well-run nursing home with excellent care. Many people do not even see their mother more than she is, but she's never satisfied. All she does is complain. I go to see them because I want to look forward to. Some of them don't even know what day it is. I sometimes wonder if it's right to keep these people alive. I pray a lot. — Also a Relative

Dear Also: Of course it's right to keep them alive. The alternative is murder.

I receive dozens of letters from people who work in nursing homes. They ask me why relatives of these old folks don't come to visit them. Loneliness is the worst part of it, I'm told. If only the sons, daughters, grandchildren, friends, someone—ANYONE—would drop in for half an hour, it would make such a difference. These old folks, as you said, have nothing to do but sit around and wait for the next meal.

Thanks for writing. I have a feeling your letter did more good than you'll ever know.

Dear Ann Landers: Every week the doctors of America come up with something that is harmful to your health. If it isn't additives, it's tight garters or smog. Now we are told to stop laughing. A doctor in the East says laughing can be hazardous to your health if it disrupts normal breathing. It might even cause a stroke if a person is susceptible.

I always thought laughter was good for the body and the soul. Please check this out, Ann. I'm — About To Become A Sourpuss

Dear Puss: The experts say go ahead and laugh—if you can find something to laugh about these days.

Dear Ann Landers: A friend was bragging at our bridge club that her daughter is going to marry a doctor. A few weeks later I learned he is not a real doctor, but a Ph.D. in education. When I called her on it she said if a person has earned a doctorate, it is customary to use the title "Dr."

I inquired of a few professionals. They said the practice is pompous and misleading—that "Dr." should be used only by physicians, and most of THEM use M.D. after their names.

Who is correct? — Curious In Arcadia

Dear Arc: Anyone who has earned a doctorate or has been given a honorary degree has the right to call himself "Dr." Most Drs. (other than those in scientific fields) do not use it, however, for the reason you stated.

'Unions Should Organize Women'

TORONTO (CP) — Margaret Wilson, a New Zealand lawyer, says new unions should organize women and support their cause in union contracts.

Miss Wilson, a labor law specialist attending Osgoode Hall for a year while working toward a doctorate in jurisprudence, said the labor movement has fallen down in its duty to protect minority groups, including women.

"It almost runs the risk of being a workers' elitist organization."

Miss Wilson is a former secretary of the Auckland Legal Employees Union, composed of law clerks and law students as well as legal secretaries and accountants who work in legal offices and lawyers not in partnerships.

She became interested in the women's liberation movement through her work as a labor lawyer. She said she does not think there will be much improvement in the status of women until their economic position changes.

In Canada, women represent 28.6 percent of union membership.

Miss Wilson said union contracts contain at least one pitfall for women coming into the work force. Seniority is important, and women, as new employees, have no seniority.

She said women must be encouraged to become shop stewards and take on other union posts.

'Growing Old' Growing Deaf

Dear Doris: Your letter from the patient 84 made me begin to realize I am getting old too. I am somewhat crippled and don't get around as well as I used to. I am supposed to stay off my ankle, which is troubled with ulcers.

But my worst trouble is my hearing. Deafness, or rather near-deafness, came on me suddenly. I try my best to hear what people are saying but usually don't.

People who can hear don't want to be annoyed by having to talk louder or to repeat what they say, and if I turn on the T.V. it is too loud for others.

Growing Old.

Dear Growing Old: You sound to me like a going concern going downhill. Hearing loss comes to many an older person. You must not let yourself get into the isolation which right now seems so much less bother than keeping up with those around you.

You can karn lipreading at a late age; and you should discuss with your doctor the possibility of a hearing aid. Both of these things take patience, determination, and a good measure of intestinal fortitude.

But this is better than shutting yourself inside what threatens to become a soundless world. Can you write? Could you write a comforting letter to someone you know who is in worse trouble than you are? Try it. Try many things that will keep you living in the here-and-now world.

Greek Cypriot Women March for Refugees

DHEYNIA, Cyprus (CP) — Thousands of Greek Cypriot women, joined by Greek actress Melina Mercouri and other foreigners, marched toward United Nations and Turkish military lines Sunday in the biggest demonstration since the Cyprus war. They demanded the return of 200,000 refugees to their homes.

There was no official estimate of the number of demonstrators but Reuters placed the number at about 20,000.

UN troops from five countries—Canada, Britain, Austria, Sweden and Finland—took up positions on a hillside overlooking the port city of Famagusta between Turkish-and Greek-Cypriot lines and escorted representatives of the marchers to the Turkish side. But Turkish authorities refused to accept petitions from the women.

Following a long discussion, the women finally agreed to deliver a copy of the petitions to a UN official to hand to the Turkish embassy in Nicosia.

The marchers called for action on a UN resolution of last fall, urging the safe return of all Cyprus refugees to their homes. Turkey supported that UN measure but has not allowed Greek-Cypriots to return to the occupied northern part of the island.

The marchers were supported by hundreds of foreign women. In addition to Miss Mercouri, they were joined by Lady Amalia Fleming, Greek-born widow of the British discoverer of penicillin, and women from Canada, the United States and Europe. The wife of Egypt's President Anwar Sadat sent a message of support.

Similar marches were staged Sunday by about 7,000 Greek-Cypriot and British women in London, by an estimated 5,000 women in New York, and by about 10,000 in Athens.

Jail Guard Refuses To Return

TORONTO (CP) — Gary Dassy, key witness at the inquiry into brutality by guards at Toronto jail, said Monday that he would rather dig ditches in Sweden than return to Canada and testify further at the hearings.

Mr. Dassy, a former guard at the jail, said in a telephone interview from Strangnas, Sweden, that he is "flat broke and disillusioned" and he will stay in Europe until the inquiry pays him more than $12 a day in witness fees.

His allegations that a six-man squad of guards used violence to maintain order at the jail resulted in the inquiry being established. Since it began last November, he has appeared as a witness 10 times, outlining 21 cases of alleged brutality against prisoners.

Mr. Dassy now is travelling in Europe with his friend, Jane Mannerholm, a former nurse at the jail.

"If they want us that bad, they can pay us," he said. "I'm damn bitter at what they pulled—everyone is getting bloody rich off this but me."

An inquiry spokesmen said Monday that a bench warrant for Mr. Dassy might be issued and he could be charged with contempt of court.

"Let them issue a warrant," Mr. Dassy commented. "They can't do anything about it. I'm safe here in Sweden."

Stickle Says No Building Slowdown

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

City permits for construction of nearly $100,000 in new buildings have been issued so far for the month of April.

This compares with last year's April total of $2.3 million.

City building inspector Grant Stickle explained the apparent discrepancy saying one or two unusually large projects weighted last year's total.

Last April, Moira Secondary School undertook a $1.5-million addition project and a new city industry attributed another $500,00 to plant construction.

Compared to a total of 49 permits issued in the month last year, there have been 33 this month.

The largest permit issued this month has been for $60,000 for the construction of a medical building on Dundas St., east near Belleville General Hospital.

Only six permits have been issued for single family dwellings this month — but this is not a true indicator of single-family home construction in the city, said Mr. Stickle.

"Quite a number of building permits taken out last year are still in force for single family dwellings," said Mr. Stickle.

Builders are completing this construction before applying for more building permits, he said.

All in all "we're running a bit ahead," he said, reflecting on the month's building record.

Teachers Optimistic

Although negotiations have been continuing for two years on a new contract for Ontario's 5,500 community college teachers who have been without a contract since Sept. 1, 1973 and indications point to extended talks on the next contract, the mood at Loyalist College is one of optimism, says Paul Wall, teachers' local president here.

"Nobody is talking strike at this particular time," commented Mr. Wall Monday. "We're simply leaving all options open."

He remarked, "the mood is one of trust in the executive."

Wall Re-elected

Paul Wall has been re-elected president of the Loyalist College teachers' local of the community college academic division of the Civil Service Association of Ontario (CSAO). In fact, the entire local executive was re-elected in a recent vote. Mr. Wall, a former branch steward, begins his second term. Other officers nor mally serve two terms.

Expert Says Province Studying School Curriculum Improvements

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

The ministry of education is taking a serious look at sex role stereotypes as they apply to secondary school curriculum, says assistant director of curriculum development for the government Ian McHaffie.

Speaking to parents, teachers and students at Belleville Collegiate Institute Tuesday night Mr. McHaffie said "the ministry is trying to ask what does the school system say to girls?" He said some current textbooks portray a "very narrow range of what women can do in society."

Mr. McHaffie said the ministry believes "the school should reflect the reality of society and the way in which men and women take part. "We're all going to drop curriculum material which will break the stereotypes," he added.

The 40-year-old former principal also said the methods of counselling students, both male and female, are also being reviewed.

Mr. McHaffie predicted there would be significant change in this area of curriculum development in the next few years.

He also said that the ministry must be aware of the stereotypes for men in society. "Often the textbooks, literature and other learning materials have tended to stereotype of the male student," he added.

In other curriculum developments Mr. McHaffie said the ministry is currently reviewing the curriculum requirements and it is taking a close look at a "core curriculum" as has been suggested by Ontario's 34,000 secondary school teachers.

He said the ministry now is receiving conflicting information from the universities as to the capabilities of the high school graduate. He said the ministry is communicating the results of colleges and universities to arrive at conclusions.

"Never under estimate the belief in the minister," said Mr. McHaffie, who also suggested parents should put their views on paper and send it to the ministry of education. He told parents of a credit system, which allows a maximum of subject choice for the students and parents. Marks are under close scrutiny.

"Most agree that there should be a core compulsory subjects but few agree on what the subjects should be," he added.

Chain of Office

Chain of office was among articles Mayor Robin Jeffrey took along for a talk on civic affairs to youngsters at Queen Victoria Public School Tuesday. At least two in her audience had a working acquaintance with local governments . . . Shawn Meeks, (left) son of Ald. Stu Meeks, and Mary Ann Zegouras, daughter of Ald. George Zegouras.

Mayor Explains Civic Duty To Inquisitive Students

Mayor Robiin Jeffrey was briefly back in a familiar set ting Tuesday — a classroom.

But for the one-time home economics teacher — she instructed at Quinte Secondary School — the event was an official function, part of the current Education Week program.

The mayor left her city hall desk to spend an hour with Grade 7 and 7 students at Queen Victoria public school, explaining the functions of local government, answering curious youngsters on a stream of topics from a salary to the election process.

Some of her audience already had a working knowledge of civic operations.

Her listeners included the children at at least one policeman, a fireman, a city hall worker and two council kids — Shawn, the son of Ald. Stu Meeks and Mary Ann, daughter of Ald. George Zegouras.

Others were slightly more uncertain about the whole "How do you get your job?" civic business.

"How do you get your job?" asked one.

Piped up a classmate: "They go to school and everything . . ."

The mayor explained the electoral system, how important it was to get more Xs on your ballot- than your opponents.

Guesses on the mayor's salary ranged all the way down to $250 (the past pays $3,000, with close to another $3,000 in committee increments).

"Do you get holidays sometimes or do you work all day?" quizzed one student.

"Why do people take pictures at you?" queried another.

Mayor Jeffrey, who earlier had requested a reporter not to photograph her, only the children, admitted: "I get tired of looking at myself in the newspaper."

Among the articles Mayor Jeffrey brought with her was the mayor's chain of office — replaced in the 1940s after the original was mysteriously lost.

"What happens," mused one of her young listeners, "if they find the old chain? What will they do with this one?"

Then there was the youngster who watched Belleville's top civic official awhile and suddenly recollected Mayor Jeffrey's earlier, academic calling.

"My mom," she informed the mayor seriously, "says you taught her how to knit."

Club for Deaf Helps Bridge Social Gaps

By JIM SNELLE
Staff Reporter

The Quinte Club for the Deaf, formed last December, attempts to fill a social and community need in Belleville, not only among its deaf members but also with hearing people in the area.

President of the club, Ken Roberts, a deaf himself was "explaining" through interpreter, Louise Ford, the aims and organization of the club to members of the Rotarain Club Tuesday.

Mr. Roberts, a resident counsellor with retarded deaf children at Prince Edwards Heights in Picton, "told" club members through the use of sign language, "why the deaf was set up when he first noticed the limited social opportunities available to the deaf.

Working with Rev. Sidney Bates, this was done organizing social get-together night at Carmen Whitney's at which members could meet and socialize with other deaf people or with hearing people.

Right now, there are 26 members and an executive of five officers. Ken Roberts, president, Mrs. Fryer tells the story of Capt. John Meyers, one of Belleville's founding fathers, and his activities during the revolution in her book.

Exhibits Planned

May is bearing and speech month and the local committee is planning a three-day exhibition at the Quinte Mall May 8, 9 and 10.

The exhibits and displays will deal with the various devices deaf people use to lead normal lives. A demonstration of the telephone communications device (TTY) will also be given during the three days. Area Elks will sponsor an early detection of hearing problems exhibit.

A speech pathologist from Belleville General Hospital, Lily Sheng, will also take part in an exhibit on speech and hearing aids. Channel 11 in Kingston will conduct a series of interviews with hearing impaired people.

A spokesman from the hearing and speech committee members will distribute pamphlets and posters in various key locations in the city. The Quinte Club of The Deaf will be holding a dance May 24 at 12 at the Lions Club at Trenton.

The committee is also taking part in the Volunteer Information Start at the Four Seasons Sunday, April 27.

Attends Open House

Ian McHaffie, assistant director of curriculum development at the ministry of education at Toronto, was the guest speaker Tuesday night at the Belleville Collegiate Institute's Open House. He talked about curriculum problems in the secondary schools.

Author To Speak

Mary Beacock Fryer, author of Loyalist Spy, will speak to the Hastings County Historical Society this evening in the drawing room at Glanmers House at 8 p.m. on Cowboys Versus Blackbirds, about the activities of the British Secret Service during the American revolution. A Belleville resident, Mrs. Fryer tells the story of Capt. John Meyers, one of Belleville's founding fathers, and his activities during the revolution in her book.

Red Shield Campaign Begins Next Month

The Salvation Army's Red Shield campaign will be officially launched in Belleville Friday, May 2, with a brief ceremony in front of city hall.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey and the Salvation Army band will take part in the proceedings which start at 12.15 p.m.

The residential blitz, will take place Monday, May 5. Target this year is $14,000 compared to last year's $13, 000.

Capt. Robert Sloude, corps officer with the Salvation Army, said, "Last year we went over the top and we are very optimistic for this year as well all signs point to an indication that we do well."

Those canvassers during the residential blitz and wishing to deliver their mail in donations to Box 880, Belleville or Box 1000 in the campaign headquarters at 188 Victoria Ave.

Grades Criticized

The grading system in schools should be abolished, says Prof. Daniel N. Paier of the University of Michigan. He told area educators last week, "I can see no reason for it whatsoever. I think it's a abomination. I think I can describe what good work is to a student without assigning it with an A, B or C grade."

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance in the 24-hour period ending 8 a.m. today: Tuesday, April 22, 2:06 p.m. . grass fire, area of Harvest Cres., and Cascade Blvd., little damage.

Wednesday, April 23, 2:15 a.m. . Quinte Hotel, malfunction of alarm.

Museum Seeks Background On Mysterious Artist

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Is there a George Ackermann in your life? If so, Marten Lewis, curator of Hastings County Museum, would like to hear from you.

George Ackermann, a painter active from 1866-77, depicted views of small country towns in eastern Ontario including views of interest and activity in Hastings and Prince Edward counties.

Allegedly residing in Roslin, he worked at the Ontario in situation for the Deaf and Dumb in Belleville from 1870-77, teaching mechanical drawing to male student and watercolor painting to girls.

Mr. Lewis says this is about all that is known of Ackermann and the museum gleaned much of the information while seeking owners of his paintings, who would loan them to the museum for the recent exhibit in February and March.

But something new on Ackermann came to Mr. Lewis' attention from Mary Greig of 96 St. Charles St. in Belleville who showed him a copy of Canadian Antiques Collector magazine, Prince Edward Island centenary issue, Vol. 8, No. 1.

An enclosed article entitled Garden in Gulph written by Margaret Matthew features a photo probably of an aged Ackermann drawing, circa 1870, of Holman Garden in Summerside, PEI and also mentions the drawing.

However, as far as it is known, Ackermann did not reside in or visit PEI, says Mr. Lewis. And in the article, Ackermann is spelled with one "n."

But he is certain the drawing is one of George Ackermann's.

"The omission of the second 'n' occurs very often," he points out.

The drawing is part in the PEI Heritage Foundation collection and Mr. Lewis says he will inquire if it for information and attempt to secure a photograph of it.

City Offers More Gardening Plots

The demand for municipal food-growing plots has spiralled in Belleville in recent weeks.

After a slow start applications for the original 26 plots behind Albert College between Sidney and Wellington streets, came with a rush.

The city's parks department, which developed the project on land made available by the college, then decided to lease the remainder of the 2.5acre site — making a total of 66 garden plots. Demand for the extra allotments also has been steady.

To date, reports Gene Gemmell, the department's horticulturist, a total of 46 plots have been rented — leaving 20 still available.

Originally, the project was designed mainly for apartment dwellers and some citizens. Mr. Gemmell says many of the later applicants have been homeowners whose backyards are unsuitable for growing — either because of children or soil conditions. These, he believes, were holding back applications until it appeared the original intent of the project had drawn sufficient applicants.

TTY Track

Ground for the new plots will be broken as soon as soil conditions permit, he says.

No deadline has yet been set for applications but requests should be filed with the department as soon as possible.

Fifty-byTwenty-feet plots are leased for $15.

One allotment has been taken by the Belleville Garden Club which intends donating the vegetables produced to the handicapped adults in th civ

Consumers Join Forces to Fight Inflation

Buying in quantity is the secret of Matrix Company — a consumer vehicle which gives dollar power to the individual.

Vernon Molloy, philosophy-psychology student-cum in-mer, has started the company, "bringing together consumers planning like purchases to give them group buying power."

In much the same fashion a company reduces unit price by purchasing in quantity, Matrix Company is looking to bring consumers together for their purchases.

Currently, Mr. Molloy has a published work in James Teats called The Blueprint for Sane Economics which deals principally with the theory of his consumer company. The book is one section of a larger work which he is still writing titled the Recipe for Thanksgiving.

"In my books I'm searching to give the consumer more voice in the prices he is paying," said Mr. Molloy.

Matrix Company emerged from the writing of the major work and has been operating out of a June St. office since the start of February.

Already about 200 Belleville and area families are registered with the company.

Group buying is only one of three areas in which the company lends a helping hand.

Subscribers submit items they have for sale in the fashion to newspaper want ads — in the event other subscribers are interested in buying.

The third area deals with the individual talents of the subscriber families.

A company brochure asks potential subscribers to outline any talents they have that may be useful to other subscribers such as carpentry or painting.

"I know the company would be difficult to establish but once the people in it are sold, they will promote the idea among their friends," said Mr. Molloy.

"The company is a non-profit organization — it was never designed to make a profit," he said.

For more information about Matrix Company call 962-5821.

Was George in PEI?

Did George Ackerman ever paint in Prince Edward Island? Marten Lewis, curator at Hastings County Museum, is going to find out. He holds here an edition of the PEI centenary issue of Canadian Antiques Collector which includes a photo reproduction of an alleged Ackerman drawing depicting a Summerside scene. As far as is known, Ackerman, active the Quinte area from 1866-77 did not reside in PEI, says Mr. Lewis. A collection of his paintings was on display recently at the museum.

Deny Rideau Park Pollution Threat

PERTH, Ont. (CP) — Ontario's proposed development of 3,900-acre Murphy's Point Provincial Park, 14 miles south of Perth on Big Rideau Lake, has drawn criticism as adding to pollution problems on the lake.

But ministry of natural resources officials, asking the public for ideas on how to develop the park, said their plans won't result in pollution of the surrounding waterways.

The park, which includes 25 miles of shoreline, will undergo a $1.5-million development as a low intensity use, natural environment park rather than as a recreation park, they said.

"Surveys of the site indicate it is not suitable for heavy public traffic," said Wm Vonk, Lanark district manager for the ministry.

"Soils are extremely shallow and several natural features, including the old mica mines, virgin white-pine forest land, the blue heron nesting site and a swamp area, need protection from heavy use."

"Any possible pollution in the Rideau from the park would be minimized by above-standard sanitary facilities," said Mr. Vonk. "If boat traffic is allowed to tie up, facilities would be provided and the dumping of holding tanks in the lake strictly prohibited."

The government has been accused of adopting a double standard by going ahead with its park project while holding up cottage development on Big Rideau Lake, which it says is already overdeveloped.

Decommissioned

The St Laurent was the first Canadian warship built since the Second World War and the first-ever Canadian-designed destroyer. The decommissioned ship now sits at a berth in Halifax waiting for her final voyage — a tow behind a tug to a scrap-yard where she will be broken up. (CP Photo)

Once-cheered Destroyer Awaits Final Voyage

HALIFAX (CP) — There is not much left for the St. Laurent to think about but the glamor of 17 years ago.

That's when she sailed proudly into Halifax, the centre of a massive welcoming.

Then she was the first Canadian warship built since the Second World War. She was also the first-ever Canadian-designed destroyer and her rounded bow became a Canadian navy trademark.

Now she's tied up at a berth in the dockyard here waiting for her final voyage—a tow to the breaker's yard.

But parts of her will live on for many years in other destroyers of the Canadian navy as she is being stripped of most of her equipment which will be reconditioned for use in the other ships.

Cmdr. Rex Guy, Queen's harbormaster in Halifax, is in charge of stripping the St. Laurent. She was first one of four warships that became the centre of controversy after the federal government decided they were surplus to Canadian needs.

Attempts to sell or rent the ships found no takers and finally Ottawa decided to follow the recommendations of the Canadian Armed Forces to scrap the St. Laurent and put the other three in reserve.

They are St. Croix, Chaudiere and Columbia—all sister ships of St. Laurent. She was launched in 1951 and the other three in 1956-57.

St. Croix is also in Halifax where she is being kept as a training ship while the other two are on the West Coast.

Walking the darkened passageways of St. Laurent is a gloomy experience for anyone who has seen the insides of an ex-service destroyer. Little equipment is left and few compartments have light or heat.

Cmdr. Guy said: "We started with a 30-page list of equipment and fittings we wanted from her. When we have everything out, then we'll go over her for another close check to see if there is anything else we might need.

"What we've taken out would fill a fair-sized warehouse. We have several tons of gear ranging from telephones to radar sets, from air conditioners to auxiliary engines."

Also gone into the stores system are the radios, the gunnery-control network and anything else that might be reusable. A pack rat could learn something from the navy when it comes to leaving little behind.

From the jetty, the ship looks as though she had been hit by a hurricane. Her mast was stripped of radar antennas, the forward gun replacement removed and pieces of canvas, scrap wood and metal and broken railings dotted the decks.

But back on Nov. 6, 1955, when St. Laurent arrived in Halifax, navy officials were bursting with pride as they showed a civic and press party around the ship. They said she was a world leader and already attracting attention from the U.S. and British navies.

Her skipper then was Cmdr. Robert Timbrell who told reporters she exceeded expectations in trials in the St. Lawrence River while en route from her builder, Canadian Vickers in Montreal.

When he retired in 1973 as commander of Maritime Command, the navy's top position, Rear-Admiral Timbrell said one of his disappointments was that he was unable to get St. Laurent was the first of 20 destroyers built in Canada for the navy using the rounded bow designed to aid in seakeeping in the event of a nuclear attack. Four bigger destroyers with conventional hulls have been built in the last few years.

Cmdr. Guy said the St. Laurent-style ships were significant as they were the first of Canadian design and Canadian construction."

Cmdr. Guy, who was skipper of one of them, the Fraser, said, "They were good sea ships. That rounded bow gave them good sea-keeping quality. We also learned a lot from them which paid off when the new destroyers were designed."

He also is in charge of St. Croix which is tied up to the Cape Scott, a decommissioned supply ship which the navy uses for much of its training. Like Columbia and Chaudiere, St. Croix is supposed to be kept in a state of readiness to permit active-duty status in 30 days.

Meanwhile, with the help of Lieut. Cyr Gosse, who is directly in charge of her, St. Croix is becoming a valuable addition to the Fleet Training School in Halifax through which all navy recruits pass.

Lieut. Gosse, who said he would love to see St. Croix ordered ready for sea duty, uses training sessions on St. Croix for needed maintenance.

Small Businesses Doomed by Success

Few Canadians know the story of Seccombe House Ltd., the small but vigorous family publishing firm that was taken over four years ago by Southam Press Ltd.

It began in 1911 with a single publication, Oral Health, put together by the late Wallace Seccombe, an innovator who first introduced the practice of controlled circulation, that is free distribution of a publication to a select-interest group, in this case doctors.

His two sons, Mack and William, took over the business when their father died in 1936 and also took numerous bold steps, including publishing a French edition of Modern Medicine in Canada, long before the present-day clamor over the preservation of French-Canadian culture.

Now, William Seccombe has written a book about the rise and fall of Seccombe House, titled A Private Concern. The book is a lament about the seeming demise of the small businessman in Canada. The author says Seccombe House disappeared because it was too successful and valuable to resist the pull of giant publishers like Southam's. The demise is also blamed on ment interference in the free market interference in free enterprise system.

"Why are so many private businesses selling out?" the author asks in the final pages of his book. "They were just too successful to stand the impact of inheritance taxes."

A Private Concern, by William Seccombe; 256 pages; $12; Nelson Foster and Scott.

"PORTION CONTROL" HELPS MEALTIME SAVINGS

Now as never before, it's important to shop with a number of savings in mind - and to serve only amounts that you are sure the family will eat.

While convenience foods are usually more expensive than those made from scratch, they can be an economical buy because you know there's no waste, and can tell in advance exactly how many servings you'll get from a package. If you cook from scratch, buy with serving portions in mind, and use recipes scaled directly to your family's size. Or if the recipe you select serves six and you have a family of only three, plan ahead for using the leftovers.

Serve portions slightly smaller than you expect will be eaten. It's much better to offer seconds than to have to put uneaten food in the garbage!

Supreme Court Justices Considered Bilingual

OTTAWA (CP) — When the Supreme Court of Canada takes its noon lunch break, most of the nine judges walk to uptown hotels or private clubs for their meal.

An exception is Mr. Justice Brian Dickson of Manitoba. His meal hour is set aside for his private French lesson and a few sandwiches.

A few years ago members of the Quebec bar grumbled about a bilingual Supreme Court. To argue in French was a waste of time, some Quebec lawyers said. But now it is generally agreed that most of the court is bilingual.

The three Quebec judges—Louis-Philippe Pigeon, Jean Beetz and Louis-Philippe de Grandpre—are obviously at home in both French and English. Chief Justice Bora Laskin, among other judges, appears comfortable speaking both languages.

To meet requirements of the Official Languages Act, a translation system was installed in the Supreme Court. But it has been used only a handful of times. The court takes the position it is bilingual and has no need of translation.

The rule now is that translation is provided only if a lawyer asks for it. The most recent use of the translation system came last October when lawyers for shortlosist Dr. Henry Morgentaler requested that argument in French be translated into English.

That later proved to be an embarrassment for the court. French language reporters complained that there was no translation of the English arguments.

Told of the complaints, Chief Justice Laskin agreed that perhaps in the future reporters covering important appeals might also have the right to request translation.

This is in line with the wishes of Chief Justice that the press be encouraged to pay more attention to court proceedings.

With recent changes in the Supreme Court Act approved by Parliament it is likely that more reporters will be covering the court.

The changes do away with automatic court appeals involving $10,000 or more. Rarely did such appeals have much public interest or deal with important legal questions.

Before the changes became law last January, more than 200 such appeals remained for the court to hear. They will clutter up the docket for at least another two years.

From now on any person wishing to appeal a decision of lower courts must first convince the Supreme Court that it involves an important question. It is the view of the government that the judges in future should concern themselves only with weighty constitutional or legal principles and have more time to ponder their decisions.

Both the government and the bench have rejected suggestions that the Canadian court follow the example of the United States Supreme Court and consider only written briefs when motions for leave to appeal come before it.

The U.S. court rejects thousands of such motions every year in the privacy of its conference room.

The Canadian court also rejected time limits for motions and appeals. In the United States each side is limited to 15 minutes of argument.

In the Supreme Court of Canada oral arguments can continue for days and many times inexperienced lawyers will repeat their arguments. Chief Justice Laskin in recent interviews said he is prepared to run such risks for the benefit of the free and easy conversational debate that is a feature of most Supreme Court appeals.

There is a 15-minute time limit on motions but rarely is it enforced. Judges may remind lawyers of the time limit but it is often coupled with the remark that the court is willing to hear all of the arguments a lawyer may have.

With the personal appeal of Chief Justice Laskin for improved press coverage of the court and with law changes ensuring that only important cases be heard by the judges, Canadians are almost sure to become more aware of the vital role played by the Supreme Court.

Chief Justice

Chief Justice Bora Laskin believes that because of the important role played by the Supreme Court of Canada, Canadians should be more aware of what it is doing. Judge Laskin is inclined to blame the press for the lack of understanding and interest in the court. (CP Photo)

'Free' Junkets Can Cost Plenty

EDMONTON (CP)—You need at least $3,000 in your pocket to go on a "free junket" to Las Vegas, says Mike Knicky, a Las Vegas booking agent.

"You have to gamble with that amount to be invited back. It doesn't mean you have to lose it . . . but because the hotel is paying for the trip, they want a shot at your money."

Under free-junket arrangements, the hotel pays for air fare, accommodation, show privileges, drinks and food, said Mr. Knicky.

Three thousand dollars is the minimum, he added. "There's the Arabs who come with a million and eight girls to shoot the dice for them. They're generally bad gamblers."

But most of his clients are businessmen who come to the flashy Nevada casinos hoping to win and ready to lose.

"The fellows we take on junkets can afford it; they're good business people," said Mr. Knicky.

Also available are standard three-day, four-night packages that include accommodation, air fare, a couple of shows and extras provided by the hotel. These cost between $180 and $200.

More than three-fourths of Las Vegas travellers are not going on junkets, says Ted Langlee-Adams, city manager for an airline which flies to the city. About 4,000 people fly every year from Edmonton to "Island Iowa with its large neon lights and crash of cash registers so loud you can hardly hear yourself think."

However, four times that many people are going to Hawaii, he added.

Mr. Knicky said most of the "heavies," or people who take junkets, are men "because very few women would have the guts to gamble that way."

"We get men from 21 to 80—the rich retired, businessmen, drug pushers and jerks on the street who knock somebody down for money.

"In addition, a guy who wins a few thousand at the horse track or cards will almost invariably call us to get a booking to Las Vegas while he's on a winning streak."

Some are "hi-rollers," who put down $100 or even $1,000 at a time, he said.

"Hi-rollers are almost always easy-going guys who figure they can lose today and always win tomorrow, or win today and possibly lose tomorrow. They eat really well and take time off for the girls. A hi-roller likes entertaining people and being entertained."

One hi-roller, who asked not to be identified, said he consistently won "a few hundred dollars."

"But I go because it's something to do in the long winter months. You can go there and change your personality, whether you go for the shows or the gambling. You can relax, tip $10, do things you don't have."

Others aren't so lucky. Victor Mah, owner of a Chinese restaurant in Edmonton, said he went to Las Vegas "a couple of times last year and lost a few hundred dollars on blackjack—for fun."

"I win a while and then start to bet heavily and lose. In fact, I don't know anybody who wins."

Monique Bosco's Book Is Faithfully Translated

By PIERRETTE PERTH
The Canadian Press

Lot's Wife, a translation of Monique Bosco's La Femme de Lot, published in 1970, seems to be largely autobiographical.

Written in the first person singular, it relates the struggle of a woman who has just been abandoned by her lover at 50 years. Helene, just turned 40, decides to go to Venice to relive her past life, tell it in writing and then put an end to it.

Before she terminates her existence, she wants to "look back, like Lot's wife, who became a pillar of salt."

She wants to recapture her European childhood, her first years in Canada where, although she is half-Jewish, she was educated in a convent.

After her parents' death in an automobile accident Helene, who received the New "like a message of unpardonable betrayal," goes back to school and then to university, where she tries desperately to "liberate" herself.

The able translation by John Glassco, one of Canada's most noted poets, faithfully recaptures not only the feelings expressed in the book but the rhythm and color of the French language.

Lot's Wife, by MONIQUE Bosco, translated by John Glassco; 169 pages; $7.95; McClelland and Stewart.

Lives of Canadians Molded By Supreme Court Decisions

OTTAWA (CP) — Only lawyers and judges are likely to nod wisely when they hear the names of farm hand John Mesow of Leoth, Ont., university student Gabriel Cole of Montreal, and businessman R. G. Linton of Fort Nelson, B.C.

Otherwise, ordinary Canadians, their names are titles of appeals decided by the Supreme Court of Canada in the recent past. Incidents in their lives will live forever in the nation's law books and become shorthand for legal principles.

Mr. Mesow, for example, stands for the principle that tavern keepers have a duty to see that their intoxicated customers get home safely.

When quoted in the courts, Mr. Cole stands for the principle that provincial highway departments in general have no duty to salt or sand unsafe roads.

Telegraph officials may have a warm feeling when they hear the Linton name cited in court. In the Linton case the Supreme Court decided that Canadians can't take legal action against the telegraph companies for late delivery of telegrams.

As Chief Justice Bora Laskin put it in an interview, it is this "drip, drip, drip" of Supreme Court decisions that affects the lives of Canadians everywhere.

Each decision takes its place in case records and with the common law and parliamentary statutes, helps make up the whole of Canadian law.

The nine-man court under the chief justice sits in a tiny courtroom—seating capacity 36—for about 140 days a year to make final decisions on a wide variety of cases.

With few exceptions, the 150-or-so cases they hear every year attract little public attention.

While the public galleries of the House of Commons fill up regularly for the daily question period, or a budget speech or an important debate, the 10 seats in the Supreme Court are mostly vacant as the keenest legal minds in the country clash in arguments that may change the law of the land.

With the possible exception of Chief Justice Laskin, members of the Supreme Court can walk into almost any public place across the country with scant possibility of being recognized.

Yet, in the pecking order of Ottawa, the chief justice ranks as the third most prominent Canadian behind Governor-General Jules Leger and Prime Minister Trudeau.

The Supreme Court itself is second in importance only to the Houses of Parliament.

This tendency of Canadians to ignore the Supreme Court did not faze former chief justice John Cartwright, who once described the high court as "the silent service."

But Chief Justice Laskin, whose appointment in itself raised a controversy and made front-page news, has different ideas. He believes that because of the important role played by the court Canadians should be more aware of what it is doing.

Judge Laskin is inclined to blame the press for the lack of understanding and interest in the court. In his first speech as chief justice he called for better reporting of its activities.

"What is missing is in-depth amazement," he said. "Unless the press develops or engages reporters that can paint in the background of important cases, or see them as part of an evolutionary process, and explain this in their stories or a review column, the coverage is bound to be episodic and lack continuity."

There is evidence that the parliamentary press gallery is taking those words to heart. Reporters have sought a better understanding of what makes the court tick. Court officials are trying to make court procedure more understandable to reporters.

Supreme Court of Canada

Canadians pay scant attention to the debate of the nine men on the bench of the Supreme Court of Canada, the final court of appeal. Photo shows exterior view of court where the nine men under the chief justice sit for about 140 days a year to make fine decisions on a wide variety of cases. (CP Photo)

Bill of Rights vs. Parliament

When Joe Drybones Got Loaded He Really Split Supreme Court

OTTAWA (CP) — Most people agree that taverns are ideal breeding grounds for arguments. So perhaps it isn't surprising that the greatest debate over the law-making role of the Supreme Court of Canada should have started in a colorful drinking spot called the Old Stope in Yellowknife, N.W.T.

That favorite haunt of serious drinkers has since burned down, but it still was in its heyday one night in the mid-1960s when Joe Drybones, a Dog Rib Indian, took aboard too much beer. He was promptly fined $10 for being drunk off a reserve, contrary to the Indian Act.

Mr. Drybones probably was happy to let matter go at that. But Mr. Justice William Morrow of the territorial Supreme Court saw the case as a perfect example of how the Canadian Bill of Rights should be applied.

To begin with, there are no reserves in the Northwest Territories where an Indian may satisfy his thirst.

More important, from a legal point of view, the liquor sections of the Indian Act left Indians open to harsher jail sentences and fines than the territorial liquor laws that applied to other northerners.

Such discrimination appeared to be in conflict with the Canadian Bill of Rights.

For almost 10 years Canadian courts ignored the Bill of Rights. But in 1970 in a landmark decision the Supreme Court applied the law and ruled that liquor sections of the Indian Act should be erased because they denied Indians equality before the law.

To many conservative legal minds the Supreme Court had seized a new weapon to strike down laws passed by Parliament.

In the past the high court judged the validity of laws only on whether Parliament or the provincial governments had exceeded their authority under the British North America Act, this country's constitution.

Now, argued the conservatives, an additional test was to be added—whether laws infringed on the rights and freedoms enumerated in the Bill of Rights.

The Bill of Rights plainly stated that every law of Canada, passed before or after the Bill of Rights, must conform to it unless Parliament stated this was not to be the case.

One side argued that the Canadian Supreme Court now should follow the example of the United States Supreme Court and strike down laws that infringed on civil liberties.

The other side argued that the American court was guided by freedoms guaranteed under the U.S. constitution. The Canadian Bill of Rights, on the other hand, was just another act of Parliament.

In the 1970s the two points of view were expressed by the then head of the Canadian Bar Association, Arthur Pattillo, and Toronto law professor Sidney Peck.

Said Mr. Peck: "It now is open to the court to hold that an act which Parliament is clearly entitled to pass . . . is invalid if it infringes on a human right or fundamental freedom guaranteed by the Bill of Rights."

Replied Mr. Pattillo: "When I read of persons suggesting that the role this court should play in constitutional cases should be similar to the role which the Supreme Court of the United States plays, I become greatly concerned.

"Surely this is the role to be performed only by the legislatures and Parliament."

Nowhere, it seems, has the debate been more intense than in the conference rooms of the Supreme Court of Canada itself.

Chief Justice Bora Laskin went so far in one appeal as to put the Bill of Rights almost on the same footing as the British North America Act, a statement that did not find favor with seven of the nine judges of the time.

The chief justice indeed has been among the few dissenting voices in all of the constitutional cases in which the Bill of Rights has been argued.

Judge Laskin would disallow any evidence gathered by police that infringes the rights of citizens. But the court majority has held to the Canadian common law, which says evidence, no matter how gained, is admissible in court at the discretion of the trial judge.

Judge Laskin, in another celebrated case, would allow Indian women who marry non-Indians to retain their Indian status as do Indian men. The court majority decided otherwise.

In short, it would appear that most of the present court judges are content to bow to the superiority of Parliament.

"Any federal law that infringes on freedoms set out in the Bill of Rights must be disallowed, said former chief justice John Cartwright shortly after his retirement.

But most court observers agree that the weapon of the Bill of Rights will not be used, at least by the present court, to challenge laws passed by Parliament.

It's Business As Usual At the Quinte Raceway

Quinte Exhibition Raceway (QER) operated by the Belleville Agricultural Society, has hung out the "business as usual" sign, says raceway manager E. C. (Ev) Gowsell.

Earlier, it was reported that the local track may be forced to cease operation since rules and regulations laid down by those with the final say in such matters, decreed the raceway would be jumped from C class to B.

The danger of the harness racing fraternity losing its favorite Friday night pastime in Belleville is over.

May 2 is the date for the first of the 30-odd seasons at QER. And area enthusiasts, fans and participants alike, having heaved an audible sigh of relief are waiting patiently for the announcer's "The horses are at the post".

Explaining that no official decision on the track's rating has been handed down as yet, Gowsell says facilities at the raceway will be renovated regardless.

Attendance at QER meets averages about 700 per race night.

The continued operation of the track means more than a break for these racing buffs; the drivers and the owners.

It's good news for track employees. QER provided employment for approximately 70 persons each racing night in 1974.

And horsemen from this area took a good share of the $67,367 paid in purses.

One of the Agricultural Society's prime interests is in providing a community service. It will continue to do just that.

5 Gymnasts Headed for OFSSA

When the Ontario Federation of School Athletic Associations (OFSAA) girls gymnastics championships take place on Saturday at York University, Toronto, the Bay of Quinte area will be well represented.

Of 15 girls travelling to the event from the central Ontario region, five are from this district.

Belleville Collegiate's (BCI) Wendy Donovan, Holly White and Chris Yeotes and Moira's Leslie Claney and Michele Harrison will be the locals aiming for top spots in their respective events.

Both Donovan and White will be making their third trips to the OFSAA championships.

"I think they'll do much better than last year," said BCI coach, Sue Davie, "they did well last year, but this time they have a lot more poise."

"A lot of the girl's success has to do with how well they can stand up under pressure," added the coach, "they'll be better prepared psychologically this year. When you think of 1200 people watching you, you have to feel some kind of pressure."

Donovan, a 16-year-old Grade 12 student, will compete in senior all-round. (This means she has to do all four of the female gymnastic events — floor, balance beam, uneven bars and vault.) She qualified for senior all-round by racking up second place finishes in the beam, floor and vault at the senior elite level during the Central Ontario championships. She was third in uneven bars.

White will compete in senior vault and floor. Also a Grade 12 student, the 17-year-old Miss White, earned a first in floor and vault while taking second place in the uneven bars and fourth in beam at the senior level of Central Ontario.

Yeotes, 15-year-old, is making her first appearance in all-Ontario championships. She will present herself at the novice level on the balance beam.

Claney will compete in intermediate floor and beam and Harrison in novice bars. Both are making their first appearances at OFSAA.

Chris Yeotes goes through her program on the balance beam at Belleville Collegiate's gym, Tuesday night. Yeotes, 15 years old, is warming up for the Ontario Federation School Athletic Association's gymnastic championships on Saturday. This is Yeotes's first time at the Ontario competition. She is a novice.

John Sheppard A Young Man On the Move

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

While Wally Rodgers was clipping off an incredible pace to win the 1975 Boston Marathon, Belleville's John Sheppard was setting marks of his own. They won't go down in the annual books as Rodgers' 2:09:55 finishing time did, but they are points from which the 18-year-old Quinte Secondary School student can build.

John aimed to finish the gruelling 26-mile, 385-yard run in under three hours. He knew in order for the right people to notice his running ability he would have to finish in the top 500. Therefore a time of under three hours was vital.

When he crossed the line time was 2:37:18. 15 minutes and eight seconds faster than his mark last year.

"I was moving right out," said Sheppard, "I was really relaxed all the way."

"I had a very strong finish," he added, "all the people lined up along the streets were cheering me on near the finish line and I sprinted the last quarter-mile."

John was the youngest competitor from Canada to complete the distance and, while he wasn't sure what his future in running was before he travelled to Boston, he now knows what his goals will be.

"I've decided to concentrate on long distance," said the 130-pound marathoner.

Before Boston, John was torn between long-distance and the 1,500 and 3,000 meters in track.

"I'm still going to run the 3,000 metre," he added, "but my running programs will be centered around long distances."

With the Bay of Quinte championships in three weeks, John has to concentrate on speed for a short time in order to qualify for the Central Ontario Secondary School Athletic Association (COSSAA) championships. The qualifying time for COSSAA 3,000 metres is 8:52. His present time is 9:15.

"I'll have to be careful and not deviate too much from my long distance training program," said Sheppard, "and at the same time I'll have to concentrate on speed. Now two are going to be pretty hard to mix."

"I'll probably have to work on my track in the afternoon and my distance in the morning and at night," he said.

Even though John runs approximately 100 miles a week (about two-thirds a day) he learned that he will have to increase that amount.

"I was talking to Ron Hill (a Canadian who finished fifth at Boston)," said Sheppard, "and he thinks I should run about 125 a week and gradually increase on that."

John's current plans, besides trying to qualify in the 3,000 metres, include the Ken Colling Road Race, a four-mile run through Belleville the week before Boston. He won it last year and the Ontario marathon, a 26-mile run in Oshawa, May 11.

"I've really had a lot of support along the way," said John, "everyone has been just great."

He feels most grateful to his coach at Quinte; Mike Hall, Bob Saxby, his sponsor at McDonald's Family Restaurant, the Belleville Optimist Parliament. Saxby and the parliament covered his expenses.

"I knew I had a lot of work to do," she said, "I buckled right down and got right into it."

"The girls I had to work with at the time were very helpful," she said, "I didn't know very much about gymnastics at the time and neither did they. We sort of learned together."

Now 30 years old, Sue had never seen or deeply involved with gymnastics before coming to BCI. She had spent two years as a phys-ed teacher at other secondary schools, but in those years had concentrated on field hockey and track — far cry from the grace and undaunted physical coordination necessary to the sport of athletics.

"It's a lot of work," said Mrs. Davie, "it takes a lot of inner desire for the girls to reach a level of excellence."

"We are more like a family than anything else," she smiled, "we argue and we fight, but we laugh together too. And when someone reaches a new high, like doing something for the first time, we all experience the feeling."

Sue says she feels that a tradition of winning has really helped her program.

"I don't work with the menbers of her team after teaching all day. She even goes so far as to develop individual training programs for each of those girls involved with that sport at school.

"I have rather an extensive background in classical music," explained Mrs. Davie, "so I can understand the music and dance programs a little better than the girls can."

Sue does it take to be a winner? Unlimited dedication, boundless enthusiasm, understanding, the ability to communicate and, despite the yes, for floor exercises it doesn't hurt to have a little soul, either.

Coach Makes Hard Work Pay

What does it take to be a winner? If the question were answered at noon as it was asked there'd be many a happy coach around town.

One coach though, appears to have come up with an answer to the mind-boggling querie without even trying.

"I put in a lot of extra hours," says Sue Davie, "but I wouldn't have it any other way."

There's the answer. Mrs. Davie works (no disrespect meant) her butt off with the young prodigies. She's sincere about what she does, and she makes a point of knowing what, she's doing so that her girls know what they're doing.

The proof of her homespun attitudes are in the results. Sue has been coach of the Belleville Collegiate (BCI) girls' gymnastics squad for the last five years. While modestly, but proudly displays for her endeavors, are five Bay of Quinte Secondary School Athletic Association championships and four Central Ontario Secondary School Athletic Association (COSSAA) championships.

When Sue first came to BCI there wasn't much of a gymnastics program — at least the existing program wasn't very competitive.

"I knew I had a lot of work to do," she said, "so I buckled right down and got right into it."

"The girls I had to work with at the time were very helpful," she said, "I didn't know very much about gymnastics at the time and neither did they. We sort of learned together."

Sue says she feels that a tradition of winning has really helped her program.

"I don't always someone for the girls to look up to," she explained. "The novices look up the level that the seniors have reached and aim for points beyond that level."

Many coaches aren't as dedicated as Sue. The Oak Hills resident stays until 10 or 10.30 p.m. during the gymnastics season. She works with the members of her team after teaching all day. She even goes so far as to develop individual training programs for each of those girls involved with that sport at school.

"I have rather an extensive background in classical music," explained Mrs. Davie, "so I can understand the music and dance programs a little better than the girls can."

Holly White, a Grade 12 student at Belleville Collegiate, goes through one of her aerials while working out Tuesday night. The jump is incorporated into a program which she will present at the Ontario Federation of School Athletic Associations' gymnastics championship at York University, Saturday. She will also be competing in the senior vault.

Stubborn Canucks Surrender

Habs, Sabres to Meet; Islanders Hanging On

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fifth-place Montreal and Buffalo Sabres begin their Stanley Cup semi-final match Sunday while New York Islanders are stubbornly standing in the way of Philadelphia Flyers' aspirations for the other semi-final berth.

Montreal advanced Tuesday night with a 5-4 overtime victory over Vancouver Canucks winning that National Hockey League quarter-final series 4-1.

The Sabres also won their quarter-final 4-0 with a 5-1 victory over Chicago Black Hawks. The Sabres and the Canadians will open the semi-finals on Buffalo ice.

At Pittsburgh, the Penguins' series lead was reduced to 3-2 when the Islanders, who lost the first three games, beat Pittsburgh 6-2. The next game is at Uniondale, N.Y., Thursday.

The winner of that quarter-final goes against the defending champion Philadelphia Flyers, who are reeling after eliminating Toronto Maple Leafs in four games.

Montreal coach Scotty Bowman admitted his club could be the underdog in the series when he said: "Well, we only had a tie in five games against them this year."

Guy Lafleur, with a shot deflected by Vancouver defenceman Dennis Kearns, got the winning goal at 17:06 of the first overtime period at Montreal.

But the Canadiens had to stage a furious rally against the Canucks who had won the second game of the series on Montreal ice. The Canucks went ahead 1-0 in the first period, 3-2 in the second period and extended the margin to 4-3 early in the third.

Peter Mahovlich's second goal of the game and a score by Guy Lapointe tied it up midway in the third period.

Lafleur's winning shot at first appeared to have been deflected by team-mate Yvan Cournoyer but Cournoyer disclaimed credit for the goal.

Kearns, who was standing near the corner of the crease when Lafleur's shot bounced off him and past Canucks' goalie Gary Smith, left the ice without shaking hands with the Montreal players and was not available for comment after the game.

At Buffalo, Pit Martin gave the Hawks a 1-0 lead in the first period but Craig Ramsays second-period score tied it up. Rene Robert's goal early in the third period broke the tie and Jim Lorentz clinched the win with a goal less than five minutes from the end.

The Hawks had only 14 shots at the Buffalo nets, guarded by their former team-mate, Gerry Desjardins. Hawks goalie Tony Esposito faced 35 shots.

There was a lopsided score in the shots on goal at Pittsburgh as well, but there the losers had the advantage. The Penguins outshot the Islanders 38-19 but it was New York that had a 2-0 lead on first-period goals by Billy Harris and Ralph Stewart. The Islanders held a 3-1 margin after two periods before Lowell MacDonald scored for the Penguins with less than three minutes remaining. The Penguins pulled goalie Gary Inness in a last-minute attempt to tie game but Jude Drouin scored into the empty Pittsburgh net.

Garrett's Effort Wasted

Saints Drop Opener

QUEBEC (CP) — Coach Harry Neale of Minnesota Fighting Saints figures that if they are to beat Quebec Nordiques his charges will have to put out a better effort than they did Tuesday night.

The Saints dropped a 4-1 decision to the Nordiques and fell behind 1-0 in their World Hockey Association best-of-seven semi-final series.

"If we don't show more enthusiasm Thursday night, this is going to be a short series," Neale said.

Despite Neale's disappointment in his team's performance, the Saints trailed 1-0 until the third period was half over.

Stellar goaltending by John Garrett, who stopped 31 of 32 shots directed his way in the first two periods, kept the Nordiques at bay.

Only Jeannot Gilbert managed to beat Garrett with a 15-footer at 15:21 of the first period.

But the Nordiques scored two goals 32 seconds apart near the mid-way point in the final period to nail the game away.

Marlies Two Up

HAMILTON (CP) — Four unanswered third-period goals enabled Toronto Marlboros to defeat Hamilton Fincups 7-4 Tuesday in the second game of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A finals.

The Marlboros lead the eight-point series 4-0 with the third game scheduled Thursday at Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto.

The lapse ended the Fincups' 18-game undefeated streak on home ice.

John Smrke and Mark Napier each scored two goals for the Marlboros, who trailed 4-3 going into the third period after the first ended in a 3-2 tie.

John Anderson, Lynn Jorgenson and Bruce Boudreau scored single goals for the winners before 2,471 fans.

Glen Richardson scored twice for Hamilton with the other goals scored by by Danny Shearer and Mike Keating.

GOALIE REPLACED

Greg Redquest started in goal for Hamilton but Fincups' coach Bert Templeton replaced him with Mike Clarke after Boudreau's goal gave the Marlies a 6-4 lead midway through the third period.

There were 15 penalties, nine in Hamilton. Each team was assessed two major penalties for a second-period fistfight between Keating and Mike McEwen and a third-period scrap between Boudreau and Shearer with three seconds remaining in the game.

Arena Project On the Move

HAMILTON (CP) — City council voted 11-7 Tuesday night to seek special legislation that would allow it to provide $2 million of tax money toward construction of a 15,000-seat arena.

Lawyer Henry Katz and stockbroker Doug McKay told council their group have been promised $6 million from several sources, but needed financial backing for the balance of the total cost of the proposed $10-million building.

Mayor Vic Copps said council's decision did not mean that the $2 million in taxpayers' money would be spent, but that it was only the first step leading to legislation enabling the city to guarantee financially with private enterprise.

Mr. Katz said the arena is expected to be in operation sometime during the 1975-76 hockey season.

He said it would be too late to attract a major league hockey franchise for next season, but he was confident that would come.

"There's no problem getting at least a World Hockey Association team for the city," said Mr. Katz, "and Hamilton Fincups of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series have already indicated they would be willing to use the new arena as home ice."

Holderness Boosts Hawks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brian Holderness is one reason New Haven Nighthawks advanced further than most observers thought when the American Hockey League began its post-season playoff schedule three weeks ago.

The 21-year-old goaltender led his team in a sudden-death game to go into the playoffs. Then, playing strongly throughout a best-of-seven quarter-final series in which New Haven knocked off Virginia Red Wings—first-place finishers in the Southern Division—in five games.

Holderness hasn't stopped his fine play in the semi-finals as he blocked 37 shots Tuesday night to lead the Nighthawks to a 7-2 win over Hershey Bears and a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven playoff.

The Bears have only scored six goals in three games and Holderness has made 96 saves over that span.

In another semi-final game Tuesday night, Rochester beat Springfield Indians 4-3 to give the Americans a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven series.

Bob Cook scored two goals for New Haven as the Nighthawks exploded for five third-period goals.

Rick Chinnick and Tom Colley also had two goals for the winners and defenceman Ron Wilson added the other.

Yves Bourgeron scored both Hershey goals.

Barry Merrell and Gordie Clark scored two goals each to lead Rochester past Springfield. Roger Lemelin opened the scoring for Springfield with 26 seconds gone in the contest, but Merrell scored his first at the 14:25 mark to tie the game.

Paul Shakes scored the other Springfield goal.

Both series resume tonight, with Springfield visiting New Haven and Springfield playing host to Rochester.

CONFIRMS OFFER

SAO PAULO (AP) — Pele, the retired king of soccer, said Tuesday he will give his answer soon to a $4.5-million offer to sign a two-year contract with New York Cosmos of the North American Soccer League. "I think it is a very interesting offer. However, I asked for time to think, because I will have to confer with my wife before giving my final answer," Pele, 34, retired from soccer last Oct. 4 after a brilliant 18-year career.

Familiar Surroundings Agree with Greg Luzinski

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Greg Luzinski had a pleasant homecoming Tuesday.

Luzinski, who spent a lot of time in his early baseball years in the stands at Chicago's Wrigley Field, is now with the National League's Philadelphia Phillies. And the one-time kid from suburban Niles, Ill., pleased a few fans in the stands Tuesday, to the dismay of the majority.

He drove in three runs with three singles, leading the Phillies to a 7-5 victory over Chicago Cubs.

In Tuesday's other National League games, New York Mets beat St. Louis 9-5, Montreal edged Pittsburgh 4-3, Atlanta defeated Los Angeles 5-2, San Diego downed Houston 5-1 and Cincinnati stopped San Francisco 5-4.

"I don't let the fact that I'm a local boy bother me," said Luzinski. "I refuse to allow added pressure to build up because I might have friends or relatives in the stands."

The benefactor of Luzinski's hitting was Wayne Twitchell. "I don't enjoy pitching in this ballpark," he said after getting only his second career victory over the Cubs, with eighth-inning relief help from Gene Garber. "I liked to pitch against them more when they had free swingers like Ron Santo and Billy Williams."

When the Mets traded for centerfielder Del Unser, they were after his glove. But he brought along a hot bat as his three hits, one of them a two-run single, led New York to its triumph over St. Louis, raising Unser's average to .400.

Despite all the hitting and a six-run lead, Jerry Koosman had to struggle for his complete-game victory, giving up nine hits and leaving 10 Cardinals on base.

Ralph Garr greeted reliever Jim Brewer with a bases-loaded ground-rule double for the seventh-inning runs that vanted the Braves over Los Angeles.

Willie McCovey's homer opposed the second inning and Tito Fuentes' run-scoring single ended it as the Padres, behind Dave Freisleben, Randy Jones, scored their eighth victory in 11 games and handed Houston its ninth loss in the last 10.

Cincinnati's Joe Morgan doubled with one out in the ninth inning, raced to third on Charlie Williams' wild pitch and continued home with the run that gave the Giants when rookie catcher Marc Hill recovered the ball and fired it wildly past third.

GREG LUZINSKI

McNally Posts Third Win

MONREAL (CP) — Dave McNally, six ninth-inning relief help from Dale Murray, quickly becoming a fast fastball, and Pepe Mangual scored the winning run on a passed ball as Montreal Expos squeezed past Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3 in National League baseball action Tuesday.

The game, before a sparse crowd of 5,229, marked the second scoreless six innings Murray has finished up McNally's work for a victory over the Pirates. McNally was the winner in a 7-4 verdict in Pittsburgh last Thursday.

The 32-year-old left hander, acquired in the off-season from Baltimore Orioles of the American League, also praised rookie left fielder Bombo Rivera, a ninth-inning substitute, for his dash to the fence to turn a home run ball by pinch hitter Duffy Dyer into a triple.

McNally, now 2-0, said there was "no doubt" the one-out clout was destined to tie the game before Rivera's stab.

"I knew the wind was blowing that way," said Rivera, "and I thought I'd better go for it, to the fence. I was there when the ball hit me in the glove."

Larry Demery, a pitcher, came in to run for Dyer and Expos manager Gene Mauch signalled for Murray, who struck out Bernie Sevan and got Richie Hebner to line to third baseman Larry Parrish for the final outs.

"McNally might have filed Stennett out to centre, and what good is that?" asked Mauch of the sacrifice fly possibility. "Great pitchers don't want to come out, and great pitchers want to make sure their team wins the game."

Mangual, leading off the ninth, reached second on an error by first baseman Willie Stargell, watched Jerry Manuel draw a walk and moved to third on Parrish's sacrifice bunt. Mangual came home on Tim Foli's rates catcher Manny Sanguillen was charged with a passed ball.

Al Oliver's first home run of the year, a towering shot over the right-field fence, gave the Pirates a 1-0 first-inning lead but the Expos scored three runs in the second on Larry Lintz's two-run single and Tim Foli's base hit.

The Pirates tied the game 3-3 in the sixth when Hebner was hit by a pitch, Oliver walked and Richie Zisk drove them home with a single.

Pittsburgh's Jerry Reuss, 0-1, pitched through the ninth inning against Woodie Fryman, 1-0, in the finale of a two-game series.

Doc Medich Stops Boston Red Sox

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pitcher Doc Medich had a cold Tuesday but he didn't let the virus affect his right arm as he pitched a three-hitter for a 5-0 New York Yankees victory over Boston Red Sox.

"I woke up with a cold," Medich said. "It started yesterday when my lungs became congested. I took some aspirin before the game. I was bothered a little in the early innings, but it went away as things progressed."

Elsewhere in American League baseball action, Fergie Jenkins two hitter gave Texas Rangers a 2-1 win over Oakland A's, Baltimore Orioles beat Milwaukee Brewers 1-0, Chicago White Sox defeated Kansas City Royals 7-3, Detroit Tigers beat Cleveland Indians 8-2 and Minnesota Twins defeated California Angels 7-1.

Medich was locked in a scoreless duel with Rick Wise until Bobby Bonds delivered a run-scoring single in the sixth inning. Bonds homered in the eighth following a suicide squeeze by Gilbat Madden and New York added two more runs in the ninth on Chris Chambliss' RBI double and Randy Alomar's triple.

Jenkins stopped Oakland on two hits and Tom Grieve tripled home the Rangers' winning run in the fourth inning as Texas ended the A's four-game winning streak. Grieve's triple off Ken Holtzman scored Jim Sundberg, who led off with a double.

The only Baltimore hit were a second-inning homer and seventh-inning single by shortstop hitter Billy Williams. Jenkins' long-time teammate in Chicago with the Chicago Cubs. They are close friends who hunt and fish together during the off-season.

"I know his style of pitching, having played behind him for so many years," Williams said. "He doesn't like to throw many pitches, so you have to be ready. The home run came on a fast ball. It was the good pitch to let go by."

Bobby Grich's home run with two out in the eighth inning produced the Orioles' only run while Jim Palmer pitched a six-hitter for his second shutout of the season. Grich hit his second home run of the year into the left field stands after Milwaukee starter Pete Broberg had fanned the first two batters in the eighth.

Coming off a bout with the flu that had sidelined him for 10 days as a starter, Jim Kaat got well on a hurry by pitching the White Sox to their first victory in six starts with seventh-inning help from Terry Forster. It also ended Kansas City's five-game winning streak and was Kaat's ninth consecutive victory since last Sept. 4.

Chicago Hammered Bruce Dal Canton for five runs in the first two innings and then clinched the game on Brian Downing's two-run homer off Marty Pattin in the third.

Ron LePore's scratch double led a five-run fifth inning as Detroit rallied behind Lerrin LaGrow's six-hit pitching. Cleveland's Gaylord Perry was breezing along with a 2-0 lead at the time of LaPore's hit, a two-out fly that popped off centre fielder George Hendrick's glove after a long run. It scored Dan Meyer and Art James, who had singled. Gary Sutherland started home another run and Willie Horton followed with a two-run homer.

Vic Albury stopped California on six hits and Minnesota scored four times in the fourth inning. Albury, the eighth left hander used against California in 12 games, lost his shutout in the seventh on an unearned run.

Five Three-rounders

Foreman Won't Waste Any Time

TORONTO (CP) — George Foreman makes his Saturday meeting with five other boxers around a quiet afternoon picking apples while promoters are trying hard to make it sound exciting enough to induce fans to spend from $5 to $25 for a ticket.

Foreman, former world heavyweight champion, goes against five opponents in consecutive three-round exhibition bouts Saturday afternoon at Maple Leaf Gardens.

The five opponents are Terry Daniels, Boone Kirkman, Alonzo Johnson, Jerry Judge and Charlie Polite, not necessarily in that order.

"I told them to put their names in a hat and pick the order that way," Foreman told a news conference Tuesday. "As soon as one gets whipped, send in another and after I whip him, send in another until I've finished the five of them. I'll be burning."

Promoter Don King painted a different picture of the exhibition which is to be televised on ABC's Wide World of Sports show.

"I've heard it referred to as a farce, a joke and a circus," said King. "But George is undertaking a feat never performed before.

"And he's risking a $5 million payday. That's what a return bout with Muhammad Ali would get him but he said he will retire if he loses to one of his five opponents on Saturday.

The only one of the five Foreman has fought previously is Kirkman who was beaten in two rounds.

"I'll admit that it wasn't much of a fight," Kirkman said, referring to the 1970 loss to Foreman. "But he'll see the real me on Saturday."

Daniels, who was knocked out by Joe Frazier in their 1973 title bout, was the only other competitor on hand at Tuesday's news conference.

"I'd like you to keep your chin down because I'll be going for it," Daniels told Foreman.

Saturday's exhibition is being staged by Don King Productions Inc. and Video Technique Inc. with most of the revenue coming from ABC.

Foreman is to get 50 per cent of the profits and his opponents $5,000 each.

Johnson, 40, is the oldest of the five. He dropped a 10-round decision to Ali in 1961.

Polite is in his 30s and has been fighting professionally since 1964. His record is 12 victories, 20 defeats and three draws. He has been stopped 13 times by such boxers as Foreman in 1970, four rounds; Bob Foster, 1969, three; and Chuck Wepner, this year, in four.

The Kings made the playoffs for the first time since moving to Kansas City-Omaha from Cincinnati in 1967.

Fans Get into the Act on Two Fronts

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fans are becoming more and more important as the National Basketball Association playoffs progress. They meant victory Tuesday night to Boston Celtics and Golden State Warriors.

It was unfortunate, for Houston Rockets, however, that it was their fans who helped the Celtics score a 122-117 triumph. The decision gave Boston a 3-1 edge in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semi-final series.

The Rockets had whittled down a big Celtics' lead as the fourth quarter minutes ticked away. When Houston centre Kevin Kunnert was called for a loose-ball foul, the crowd went wild.

They threw ice, paper cups and even a pair of men's shoes at the Celtics scattered for cover.

"Houston's crowd helped us out," said Boston coach Tommy Heinsohn. "It took about five minutes to get the court cleared and we all got a nice little rest."

Apparently, the rest benefited the Celtics more than the Rockets, who face possible elimination Thursday at Boston.

Rest also helped the Warriors' Rick Barry, who watched most of the third period while his team-mates beat Seattle Supersonics 124-109 to take a 3-2 lead in that Western Conference semi-final.

Those were the only NBA playoff games scheduled Tuesday night. The other Eastern Conference semi-final resumes tonight with Washington Bullets trailing their 3-2 lead to Buffalo, while in the West, Chicago Bulls face Kansas City-Omaha Kings by the same margin entering tonight's game.

In Tuesday's only American Association game, Indiana beat Denver 131-124 to tie that Western final 1-1.

Dave Cowens and Don Chaney finished with 29 points as Boston survived 35 points by Houston's Calvin Murphy and 31 more by Mike Newlin. The Celtics built a big lead on a second period in which they shot 52 per cent from the field, made all six free throws and outrebounded the Rockets 17-4.

Barry, the league's second-leading regular-season scorer, left the game with weary legs early in the third period.

The Warriors increased their lead from 16 to 27 points with Barry on the bench, a fact that impressed coach Al Attles. Also impressive was the performance of Barry's substitute, Keith Wilkes, who scored a game-high 34 points and grabbed eight of his team's 62 rebounds.

IOC Head to Inspect Facilities

MONTREAL (CP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee (IOC), begins a five-day personal assessment of plans and facilities for the 1976 Summer Olympics today.

A spokesman for the organizing committee for the Games said Tuesday that the Irish peer was the first of a series of official visits Killanin had promised at a meeting in Lausanne, Switzerland, earlier this year.

However, Killanin will not begin his inspection of the Montreal facilities until the weekend.

He will visit Toronto today for a private meeting with James Worrall, Canada's member of the IOC executive, before fulfilling a Thursday speaking engagement there before the Empire Club, an afternoon news conference, and a reception and dinner at on by the Olympic Trust, the money-raising arm of the Canadian Olympic Association.

The IOC president will drive to Montreal Friday, stopping in Kingston, Ont., to meet with officials responsible for construction of the yachting facilities for the 1976 Games.

Killanin will report his findings at a Monday news conference before moving into further meetings with Roger Rousseau, president of the organizing committee, and mayor Jean Drapeau.

Barnacle Free

Free of barnacles despite 18½ months of continuous work at sea, the copper-hulled Copper Mariner shrimp boat (left) stands in contrast to the heavily befouled steel-hulled sister ship (right) about to undergo its third scraping and painting during the same time period. Launched at the same time and working the same Central American waters, the two shrimp boats are part of a four-year test program documenting the economic feasibility of copper-nickel hulls. (CP Photo)

Copper-nickel Alloy Defeats Barnacle

NEW YORK (CP) — A copper industry research group says it has solved the problem of the barnacle, the lowly salt-water shellfish which for centuries has bedevilled mariners the world over.

Barnacles have a penchant for cementing themselves to underwater objects, including turtles, shales, rocks, wharf pilings—and ship bottoms. They so befoul the hulls of salt-water vessels that they must be drydocked periodically for costly scraping and repainting to make them seaworthy again.

Barnacles develop two large suckers with enough a strong natural cement. The barnacle then cements itself to an underwater object and a hard limeline shell forms around the creature.

The Copper Development Association, an arm of the United States copper and brass industry, says it has licked the problem with the development of a copper-nickel alloy hull which resists not only the costly barnacle but other harmful marine growth and corrosion damage as well.

The result, says the association, is that vessels can operate barnacle-free for years, saving ship-owners the thousands of dollars now spent putting their vessels into dry-dock to rid them of barnacle infestation.

An association spokesman said four shrimping trawlers completed recently at the West Coast shipyard of Astileros IMESA, S.A., Mexico's largest builder of commercial fishing vessels, were equipped with copper-alloy hulls.

The trawlers were built for Ocean Foods and Trades Ltd., of Colombo, Sri Lanka, a major fishing firm and exporter of shrimp to world markets. The trawlers, which will operate in the Indian Ocean, sailed in January for Sri Lanka, formerly known as Ceylon.

The association quoted Vincent Fernando, managing director of Ocean Foods, as saying the company estimates use of the copper-alloy hulls will increase great income by more than $500,000 a year.

Fernando explained that vessels in the company's present fleet, equipped with steel hulls, must be taken out of service twice a year and drydocked for two months of scraping and painting. The company estimates use of the copper-alloy hulls will provide four additional months of fishing time a year for each trawler.

Construction of the trawlers was based on performance tests of the Copper Mariner, built by the association to research the barnacle problem. The Canadian-owned International Nickel Co. played a role in the research program.

The association said the Copper Mariner showed no harmful marine growth after more than 3½ years of continuous and hard service in Pacific Ocean waters, highly infested with barnacles, off the coast of Nicaragua.

It said the Copper Mariner achieved higher speeds and greater fuel economy than steel-hulled sister ships of identical design with no hull maintenance.

After six months of fishing, the tests showed twice the fuel economy of sister ships at 7.5 knots, about 30 per cent lower r.p.m. at 7.5 knots with less wear and tear on the engine and top speed of 9.2 knots as against 7.5 for the conventional vessels.

Eugene W. Thiele, manager of industrial market development for the association, said its work with the shipping industry "convinces us that the copper-alloy hull concept can be applied to quite large commercial cargo vessels."

There was no size limitation, he added.

The copper-nickel alloy used is No. 706—90 per cent copper and 10 per cent nickel—and, as a copper alloy, it eventually develops the classic green-colour patina.

Thiele said that, other than the hull material, the design and fabrication of the four trawlers built in Mexico are entirety of standard steel construction.

The 52-foot boats have a 16-foot, six-inch beam, a depth of eight feet two inches and a weight of 51 tons. The power plant is a diesel engine with a rating of 190 continuous horsepower at 2,000 r.p.m. Fuel capacity is 22,000 gallons and six 1,000-pound chill tanks eliminate the need for the conventional ice-filled fish hold.

Viruses to Rescue

Maggots, Beetles, Rodents Eat Third of World's Food

LONDON (Reuter)—Maggots, beetles and rodents eat their way through a third of the world's food production—and scientists are trying to wipe out some of the pests with a killer virus.

The idea is to infect the creatures with a disease that will kill them or their offspring — without damaging other forms of life nearby. And it is already working.

Ways of destroying the voracious little beasts that take food away from the world's hungry were described at an exhibition of the British Government's centre for Overseas Pest Research (COPR).

Insects can develop an immunity in time to ordinary pesticides which also have the drawback of sometimes creating a buildup of dangerous chemicals in the soil. Not so with viral pesticides, said COPR researchers.

The first victim of the virologists was the African armyworm, a tiny caterpillar that in its two weeks of life can strip vast areas of corn and wheat crops down to their bare stalks.

Five years of research have resulted in successfully isolating a virus that, in field tests, kills the armyworm. Researchers are hoping to produce a more virulent strain.

Tests are still under way to establish that the virus is specific to armyworm, in other words, to make sure no other animal or plant life can be affected, and it is expected to be ready commercially early next year.

How to infect the creatures is the next question. Some favor spraying fields. Others believe that turning loose thousands of diseased caterpillars is the answer.

Similar viruses are being developed to combat other pests in Africa and Asia. One is already in commercial production to kill insects that destroy cotton fields in the United States.

Asked about the dangers of a strain getting out of hand and infecting people, COPR scientists said safety tests ruled this out. Researchers had eaten the stuff without ill-effects.

They also shrugged off the possibility of certain insect species being wiped out—upsetting the ecological chain. Scattered pockets of insects would always survive.

The urgency of the work was underlined by William Mathieson, deputy secretary of the overseas development ministry, who said that 10 per cent of the world's food was destroyed on the ground and another 20 per cent in storage, by pests.

"If this loss could be reduced by 10 per cent," he said, "it would be even more valuable for world food than bringing new land into cultivation or new methods of growing more food."

Research at the centre has also advanced on developing pest-resistant crops. One method was to grow a strain with hairy stalks, depriving the pest of a smooth surface on which to lay their eggs.

In spite of the research, it was predicted that, to maintain food production, ordinary pesticides would have to be used on a larger scale over the next 10 or 15 years.

LOBLAWS GIANT

PORK—THE FAMILY PLEASER

Wholesome, tender, juicy and flavourful—that's Loblaws pork. Besides, it's versatile, easy to prepare and nutritious—a real family pleaser all the way.

SELECT PORK—IT'S VERSATILE For versatility, pork rates Number 1. Its tantalizing flavour suits any meat or occasion. See our Pork Chart if you are unfamiliar with the wide range of pork cuts available for your selection.

Whole New York shoulder is a wholesale section including the butt and shoulder sections. Cuts from these sections are available fresh or smoked. When smoked they have a flavour similar to ham. You can expect 2 servings per pound from shoulder (picnic) cuts and 3 servings per pound from butt cuts. When these cuts are boneless, you can expect 3 and 3½ servings per pound, respectively.

The loin is the midsection where the most desirable chops and roasts come from. The centercut section is the premium section of the loin, containing the choicest meat. When selecting loin cuts, plan on 2½ servings per pound.

The leg is the hind portion and is sold as fresh leg of pork or, when smoked, as ham. Plan on 2½-3 servings per pound from fresh leg of pork selections and 3½-4 servings per pound from cooked hams.

Pork belly is the lower midsection, furnishing bacon, spare-ribs and fresh side pork. You can expect 1½ servings per pound from spare-ribs and 6 servings per pound from sliced bacon.

SELECT PORK—IT'S EASY TO PREPARE Since pork is a tender meat, most pork cuts can be prepared in a wide variety of methods including oven-roasting, panfrying, panbroiling, braising and barbecuing.

Don't overcook pork if you want to retain its natural juiciness, flavour and nutrients. Use moderate cooking temperatures. When roasting pork, place the meat in an open shallow pan and roast at 325°F until the internal temperature reaches 170°F. Meat "fully cooked" hams to 140°F internal temperature or serve cold.

SELECT PORK—IT'S NUTRITIOUS Pork is wholesome and nutritious whether fresh, cured or smoked or canned.

Lean luscious pork supplies high quality protein essential to growth and good health. It is an excellent source of thiamine and niacin and provides a good source of phosphorus and iron.

Charming Charles Is off to North

OTTAWA (CP) — Prince Charles swirled through a program of waltzes at Government House Tuesday, his last evening in the capital before his school-ruled tour of the Northwest Territories.

The Prince of Wales, who has been charming ladies of all ages during his public appearances since his arrival Sunday, was equally gallant as guest of honor at a ball sponsored by Gov.-Gen. and Mme. Leger.

The 26-year-old naval officer prince, wearing a deep blue tuxedo and dancing slippers embossed with a gold cut-of-arms, swept through the first dance with Mme. Leger, while her husband guided Margaret Trudeau.

Prince Charles is to make a return to the Canadian Club today and visit the headquarters of the external affairs department, the Lester Pearson Building, before departing for the northern leg of his tour today.

His first real public appearance occurred Tuesday following a formal visit to the Parliament Buildings, when he and Prime Minister Trudeau strolled down the Parliament Hill lawn between ranks of cheering spectators.

Charles stopped time and again to chat and shake hands in the flag-waving, cheering crowd.

Humanists Will Try To Visit Morgentaler

WASHINGTON (CP) — If Dr. Henry Morgentaler can't leave jail to accept his Humanist-of-the-Year Award, the sponsoring body will seek permission to make the presentation in prison in Montreal.

And if the Canadian cabinet does not agree to commute the convicted abortionist's 18-month sentence, the same U.S. body plans to look into the possibility of a direct appeal to the Queen for clemency.

James Prescott, a director of the American Humanist Association (AHA) said Tuesday that while he has received no direct word from the Canadian Embassy here, indications are the Montreal doctor won't be allowed out on pass May 24 to receive his award.

The AHA recently named Morgentaler and feminist Betty Friedan as their man and woman of the year.

Prescott said news reports have quoted Quebec Justice Minister Jacques Choquette as saying he would not recommend Morgentaler be granted leave to attend the St. Louis, Mo., ceremony.

"As soon as we get a formal reply—likely through the embassy—we'll plan what to do next," Prescott said. "If it's 'No,' then we'll request permission to present the award to him in prison."

The AHA petitioned the embassy last week to ask Ottawa to grant prison leave to Morgentaler, and also was part of a group of 17 organizations petitioning the Canadian cabinet to commute the doctor's sentence.

If there is no commutation, Prescott said, "we will study the possibility of an appeal to the Queen as a move to protect the rights of women."

Morgentaler, 52, was jailed after his acquittal by jury was overturned by the Quebec Court of Appeals, whose action was subsequently upheld by the Supreme Court of Canada.

Choquette Is Called Arrogant

OTTAWA (CP) — Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette was called "arrogant and insulting" Tuesday for criticising a United States award to convicted abortionist Henry Morgentaler.

"It is the highest honor humanists pay to people they respect and admire," said Joan Gawn of Ottawa, president of the Humanist Association of Canada.

Dr. Morgentaler, now serving an 18-month jail sentence, has been named co-winner with feminist Betty Friedan of the American Humanist Association's Humanist-of-the-Year award.

Mr. Choquette said during the weekend that he did not approve of the award and would not recommend the Montreal physician be granted temporary leave to accept it at a May 24 ceremony in St. Louis, Mo.

"For Mr. Choquette to publicly dismiss the award, and by doing so dismiss and deplore a whole segment of society who happen to have different religious views from him, is going too far," said Mrs. Gawn.

One other Canadian has been awarded the AHA prize. It was presented in 1959 to Brock Chisholm, former head of the United Nations World Health Organization.

Not Always Feasible To Have Full-time JPs

TORONTO (CP) — It is not economically feasible to have full-time justices of the peace in all areas of the province, Attorney-General John Clement said Tuesday.

But he agreed in the legislature that if a part-time justice of the peace earned more in fee payments than a full-time one, then roughly one would substitute for the other."

Mr. Clement was answering opposition questions following a published report that a part-time Brampton, Ont., justice of the peace was paid $30,000 last year, more than twice the amount paid to those on full-time salaries.

He said that in 1973-74, only five of 264 part-time justices of the peace billed the government for more than $20,000 for their services.

"... I would like to point out that most of the JPs who earn substantial fees, these are gross out of which they must pay their secretarial staff," the attorney-general said.

Justices of the peace preside over some of Ontario's traffic and bylaw courts swear out informations against citizens charged by police with offences of all kinds, conduct bail hearings and issue search warrants, summonses and subpoenas.

Check Asked

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's provincial auditor was asked Tuesday to report on firms delinquent in payments of fuel taxes to the provincial revenue ministry.

The request from the public accounts committee of the legislature followed reports that one firm, now in receivership, owes a large sum in fuel taxes.

Knowles Derails Pay Boost, Tossing Rule Book into Gears

OTTAWA (CP) — Veteran New Democrat Stanley Knowles threw the parliamentary rule book at the parliamentary salary bill Tuesday, halting progress temporarily and forcing renewed attempts on the proposed 32 1-3-per-cent pay raise.

The 66-year-old Winnipeg North Centre MP, strongly opposed to any salary increase, argued in the Commons that the bill was amended improperly and should be returned to committee. His arguments prompted Speaker James Jerome to delay debate until p.m. today to allow time for a formal ruling.

Mr. Knowles said the bill originally to authorize a 38-per-cent pay raise but called down after public protest and NDP parliamentary opposition, was altered improperly in committee.

Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp and Progressive Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin objected, but Mr. Jerome reserved judgment.

The normally-reserved Mr. Knowles, NDP House leader and acknowledged procedural expert, left the Commons delighted.

"It's at least delayed the bill and drawn some attention to this blatantly dead," he said in an interview.

The delay coincided with an attempt by Mr. Sharp to alter the bill even more. He introduced an amendment to index salaries paid to the prime minister, cabinet ministers and other MPs with extra duties in the same way that the bill would index the basic salary of MPs.

If passed, the bill will raise MPs' annual income to $24,600 from $26,000 A tax-free allowance of $10,000, now $8,000, would be included in the new total. Senators would get a basic $22,500 including a tax-free $5,500. They now receive $22,000, including a $4,000 allowance.

The proposed annual cost-of-living adjustment would be limited to a maximum of seven per cent. The bill also would make the basic raises retroactive to last July 8, meaning about $4,300 in back pay for most MPs.

All but three New Democrats want to prevent any indexing-related increases during the current Parliament, expected to last until 1978. They also would wipe out all retroactivity and abolish the proposal of a commission to take future raises out of the hands of MPs.

The bill is not expected to be held up long. Sources indicate that committee members would represent it rapidly if they are forced to deal with it again.

Pizza Parlors Raided; Mixed Cheese Suspected

TORONTO (CP) — Investigators from Canada Customs and the dairy division of Agriculture Canada last week seized books, records and cheese samples from 24 pizza parlors, eight cheese distributors and six cheese importers in Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia, it was announced Monday.

K. J. Waldon, district supervisor here for the dairy division of the federal agriculture department, confirmed there had been raids but did not say where.

If charges are laid, they will be under the Export and Import Permit Act, which decrees that imported natural cheese must be sold directly to consumers and not be mixed with other cheeses or ingredients.

Consequently imported cheese cannot be used on pizzas.

For many of us this would be a calamity. Your Intelligencer carrier is a young, independent businessman; he doesn't receive a pay cheque. His profit is the difference between the wholesale cost of his newspapers and the amount collected from his customers.

Most subscribers pay their carriers on the first call. But some people say "come back later"... and the carrier's profit is put off. It's like asking you to come back two or three times for your pay cheque.

Of course, you want to be paid promptly. All of us do. The boy or girl who delivers your Intelligencer will appreciate being paid promptly.

Blasting School Popular

ISAQUAH, Wash. (AP)—Albert E. Teller is a teacher who will soon have an explosive classroom situation.

Students from Morocco, Colombia, Argentina, Peru and the United States have enrolled for the opening of what he says is the country's only blasting school.

"This course is not for the guy who stuffs explosives in holes," Teller said. "I could teach that to a chimpanzee. This is for the project managers and engineers, teaching them how to plan a job, supervise it and get it done properly."

With his beard and turtleneck sweater he looks more like an academician than a man who has spent his life with high explosives.

"People sort of expect a John Wayne image," Teller said "I remember a guy who brought me out to Illinois for a job. I didn't have a beard then and my hair was short.

"I showed up in a business suit with an attache case. The man off the plane behind me was a big, burly guy in a hard hat. My man walked up to him and asked him if his name was Teller."

Teller then stepped up and identified himself.

"And he said: 'What the hell's this? I don't want a schoolboy.'

"Anyway I blew his damned smokestack. And that's what counts."

Teller once dropped a 15-storey building in Sacramento, but his biggest job was laying a 186-foot smokestack down between two buildings.

"I drilled for four hours, and dropped it an hour later," he said. "The whole job took only five hours. But it took planning for four weeks before, thinking about nothing else."

Zinc Find Is Threat To Hamlet

OTTAWA (CP) — The tiny Baffin Island settlement of Arctic Bay is worried about its future. Residents say they feel threatened by development of a lead-zinc ore body at Strathcona Sound, 18 miles away.

In a letter to Stuart Hodgson, commissioner of the Northwest Territories, the settlement council complains of lack of consultation with the municipality on provision of manpower for the project.

Several years ago a letter signed by 88 permanent adult residents of the community of almost 400 urged a townhouse operation for the mine townsite rather than a semi-permanent town with stores and schools.

Under this type of operation, men would be flown in from their home communities for a fixed period of time rather than moved in with their families. The residents hoped workers from Arctic Bay, near the north end of Baffin Island, would be able to commute by road to the townsite, about 45 minutes away by snowmobile.

However, the territorial government's proposal calls for a semi-permanent town and Arctic Bay fears that pressure will mount on its residents to move to the new site.

The federal government holds an 18-per-cent interest in the proposed mine. Other shareholders are Dutch and German companies and the majority owner is Mineral Resources International Ltd. of Calgary.

The mine, called Nanisivik—a place where people find things—is expected to produce 150,000 tons of lead-zinc concentrate annually, all of which will be shipped out of Canada.

Spokesmen for the project said there is no smelter capacity nor market for the ore in Canada, although provision was made for review of both the export permit—and Canadian smelter capacity.

When Jean Chretien was minister of Indian and northern affairs, he described the mine as a "pilot project through which all those involved will gain experience of social, technological, economic and environmental implications of such development in the Arctic environment."

The government's contract with the company calls for 60 per cent of the mine's work force to be Eskimo by 1978, three years after the start of production.

As a precaution against a "boom" mentality, which has afflicted other northern towns, the projected life of the mine, which available technology might have made as brief as six years, has been extended to 12.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

For Thursday, April 24

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful how you handle a family matter with your mate. If not resolved properly, it will remain an open wound for some time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Normally you're quite willing to lend a hand to friends. Today however, you'll make it quite clear you don't want to be imposed upon.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you're sharing something social today, be sure the others bring money or you'll be stuck with the tab.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're a bit too pessimistic today regarding outcome of events. Your pessimism may produce just that kind of result if you're not careful.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) This is not one of your better days for complete mental concentration. Later, recheck all work to see if you erred.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't lend anything to an old friend you've fond of, but who always forgets to return things.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You're likely to let others exert an undue influence over you. Think for yourself—be your own boss.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You have a serious secretive matter on your mind. You'd like guidance. Be very careful whom you confide in.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A new project will be temporarily stalled through no fault of yours. You'd be unwise to use the delay as an excuse to discard it.

South looked over dummy for a fraction of a second. The hand was solid except for the trump suit and since the game was rubber bridge, South decided to forget about an overtrick and play as safely as possible for the small slam.

He won the heart in his own hand and played his ace of trumps. East showed out and the clock contract had changed into one that was almost impossible.

"Why don't you give up?" cheerled West. "You can't do anything about my trumps."

"Maybe so, maybe not," replied South. "If you had exactly two hearts, three diamonds and four clubs I'll bring this one home."

Then South played three rounds of clubs, while taking care to ruff the third lead. West came a diamond to dummy's ace and a ruff of the last club. So far so good. West had had four clubs.

South carbed his last two diamonds and once more West had to follow. He led his three-card hearts, overtook with dummy's ace, led another heart and ruff-ed with the queen of trumps.

West could overruff or underruff, but one of his trump tricks had vanished into thin air.

Sting Treatment Not Preventive

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I was bitten last summer and this summer before each time by yellow jackets. Both times shots were given as well as pain pills. Every spot was swollen and red for at least 24 hours.

I have been told I was lucky, and that the next time I'm bitten, it could be fatal. Don't the shots do away with the toxic poison? I do not know what kind of shots they were—Mrs. C. L. H.

It's important for you to know what kinds of shots you received.

Drugs such as epinephrine (one of the antihistamines) usually given in emergency situations involving insect-bite reactions, and this is very likely what was done in your case. The purpose is to counter the toxin in the venom causing the swelling. The venom also contains irritants which can cause the angry red appearance of the skin around a bite.

However, the point is that this emergency treatment does not confer any immunity against future bites. In fact, successive bite episodes, if you are hypersensitive, could produce even severer reactions. But the odds of your dying are not very high.

To be desensitized, you must receive a series of gradually measured doses of insect extract. Shots are available for desensitization against several other insect bite simultaneously. You should look into this before the next insect battle loom.

You might prudently carry an emergency kit made specifically for persons with sensitivity to such bites. This is especially advisable for persons who work out of doors in the summer and who may have heart problems which can be heightened by a sting reaction.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can you say anything about oral medication for a diabetic? I have a relative who has been taking one of them every day for the last five and a half years. He has had no hi-blood sugar checked every six months, and the last one read 120 milligrams.

I read recently they are finding bad side effects from taking the oral medication. Can you list some of them? This relative is 75. His blood pressure is 150-60.—W. Z.

I doubt that at 75 your relative is in any danger. The 120 mg. blood sugar reading is normal for him at his age. The blood pressure reading would be considered normal for him. Blood sugar levels of eldery tend to be higher than those of younger persons.

If he adheres to a sensible diet, one might even question his need for medication at all. In many cases of "mature onset" diabetes, things can be kept pretty well under control by diet alone.

As to the possible side effects you mention, these can include nausea, stomach upset and diarrhea. The most widely relative does not eat regular meals, may develop symptoms of lowness of blood sugar, which can cause problems.

Dear Doctor: Is it possible for a woman to have too small a vaginal opening to use tampons? If so, what can be done about it?—L. T.

Ordinarily not. The vaginal opening can be dilated quite readily. If the hymen is intact, the opening may be relatively small. I suggest you have a gynecologist dilate your hymen.

Worm Picking Lucrative

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — There is lots of folding money to be made worm-picking, says Joanne Robertson. The picking is good for about a month during April and May, she says. To sell the worms, she suggests getting in touch with a local conservation authorities or golf course director. "Companies pay thousands of dollars for worm picking rights to a couple of golf courses or large parks," she said.

Winnipeg Tries Free Bus Rides

WINNIPEG (CP) — With traffic congestion getting worse by the day, how do you persuade motorists not to drive downtown?

Winnipeg is trying free bus rides.

Called DASH (Downtown Area Shuttle), the system uses 12 buses from the Winnipeg Transit System along the main streets of the downtown business and shopping districts.

It averaged 15,000 passengers in each of the first two weeks of operation.

The experiment, financed equally by the city and the provincial government, is designed to encourage commuters to leave their cars at home. The city's share in the venture for the first year has been estimated at $360,000.

"Generally speaking, it seems to be well received," said DASH spokesman Leo Johnson.

"It ties the downtown area together."

The buses operate at five-minute intervals Monday through Friday, connecting the provincial legislative building, city hall, the Centennial Concert Hall and the big department stores.

Mr. Johnson said that, as far as he knows, the free transit system is unique to Canadian cities. A system in Seattle is based on the same idea but is confined to existing bus routes. The DASH system takes in parts of several established routes, providing a continuous service where previously transfers were necessary.

Although DASH has attracted about 2,000 passengers a day, the real proof of its success lies in its ability to dissuade commuters from driving in the city core.

The city doesn't yet know whether it is merely attracting passengers who previously used the transit system or is genuinely luring commuters from the suburbs.

"The system is going to be monitored and a survey taken to find out just who is using it," Mr. Johnson said.

Even if DASH does not eliminate or significantly reduce commuter motoring, its backers hope it will encourage drivers to leave their cars in parking lots on the fringes of the city centre.

"That will at least improve the downtown area traffic."

While the objectives of traffic engineers may be the last things on their minds, the passengers think DASH is great.

"People are particularly pleased to be able to ride around downtown without paying fares," Mr. Johnson said.

Northern Workers Get Survival Course

MOOSE FACTORY, Ont. (CP) — Do you know the proper way to get dressed and undressed in a sleeping bag? The answer is: not very quickly.

If you really want to know the answer that badly you might ask Bernby Berglund, a wise and bewhiskered old-doorsman, with more than half a century of experience of dealing with nature at its worst.

Recently Mr. Berglund conducted a two-night exercise sponsored by the department of national health and welfare to teach Northern workers how to cope with the isolation and elements if they ever became stranded in the sub-Arctic.

One of the party on the exercise was 22-year-old health worker, Miss Isaac.

For her the whole thing was terribly new and rather breathtaking. There she was in her sleeping bag in a crude camp scooped out of a snowdrift. During the night she could hear a timber wolf howl.

In the morning, she found wolf tracks outside her bivouac.

"I wouldn't have slept a wink if I'd known what was prowling around," she said.

Miss Isaac was among a group of 17 doctors, nurses, pilots and others whose jobs take them into the hinterland of Northern Ontario.

With little more than sleeping bags and pocket-sized survival kits they had been taken into the bush near Moose Factory and dropped off, one at a time, about a quarter-mile apart.

They were alone but not forgotten.

Berglund and his fellow instructor, Joe Van Haagen, spent the night snowshoeing through the forest checking on their charges. When dawn broke, all set about building some sort of shelter to have a roof instead of just stars over their heads on the second night.

Most of the pupils went along with lean-to shelters made of inter-locking spruce boughs.

It was not brand new to all of them. One, Phil Carter, a dentist from Moose Factory, spends a couple of months each year camping and guiding in the Lake of the Woods area.

Sister Madeline Martineau of Fort Albany, Ont., was no stranger to whatever the North could offer, hard and tough as it might be.

Born in the village of Attawapiskat on the shores of James Bay she had spent many an hour trotting alongside a dog team when she was a little girl.

On this exercise she didn't take long to settle into a tiny teepee, made warm and comfortable by the heat from a reflector fire she built outside the entrance.

Following the Second World War Mr. Berglund came to Canada from Sweden to teach survival to pilots with the airlines and the Royal Canadian Air Force. Then he became executive director of National Wilderness Survival Inc. of Campbellford, Ont., a non-profit organization dedicated to survival training.

Before actually heading into the bush the students on this particular exercise took a correspondence course and three days of pre-outing classes on such subjects as celestial navigation, clothing and equipment, geography, psychology, map and compass comprehension and ground-to-ground signals.

And, oh yes, one of the things they were taught was how to get dressed and undressed in a sleeping bag.

After Britain Supplied Buses--

Argentina Just Ordered Firms To Sell Cuba Cars It Needed

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

HAVANA — If the revolution is as much Cuban as it is Marxist, a point I have tried to make in this series, one is tempted to make a judgment, where does it go from here?

The Cuban Revolution has made much of its "New Man" and of Cuba as the only "Free Territory of the Americas".

Cuban political poster art is original and indigenous, not relying on the heavy jargon of the East Germans, nor the preachy rambling kind of political sentiments of Chairman Mao which proliferate all over the People's Republic of China.

On radio, the words and the slogans have the quick verbal flash and sudden ear appeal of the advertisements of the foreign companies of the old Cuba.

The long-gone Polar beer, a company owned by a Boston multi-millionaire, can be heard in a radio commercial in clipped, machine-gun rapid Spanish, "Polar! The people's beer. And the people can't be wrong!"

Today in buses and in homes the fast lilt and racy Spanish of the Cubans are applied to the same kind of slogans calling for an end to American imperialism on the one hand and to increase one's efficiency in the revolutionary society on the other.

Again, Marxist in intent, but Cuban in content.

I mention these kinds of impressions first because it is logical to ask what the Cuban Revolution will be like in the future?

Unless something tragic and unexpected happens to its charismatic and unpredictable Fidel, the style of the revolution will be his choice.

But even Castro is under some restraints of the kind which the earliest years of the revolution ignored.

On the verge of the Five Year Plan (1975-1980) which will consume Cuban organizational efforts, a mature and powerful set of technocrats all loyal to Fidel, as far as we know, will move Cuba more and more out of the ideological phase which has dominated created and into the inevitable technological one.

"Cuba Is Not Mao" of the Cuban Revolution, not tainted by foreign treat capitalistic influences but formulated entirely within Cuban socialism, will be less isolated in the future. Cuba now has new or renewed relations with 12 Caribbean nations and has never broken these with Canada and Mexico in the hemisphere.

And she has full diplomatic and trade relations with advanced European industrial states like Britain, France, West Germany and the Scandinavian kingdoms which are sending in specialists not only in industry but in dairy farming and agricultural sciences.

And all these inputs from abroad are bound to influence the young Cuban who has grown entirely within the revolution but as yet has travelled little beyond his own island.

When Fidel made his sudden appearance at the Canadian embassy residence and stayed for about three hours, we had an opportunity to look at a revolutionary leader in the prime of life, well into middle age, and with his revolution approaching its 20 year-old mark (in 1979).

He was affable, refreshed, with a capricious look in his eyes I had not expected. But above all, he showed a self-confidence and a genuine charisma which should make any of us in the press re-assess the amount of it we have attached in the past to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

Unlike many of the other great revolutionary leaders of the postwar era, Castro has prospered and survived. His great contemporaries, Sokarno of Indonesia, Nasser of Egypt, Nkrumia of Ghana, Lumumba of the Congo and the irrepressible Salvador Allende of Chile who tried and failed to build the hemisphere's second democratic society, fell from grace and are all dead.

Their revolutions after them have changed style, (as in Indonesia where Sokarno's charisma ways resulted in power passing to a cabal of conservative generals), or have taken different directions, as in Egypt, in that country, Arab socialism under President Anwar Sadat is more pragmatic, more prone to internal change than it was under the late and also charismatic Gemal Abdel Nasser.

The assumption must be made, therefore, that the Cuban Revolution will maintain its personalist nature, even while "going technocratic", and that Fidel will continue to dominate it.

If so, he will have to cope with the revisions of major ideological positions he has long initiated and sustained. This is especially true with regard to the United States. Cuba's isolation from the U.S., the interminable blockade, the fear of imperialism, have all created the isolation he sees as having given the revolution its initial ideological strength.

Now, as he told me in Havana when I talked to him about a time when the United States again recognizes Cuba (relations were broken in January, 1961), he says, "when it does happen, we will treat is as a positive event".

He also told me Cuba would be prepared to use its sugar as a bargaining tool for negotiation, since Cuba under Marxism, as under capitalism, is still the world's largest sugar producer.

"We should not negotiate under the conditions of pressure and coercion. For example, if the Americans need sugar. They have to go out to different markets to find it. And we have the sugar.

"We have no law to forbid selling sugar to the United States. If they should need the sugar and they want to buy it from Cuba, we would supply it. Therefore, there is not a situation of equal conditions. That is why the blockade must cease."

In our era, all revolutionary leaders have had to make their peace when the time comes to change or shift the basic ideological issues on which their movement is based or alter the moves they have made. (In Castro's case, the total nationalization of the $1 billion in American assets in Cuba in 1960).

If, and how, Fidel Castro will shift or change these basic positions of his regime, if the United States is also prepared to end the unworkable blockade, is the stuff of future history.

Broaden Horizons

LONDON (CP) — More than 8,000 schoolchildren went abroad on school journeys last year, says an inner London Education Authority spokesman Harvey Hinds, chairman of the authority's school subcommittee, said: "School journeys contribute to the total education development of the children who are fortunate enough to be able to benefit from them."

Nova Scotian Children Get Cheap Milk

HALIFAX (CP) — Although there have been four increases in the price of milk since last September, the Nova Scotia government continues to supply school children with eight-ounce servings of milk each day for five cents a child.

The province is the first in Canada to initiate such a voluntary milk scheme. There are 103,326 elementary students in 477 schools participating in the program.

Agriculture Minister Jack Hackins said his department has earmarked $1 million annually to subsidize the plan and it is estimated that more than 3½ million pounds of fluid milk will be consumed in the schools.

Ray Foote, school milk program co-ordinator for the department, said reaction from school boards across the province has been favorable, as milk is taking the place of soft drinks as a preffered refreshment among youngsters.

The Sydney school board provides milk for about 1,000 underprivileged children at no cost. Dairy farmers have made funds available to buy refrigerators for schools in disadvantaged areas.

Red-Light Racket

LONDON (CP) — Police are seeking a gang who strip red warning lamps from trains, refinish them and then "export" them to North America and Europe. They say the gang is operating in Scotland and northern England and has stolen more than 1000 lamps worth about $48 each.

THE ROMANOVS - Virginia Cowles

The Romanoff family ruled Russia for over 300 years. Its glittering Tzars and Tzarinas were autocratic despots, who between them embraced all the vices of absolute rulers. The author reveals the characters and personalities behind these strange and often daunting figures.

LIMBO OF THE LOST - John Wallace Spencer.

More than a thousand people and over a hundred ships have mysteriously disappeared in an area of the Atlantic called the "Bermuda Triangle" which the author John Wallace Spencer calls "Limbo of the Lost". Extensive air-sea searches have been conducted with very little evidence turning up that would lead to a realistic answer. The book is written factually, but the reader is constantly thinking of something quite alien to this world.

FUN WITH GROWING HERBS INDOORS - Virginia and George A. Albert.

"Parsley, sage, rosemary and thyme" goes the Simon and Garfunkel song. Herbs have long cast a spell on people — whether in ancient medicinal magic or in tasty cooking. The authors of this book show how simple it is to grow herbs indoors! how refreshing to have their delicate scent in the house; how useful it is to have fresh herbs for cooking. It is surprising how many can be grown indoors under lights or in windows. Mint, marjoram, parsley, mustard and many others can be grown this way.

DON'T GIVE UP ON AN AGING PARENT - Lawrence Galton.

Like so many of us, doctors have tended to see the old as incurable. Yet case histories show that optimistic medical treatment does exist for the elderly — and it works! Mr. Galton discusses "False Senility", rehabilitative treatment, and the newest treatments for giving self-respect years to countless old people formerly considered incurable.

AN ITALIAN JOURNEY- Ethel Mannin.

A useful guide for the visitor wishing to go to Northern Italy. It is also an entertaining account for the purely armchair traveller. Miss Manning journeyed from Venice to Florence by coach; she visited Byron's Ravella and spent some days in Verona. She had what she herself calls a "mooch" through beautiful and interesting places.

COOKING FOR CROWDS - Merry White.

This book has delightful illustrations and offers simple instructions for easy cooking and service — all in units of six and fifty — from soups, salads and entrees all the way to desserts.

CHILDREN IN DANGER - THE CAUSES AND PREVENTION OF BABY BATTERING - Jean Renvoize.

What is known about the parents, the family patterns and the social situations that give rise to baby battering? Jean Renvoize examines, in her book, the families themselves, the social services, the police, the doctors and hospitals. She explores the latest research on causes and prevention, and makes constructive suggestions for the future.

Advertising Gimmick

LONDON (CP) — The Labor-controlled council of the London borough of Hammersmith has discovered that only about 200 of the eligible 20,000 council tenants are taking advantage of a rent-rebate plan. Now the council plans to advertise the scheme on the back of beer mats, bingo cards and laundry bags.

Noble Gesture

PETERBOROUGH, England (CP) — Housewife Mrs. Winifred Noble was fired from her part-time job as church cleaner in an economy move to save her salary of only $120 a year. But now she has volunteered to do the work without pay.

Hunt Cat Thief

RALEIGH, England (CP) — Police are hunting a cat burglar who stole a prize Persian from breeder Georgina Tillett in this Essex town. The cat, champion Delmar Arabesque, is worth about $720 and has one blue eye and one orange.

CN Likes Competition

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Bandeen, president of the government-owned Canadian National Railways, says nationalization of the privately-owned Canadian Pacific Railway "would be disastrous for transportation."

"One of the things that has made CN as efficient an operation as I believe it is, is that we compete with CP," Dr. Bandeen said in a recent interview with the magazine Canadian Transportation and Distribution Management.

"We are forced to adhere to their standard, or try to better it."

Transport Minister Jean Marchand raised the threat of nationalizing CP Rail when he spoke to reporters a year ago after saying that the transport system is in a mess. He has since stepped back from that position, indicating there are no plans for a takeover of CP Rail operations.

Hunt Illegal Immigrants

OTTAWA (CP) — A computer system is being used to help government track down illegal immigrants, Immigration Minister Robert Andras said Tuesday.

"Enforcement activities are being stepped up by assigning extra staff to investigation duties, and utilizing computer-stored information on non-immigrants as investigative tools," he told a Commons committee studying his department's 1975-76 spending estimates.

Two projects now are under way "to follow up on persons whose authorized period of stay in Canada has expired."

"Large scale illegal immigration can undermine attempts to manage the immigration program," he said. "Equally important is that illegal immigrants find themselves exposed to exploitation by employers and unscrupulous agents."

Expect Investment

OTTAWA (CP) — Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie said Tuesday he has "made it clear to the auto industry that we expect them to invest in Canada on the same relative basis as in the United States."

May Give Facts

OTTAWA (CP) — Parts of an RCMP report on relationships between the Seafarers' International Union (SIU) and politicians might be made public, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said Tuesday.

Fish Diseased

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Michigan resource authorities have buried 2.1 million coho salmon and 500,000 rainbow trout this month because they were diseased.

Authorities said the whirling disease, which causes infected fish to gyrate, eventually may reach Ontario, the newspaper says.

Keep Police Out

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Mayor Clifford Hodgkins of West Lincoln is aware the township is paying $225,000 a year for police protection it does not get—but that does not disturb him.

Because the township is in the regional municipality of Niagara, it must pay its share—slightly more than $225,000—toward the $11.5-million budget for Niagara Regional Police. But the township is policed by the Ontario Provincial Police.

Mayor Hodgkins said Tuesday "we are happy with the operation of the OPP, although we don't receive any report of their activities here.

"The way things are working out, we just don't want the regional force and will pay without argument our share to keep them out."

Novelist Scores

EDMONTON (CP) — The first sale by a Canadian novelist to a major United States market in 25 years has been reported by the literary arts branch of the Alberta department of culture, youth and recreation. Bird At The Window, by Jan Truss, appears in the April, 1975, issue of Redbook, which has an estimated 2.5 million readers.

PC MPs Said Urging End To Big Blue Machine Image

TORONTO (CP) — Progressive Conservative MPs representing Ontario ridings advised two provincial party chiefs to "drop the Big Blue Machine image" during a meeting in Ottawa last December, says a report released Tuesday by an opposition member of the legislature.

Pat Reid, elected for Rainy River as a Liberal-Labor member but a leading member of the Liberal caucus, showed reporters minutes of the meeting, which quoted federal Conservatives as saying Premier William Davis "must acquire more humility" and "make himself more available to the man on the street—to be more friendly and more available to people."

The MPs also told the two at the meeting—Hugh MacAdam, provincial party organizer and close advisee to the premier, and Ross DeGeer, party executive director—to "try and drop the Big Blue Machine image which is having a rather negative effect on the people of Ontario."

Mr. Reid said a copy of the minutes, sent to Ontario Conservative MPs by Gus Mitges, Grenville-Dundas MP and secretary of the Ontario caucus, "just arrived on my desk."

He asked the premier in the legislature if he had seen the document which says the Davis government "is alienating the province due to policies regarding teachers, public servants, organized labor, rural people."

Mr. Davis said he had not seen it, but "I would be delighted if the honorable member would send me a copy. It sounds more like a speech by the leader of the Liberal party than a document."

A spokesman at Mr. Mitges' office said he was out of the country this week.

Other advice in the minutes: —Emphasize positive accomplishments of the government.

—Forget about regional government.

—Mr. Davis should travel alone instead of taking the entire cabinet around the province.

—Admit mistakes so people will feel more comfortable.

It also said the premier should pass some of the criticism in the house to his ministers and encourage them to make major speeches.

The minutes also report that Paul Dick, Conservative MP for Lanark—Renfrew Carleton, was elected to represent federal members on a political committee "that the premier has set up." Lincoln Alexander, MP for Hamilton West, was elected as an alternate.

Rent Review Boards Said Costly to Tenants

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition critics are grasping at straws when they suggest the establishment of a rent-review board in Ontario, Housing Minister Donald Irvine said Tuesday.

"The people who lose when you introduce rent controls or rent review-boards are tenants and we don't want that to happen here," he said.

He was speaking outside the legislature after question period. New Democratic Party leader Stephen Lewis and Liberal house leader James Breithaupt both told Mr. Irvine to consider setting up a rent-review board.

"The NDP felt very confident we wouldn't be able to come up with a statement outlining our housing program for the last fiscal year," Mr. Irvine said. "But we produced figures showing we had achieved 94 per cent of our projections for housing starts and accelerated lot development.

Alberta Reports Big Cash Surplus

EDMONTON (CP) — Huge increases in oil and natural gas revenue gave the Alberta government a $370-million cash surplus for the first nine months of the 1974-75 fiscal year, compared with a $72-million deficit in the nine months of the previous fiscal year.

Provincial Auditor D. W. Rogers, in an interim financial statement released Tuesday said petroleum and gas revenue during the nine months ended Dec. 31 increased to $937,699,695 from $415,815,394 in the same period of the 1973-74 fiscal year.

The province's fiscal year is from April 1 to March 31.

The increase was attributed to provincial royalties—a tax on production—levied against higher oil price of $6.50 a barrel agreed on in April, 1974. The previous price was about $4.25.

Most of the revenue increase came from crude oil royalties which jumped by almost $480 million to $701 million during the nine-month period of the fiscal year ended March 31 compared with $210 million in the same period of the 1973-74 fiscal year.

Alberta also received a concessionary federal contribution of $153 million from the oil export tax. Ottawa shared the export tax revenue on a 50-50 basis only to the end of April, 1974.

At the end of the 1974 calendar year, Alberta had total cash and investments of $843 million compared with $237 million at the end of 1973, an increase of more than $605 million.

Won't Budge

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario is not looking for "an adversary role" with the federal government but will not budge from its opposition to an increase in gas and oil prices, Premier William Davis said Tuesday.

Mr. Davis told a luncheon of Toronto businessmen that Ontario would have to bear the brunt of any price increase—a form of tax which would accrue to the producing provinces and the federal government.

Pension Cheques Tied Up

Belleville, Trenton Mailmen on Strike

STAFF AND CP

Belleville and Trenton have joined the growing list of cities without mail service today as the 16,500-member Letter Carriers' Union of Canada begin rotating strikes after taking Wednesday off, to show good faith at the bargaining process.

Jim Campbell, president of Local 45 of the LCUC, said today Belleville's strike will be for 48 hours, longer than other strikes, because the city is a "main link between Toronto and Montreal."

Meanwhile local officials began negotiations with national union organizers in Ottawa to modify the Belleville walk out to allow delivery of more than 15,000 old age pension cheques.

Union officials learned from inside workers this morning that pension cheques were tied up in the mails inside the post office.

Jim Campbell said he is asking the national union to allow Belleville letter carriers back into the job "only to deliver these essential cheques."

About 50 letter carriers at Belleville and Trenton walked off their jobs early this morning, bringing mail delivery in both cities to a halt. The fate of rural mail delivery is not known. Inside postal workers, members of another union, are on the job.

Postmen in both cities were notified of the rotating strikes at midnight. Picket lines have been set up at Belleville's post office but not at Trenton.

Belleville's postmaster Roy Wainwright said today he hoped rural mail delivery could continue but added it depends on whether contract carriers can cross the picket lines. Trenton postmaster Gordon Hanna said he expected rural route delivery to be uninterrupted. The strike affects about 40 postmen in Belleville and 16 in Trenton.

Mr. Wainwright said postal pickup throughout the city will continue for security reasons but he advised residents not to mail letters until the strike is over. Mr. Hanna said mail pickup in Trenton would also continue for security reasons. Postmen in Peterborough, Napanee and Brockville are also out today.

In Red Deer, Alberta, a union spokesman said letter carriers in all parts of the province, except Edmonton and Calgary, will not work today. Edmonton letter carriers were off their jobs Tuesday.

The negotiations in Ottawa lasted until after midnight Wednesday night with both sides going away to assess the slight modifications in positions made during the day.

Mr. Decarie said the two parties were close to agreement. "The talks are moving along very well," he said.

Quebec Dockers Ordered to Work

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill to force striking Quebec longshoremen back to work received Commons approval Wednesday as Parliament made its third intervention since October in a crucial labor dispute.

The bill, which would legislate terms of a conciliation report as the basis for a contract, still must be approved by the Senate and given routine royal assent. That is to be done today.

In that event, the bill would order the 2,200 longshoremen at Montreal, Quebec City and Trois-Rivieres—and 320 cargo checkers and repairmen at Montreal and Quebec City—back to work Friday morning.

In the Commons, debate on the bill lasted less than five hours. Members of all parties said they regretted the action, but many argued that the strike was endangering livelihoods in Quebec by causing food grain shortages.

The bill provides for hourly wages of $7 by Jan. 1, 1977, compared with the current $5.10. The raise would be spread over a three-year contract.

But the main issue in dispute has been job security. The conciliation report, prepared by Judge Alan Gold of the Quebec provincial court, proposed 1,100 hours of guaranteed work a year in Montreal, 1,400 hours in Quebec City and 1,200 in Trois-Rivieres.

Union officials have argued for a full 40-hour-week all year round—2,080 hours of guaranteed work—and members have said they will not go back to work if the terms of the conciliation report are legislated.

Mounties Organize

OTTAWA (CP) — The Mounties have formed an association aimed at bringing them into the ranks of labor as brothers rather than strikebreakers, their historic role in union history.

The RCMP Association, led by Staff Sgt. Roy Riley, Wednesday urged the repeal of legislation which prevents RCMP officers from organizing as a union.

A brief to a commission under Judge Rene Marin, investigating the internal procedures of the RCMP, said the association is not seeking the right to strike.

"We do not believe that essential services such as police forces should be put in a position of having to resort to the strike weapon," A. G. Simester, the Ottawa lawyer who drew up the brief, said. "That is why we are presenting what we consider to be fair and reasonable requests which we feel will go a long way toward alleviating our grievances while, at the same time not contributing to ward public disorder."

General, President In Power Struggle

SAIGON (AP) — President Tran Van Huong offered today to make Gen. Duong Van Minh premier but refused Minh's demand for the presidency, political sources reported.

Meanwhile, the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong were apparently marking time on the battlefields, awaiting the outcome of the political maneuvering in Saigon. The North Vietnamese military command reported no planned action and Western intelligence sources said Communist-led forces have been in position to overrun the crowded city since Monday.

Minh, a retired general who led the 1963 coup that overthrew President Ngo Dinh Diem, sought the support of political, religious and military leaders at a series of meetings at his home. He refused to comment to reporters on the impasse.

Minh, 58, was a lieutenant colonel of state for three months after Diem's overthrow and murder. Fellow officers ousted him in the first of a series of coups, and he spent nearly four years in exile. After his return, he became nominal leader of the loose grouping of neutralist, anti-Communist factions that never pressed his opposition to Thieu vigorously enough to impel the president to retaliatory action.

Should Minh take over, his first action is expected to be a proposal for a ceasefire and negotiations to form the coalition government with the Communists, envisioned by the 1973 Paris peace agreement. However, the Viet Cong, which rejected such a proposal by Huong Wednesday, has given no indication it will deal with Minh.

Ford Given Leave to Use Army to Evacuate Vietnamese

WASHINGTON (AP) — Turning aside fears of new U.S. combat deaths, Congress early today voted to give President Ford authority to use American military forces if necessary to evacuate Vietnamese as well as Americans from South Vietnam.

Authority to use military forces was approved by the House in a 327-million aid bill approved 220 to 187 this morning, and by the Senate in a 250-million aid bill approved 75 to 17 Wednesday.

House and Senate representatives expected to begin work later today on a compromise.

President Ford had asked Congress to approve $250 million in humanitarian aid for South Vietnam, authorize the use of U.S. troops to evacuate Americans and Vietnamese and vote $722 million military aid.

By its actions, Congress approved the first two requests. But the chances of approving more military funds appear dim. Ford told reporters Wednesday night that he now was going to review the military aid request.

On both sides of the Capitol, opponents of the bill contended Congress was giving the president unlimited authority to use whatever U.S. forces he believes are needed at whatever risk.

"If we want a bloodbath in South Vietnam, the best way to do it is to send in U.S. troops to evacuate foreign nationals," Senator Floyd Haskell (Dem.-Colo.) told the Senate.

But other congressmen, including veteran foes of America's involvement in the Vietnam war, said the U.S. has a moral obligation to try to get endangered South Vietnamese out.

"It is a crack in the door, I want you that," said Senator Hubert Humphrey (Dem.-Minn.). "But you've got to trust somebody. You can't run evacuation programs from the Congress."

Representative Donald Fraser (Dem.-Minn.) said the lives of Vietnamese who have aided Americans are in danger and "we owe it to ourselves and to a sense of decency to make efforts to get them out."

The House passed its bill at 2:40 a.m. today after a 19-hour session. The bill's $327 million includes $150 million new money for evacuation efforts and humanitarian aid for South Vietnam, plus authority to spend $177 million previously approved by Congress for humanitarian aid.

Ford's $250-million bill includes a $100 million contingency fund for humanitarian aid and evacuation, $150 million for humanitarian projects in Cambodia as well as South Vietnam.

The House bill would authorize a far larger U.S. military evacuation operation than the Senate's. The two bills also take different basic approaches to authorizing Ford to use U.S. forces.

The Senate bill simply states that the president is authorized to use U.S. forces for evacuation of Americans and endangered South Vietnamese and their dependents under the following restrictions:

"The Americans and South Vietnamese must be under "direct and imminent threat" of being killed and diplomatic efforts must be made first to win their evacuation without force.

"U.S. forces used to evacuate South Vietnamese would be limited to those there to evacuate Americans and their dependents; they could not go into new areas for the South Vietnamese and could not be exposed to hostilities longer in order to get the Vietnamese out.

The House bill authorized "minimum use of necessary force" and specifically sets aside five laws passed by Congress prohibiting reintroduction of U.S. forces into hostilities in Indochina.

The House also approved 229 to 72 a finding that the humanitarian aid and evacuation authority are needed because of the Communists "flagrant violations" of the 1973 Paris peace accords and their "aggression" against South Vietnam.

An amendment prohibiting any of the $327 million from benefiting the North Vietnamese or Viet Cong either directly or indirectly was approved 343 to 71.

Vietnam War Over Says Relieved Ford

WASHINGTON (AP) — After having declared an end to U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war, President Ford seemed like a man relieved of a burden as he rendered about the Vietnam era.

Ford said he has "mixed emotions" about it all. "That's not the way I wished it had ended but you have to be realistic," he told group of reporters aboard Air Force One on the way back to Washington after a day-long trip to New Orleans.

When he earlier told a cheering crowd at Tulane University that the Vietnam war "has cost us the U.S., did he have the sense that he was ending an era?

"I think so, yes," Ford replied. "After all, it's been a lonely long era."

Aboard Air Force One, Ford said he had been concerned beforehand about what kind of reaction he might get at Tulane.

"Some Legislators warned I had told him "Tulane had been kind of a hotspot during the Vietnam war," Ford said. "They were a bit apprehensive."

But instead, the overflow crowd of 4,700 interrupted his 18-minute speech a dozen times with applause and gave him a standing ovation at the end.

In the speech, Ford said he was saddened by the events in Indochina but added: "They do not portend the end of the world, nor the end of American leadership in the world."

The students shouted their approval when Ford declared that "America can regain the sense of pride that existed before Vietnam."

And the loudest applause came when he said: "It cannot be achieved by refighting a war that is finished."

Award of Musical Merit

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Green admire Cultural Award painting presented to Mr. Green last night as highlight of Artsfest '75. Mr. Green, a leader in the musical life of the city for 45 years through his association with the Salvation Army and its Robin Lake Music Camp, was recognized especially for teaching thousands of young people during his career. Alderman Jean Smith, right, representing the city, also presented an accompanying $100 cheque to the annual Cultural Award winner.

Salvation Army Man Is Award Winner

A man who came from the coal mines of Wales to Belleville 45 years ago became the eighth recipient of the city's Cultural Award Wednesday night.

Jack Green, cornet soloist, band conductor and teacher of thousands of young musicians over his years of association with the Salvation Army and its Robin Lake Music Camp, was honored.

It was a big night for Mr. Green, who last night was conducting the Concert Band in a joint concert with the Trenton barbershop group at Centennial Secondary School in the glad event of Artsfest '75.

This year the award took the form of a painting by local artist Barbara Whelan and a cheque for $100 presented by Alderman Jean Smith representing Mayor Robin Jeffery.

Mrs. Whelan's painting depicts Mr. Green's Salvation Army cap and cornet against a background of the Robin Lake camp.

Now retired as conductor of the local Salvation Army band, Mr. Green remains active in the musical life of the city as a performer and, particularly, as a teacher.

Receiving the award, the veteran musician said he had enjoyed working with young people all his life. "It's a great work."

Also on hand for the presentation ceremony were high-ranking local and regional Salvation Army officers, who added their tribute to Mr. Green.

Concert Brass Gives Solid Performance at Centennial

By EUGENE LANG

A rewarding evening was in store for the many hundreds who braved the April showers Wednesday night to attend an other attraction of Artsfest '75, this time a double-barrelled musical event made up of the Concert Brass and the Trentones.

Formed roughly three years ago, the Concert Brass consists of eighteen musicians of various ages who play those instruments from a band that we usually consider "blaring" — trumpets, horns, trombones, tubas and the like. Under the capable leadership of Jack Green, they demonstrated that they can possess mellowness and a warm wholesome softness of tone that belies our previous adjective. The eleven numbers they performed gave them ample opportunity to exhibit the many facets of their ensemble capabilities.

Three selections that were memorable in rendition were Bonaparte's Retreat, Ameican Patrol, and Jesus Christ Superstar, all arranged for the group by local musician Larry Brown. The trombones and trumpets in their trio tunes brought forth appreciative applause from out front. Perhaps more lively item could be used by the trumpets in future than the dragging measures of the Cornet Carillon. Euphonium soloist Bill Campbell negotiated his cello-like counterpart with ease and ability in his solo number.

In existence a little number of years, the Trenton-based barbershop group known as the Trentones added an aura of nostalgia as many of the known ditty from yesteryear was recreated in the old close harmony style that sets this type of unaccompanied singing apart from any other and gives it a distinctiveness all its own. Director Ray Williams cajoled and coerced from his forty-odd male voices fine blendings of tone, union of approach, and nuances of varying degrees. The closing number was outstanding in its delivery.

The Quartet Nothin' but Treble featured Grant McBride, Brenk Daniels, Ross Galloway and Art Brooks, who attained careful control and nicety of balance in their various songs.

Previous to the actual performance, a surprise was in store for Conductor Jack Green as he became the honored recipient of the annual Cultural Award given to the person who has who has contributed the most in any one year to the cause of the arts. In this instance music.

Alderman Jean Smith presented Mr. Green with a cheque for $100 and a specially commissioned painting created by local artist Mrs. Barbara Whelan. The painting memorializes Mr. Green's long life of dedication to the cause of music. Lt. Col. Ian Sutherlan Army with which he has been so actively associated for over many decades.

This award has been presented annually since 1968 by the City of Belleville to recognize those in this community who have given freely of their artistic talents and abilities for the betterment of all.

Thoughts in retrospect. A night of light music that brought out the best of two groups, in this, their joint initial appearance before local hearers. A slight shortening of the time length would make this impressive and one deletion from each organization. Everyone enjoyed this Brass-Barbershop evening of music, except those who weren't there.

Shelter Ordered

Belleville's downtown board of management will be installing a covered bus stop near the intersection of Front and Bridge Streets within a month, said board chairman Jack Ireland Wednesday.

The enclosure — designed for shopper convenience during bad weather — is being purchased by the board at a cost of approximately $1,700.

Explaining the cost, Mr. Ireland said the booth will be sturdy enough to resist vandalism.

Two CFB Hercs Airlift Canadians Out of Saigon

TRENTON — An armed forces Hercules from CFB Trenton arrived in Hong Kong today with 34 Canadians aboard after a flight from Saigon in South Viet Nam.

A defence department spokesman said today from Ottawa it is not known how many members of the Canadian mission in Saigon were aboard the evacuation flight.

The spokesman said he had no precise breakdown of the passengers but said there still are Canadians in South Viet Nam.

The external affairs department could not be reached for comment today.

The Hercules is one of two aircraft from CFB Trenton which have been in Hong Kong on standby duty since early April, one since April 4 and the other since April 7. Both planes, from 436 Squadron, were on training missions in the Pacific Ocean area before landing in Hong Kong.

Once there, external affairs department officials requested the aircraft remain on standby in case they were needed to airlift Canadians out of Saigon.

Hong Kong is a stop-over location in the approximate 24-week training mission each plane began in March. The aircraft were due back in Trenton April 10 and 17.

It is not known when they will return to the base.

A base spokesman said Wednesday the two planes are commanded by Trenton, residents, Capt. Murray Dunn and Maj. Cliff Zacharias.

The two are among 27 men now in Hong Kong. Fourteen of the men are attached to 436 Squadron, the base training squadron, while the remainder are from bases across Canada.

A defence department spokesman said 20 of the remaining Canadians are missionaries or in similar vocations who were reported to have shown no interest in being airlifted to Hong Kong. Ten journalists also remain in the country.

Earlier reports indicated eight people were still in South Viet Nam trying to get Vietnamese dependants to safety.

Industry Missing

PICTON — A new industry announced for Picton Edward in early 1975 has, to date, failed to receive a grant from the Ontario Development Corporation needed for operations to begin.

Galaplast Industries Inc., originally requested a loan of $353,000, from the ode but later agreed to change the request to $180,000. No grant has been announced, however.

Machinery and some raw materials were moved from Denver, Colo. where a Galaplast plant had been in operation.

Prince Edward director of economic development William Duggan this week told council he understands that the grant application has been rejected and Galaplast Industries Inc. "is not physically here."

The new industry had rented a hanger at Loch Slop industrial park from Wickes Canada Ltd. a recreational vehicle firm that folded operation here last spring and now is sub-leasing its space.

Last month Wickes instructed its lawyer to padlock the doors since Galaplast Industries Inc. had not paid its rent.

Mr. Duggan stressed he knows nothing definite concerning the fate of Galaplast.

Industry Take 2

Bloomfield reeve Ben Prinsen suggested potential "fly by night" industries should not be welcomed to the industrial park.

Mr. Duggan replied there was nothing "fly by night" in plans for Galaplast's location here.

"I don't know the internal financial structure of this company," said Mr. Duggan.

"They were recommended by the Ontario government," he added.

Reeve Says One-tier Study by End of Year

PICTON — County government will not be discussed at public meetings until late in 1975 predicts Hallowell reeve Keith MacDonald, chairman of Prince Edward County council's county government committee.

He told councillors this week a brief expanding the information relative to a restructured county government was presented to his committee recently by James Farrington of the ministry of treasury, economics and intergovernmental affairs.

He noted that in 1974 county council voted for a further study of a one — tier system of government and Mr. Farrington's brief based on the county's 1974 budget, estimated the costs for each municipality under a county government system.

Tax levies and a mill rate were estimated on the basis of last year's budget but other considerations such as police protection have not been studied.

"Data collection is fine and dandy but unless there is more public interest where is this going to go? asked reeve MacDonald, noting the small turn out last spring when public meetings on the county government proposal were held.

Picton reeve Larry Richardson observed there is a tendency for a small turn out at any public meeting, regardless of the issue.

"If we offer people the opportunity to come, isn't that really sufficient? he asked.

County warden Clifford Walker said he does not feel the figures provided to the county government committee are necessarily the needed figures.

"We need some way of projecting what a change to county government would cost," he stressed.

Parents Visit School

PICTON — Parents packed Prince Edward Collegiate Institute Wednesday for Achievement Night '75 presented in conjunction with Education Week.

Among the displays featured was a Metric exhibit titled What is a Hecto Pascal.

Also figgured was a slide show of students using the library at PECI.

Several theatre arts presentations provided highlights of the night and included hits such as Lady Luck.

Students Get Silver Opportunity

Morton-Parker Ltd. production manager Lawrence Hamilton points out the process used in making silverware to senior grade students of Trenton High School Wednesday. The 13 students toured the silverware manufacturer's plant in conjunction with an Education Week program to improve students' knowledge of Trenton Industry. Other grade 7 to 13 students visited a variety of Trenton plants.

Mayor Defends Regional Government

CHERRY VALLEY — "Do what you can to keep Prince Edward County as a unit and retain its identity" was the advice Mayor Gerald Richard of Newcastle offered Picton Rotarians and their guest at the annual Rural — Urban night held recently in Cherry Valley.

Mayor Richard is chief magistrate of a new town which includes four formerly separate municipalities in the regional district of Durham.

"Regional government in Durham is serving its purpose," declared the mayor in citing advantages of the new system.

He observed the rapid expansion of the city of Toronto and the vast amount of land held by developers as threats to land use for agricultural purposes. With amalgamation of planning boards and other services, regional government has resulted in recognition of the importance of preserving agricultural land, and even urban people have become concerned over land use. Under regional government agriculture is recognized as being of greater importance than ever before.

Mayor Richard noted under the regional system the regional municipal government has more authority and more financing municipal expenditures which have been based on land assessment is outdated. The tax structure must be revised and come from other sources to relieve the heavy burden on real estate.

Introduced by Rev. Robert Sherwin, Mayor Rickard was thanked by Dan Neilsen.

Carl Handley thanked the Rotary Club on behalf of guests attending with Rotarian hosts.

All-woman Honor Guard First in Canada's History

TRENTON A third of the 160 women at CFB Trenton will help write a new page in Canadian military history early next month.

Fifty women, drawn from all ranks of the service, will act as the first all-woman military guard of honor may when Lt.-Gov. Pauline McGibbon arrives at the base as guest of honor at an all-woman mess dinner.

The all-ranks mess dinner is being held in conjunction with International Woman's Year (IWY).

Base protocol officer Capt. Bob Burke said this week the formation of the guard of honor stems from suggestions made at the base aimed at commemorating IWY '75.

"Across Canada, different women in uniform at CFB Trenton, she is also one of 30 who will be part of Canadian military history as a member of Canada's first all-women guard of honor.

"You must have practice and you have to pull women off their jobs to practice."

Since the armed force are already working at minimum staff, taking the women from their jobs three half-days a week overloads the remaining staff members.

"You must also appreciate that these girls don't do this every day," said the captain. The women must learn to act in unison in marching and handling a rifle with military posture.

Private Susan McKinnon adjusts the lens of a camera in preparation for picture taking. The former Toronto resident is a photography technician and one of 160 different projects," he said. At CFB Trenton, the decision was made to create an all-woman honor guard "to be used for specific occasions".

That occasion will arise with the arrival of Lt.-Gov. McGibbon. Since the Ontario Lieutenant-Governor is of viceregal status, said Capt. Burke, military protocol demands a guard of honor, a duty normally fulfilled by the male counterpart of the military.

Since March, the 30 women have been drilling three days each week to acquire the skills needed in an honor guard.

Creation of a guard in today's military, said Capt. Burke, "is a very difficult task these days".

Lathe Operation

Conflict and Political Upheaval in a World 30 Years Removed from VE-day

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

As April, 1975, recedes into May, we are coming up to the 30th anniversary of the final liberation of the captive European nations of Nazi Germany and on May 8 of the end of the war in Europe.

For those who remember, it's hard to believe we are separated from those still dynamic events by 30 years, every one of them filled with wars, rumors of wars and threats of wars, plus other unanticipated shocks to the human system, social as well as economic.

Since 1945 and literally within days of the end of the global war first in Europe then in Asia on Aug. 14, 1945, the anti-colonial wars we have been familiar with in our time would begin. The determined leaders who started them would call them "wars of liberation."

And the major Western nations, with colonial empires about to be partitioned, were confused. Surely the "liberation" had already taken place with the freeing of the great democracies of Western Europe, France, Holland, Belgium, Denark, Norway and Czechoslovakia from Nazi terror and horrible misrule.

Yet in Asia, the Middle East and later Africa, most of these historic democracies would be divested of empires by the indigenous peoples they ruled. The Dutch East Indies would soon become the independent giant island republic of Indonesia.

There would be a brutal guerrilla war in British Malaya, one which the British won, then set about to form the multi-racial independent Southeast Asian kingdom of Malaysia.

A liberated Burma would go its own not entirely happy way as a socialist state angry with all its neighbors, Communist-created as well as non-Communist.

The tragic dissolution of British India into warring Pakistan and India with the terrible bloodbath of 1947-48, still was three years away from the end of the war in Asia in August, 1945.

In fact the war's end came so fast in Asia that British troops were requesting surrending Japanese troops to help them keep law and order in the European colonies from which they had conquered, in 1942-43 and whose conquest loosened forever the bonds of European empires in Asia, which appeared so strong before Pearl Harbor.

The Vietnam conflict still rages, would break out within weeks of the end of war in Asia, with French-indoctrinated Ho Chi Minh, who learned Marxism in Paris universities, fighting the colonial French with the weapons dropped to what would be the Viet Minh Communists, during the Japanese occupation.

In the Middle East, the British would be forced to leave the Syrian mandate carved out arbitrarily for them in 1919 and the British would go through the sad experience of keeping a hopeless peace in their Palestine mandate which world Jewry wanted for a homeland for the Jews.

And yet on balance, as the economists like to put it, the end of the global conflict in 1945 would lead to many downstream benefits for the future world of the 20s and 30s, the formation at last of a European Common Market, the bursting forth of many areas of need for mankind, advances in medicine and the sciences, and a genuine awareness after 1945 that we could never afford this kind of a war again and so far have kept to that determination.

Even the much-criticized "nuclear balance of terror" of the 50s and 70s played its role in keeping atomic weapons in the arsenals and not on the launching pads.

Hospital Draws Praise

Not for the first time, Belleville General Hospital has come in for praise from outside observers.

Last week The Intelligencer reported the comments of the Rev. H. Blondell, a Detroit priest who came here after several of his parishioners were involved in a major traffic accident.

Mr. Blondell was high in his praise of the nursing staff and of a hospital supervisor who went out of her way to reassure the injured as well as the family by telephone.

The letter echoes similar commendation by other visitors whose enforced confinement has been eased by expert care and a friendly atmosphere at BGH.

In the same vein, the Dean of the Faculty of Medicine at Queen's University, Douglas Waugh, in a recent letter to The Kingston Whig-Standard, has this to say of the extended campus teaching program in Belleville as it affects BGH: ". . . It is true that distance will create logistic problems for both teachers and students. I do not believe, however, that this will be reflected in a lower quality of education at Belleville General Hospital. Indeed, the calibre of the medical staff at that hospital and the enthusiasm with which it has welcomed us convince me that, with adequate financing, the quality of education would be of the highest order."

Recognition such as this is not given lightly, so there will be renewed satisfaction among hospital staff and public alike that BGH has been accorded so high once again. No hospital can afford to be second rate, but when it provides first-rate care, combined with that something extra in the human touch, then a community is fortunate indeed.

Shifting the Blame

For a profession that draws so much publicity to itself, all the way from teacher salary negotiations to board disapproval of people under its jurisdiction failing to the press, the education field is sensitive to a degree

There was Hastings board's chagrin about the Press getting wind of a proposed program of sex education. Now the Hastings-Prince Edward Separate School Board, left without an attendance counselling service, is taking of a possible misunderstanding of a "press report which may have given it the wrong slant."

The report had to do with questioning of the efficiency of the Family and Children's Services of Hastings County in the area of attendance counselling by Maynooth trustee Rev. L. P. Casartelli. However, Father Casartelli is since reported to have reaffirmed his original position, stating he would not go back on his word.

It is not uncommon for individuals and boards to plead they have been misquoted, or misinterpreted, when something appears in print that displeases them. The Press for its part does not claim to be absolutely correct on every occasion, and it certainly is ready to correction where justified. In the above case that it strikes us as yet another case of a public board attempting to shift the blame elsewhere.

An 'Indifferent' Public

From Bishop Fulton Sheen comes an expression of concern that echoes the feelings of many in this 200th anniversary year in America of a decline in the sense of apathy abroad in the land, "almost of indifference."

He senses too a crisis of leadership, noting that great leaders are born not in times of affluence but rather of adversity.

Economic adversity there is in the United States, but the overall economic and political climate is not of the backs-to-the-wall nature that might bring about the re-emergence of a Roosevelt or a Truman.

Meanwhile, with regard to the fading U.S. role in Southeast Asia, there is irony in the contemplation of what went before politically in Cambodia and what is in effect now. If we are concerned primarily with the encroachment of Communism and the consequent threat to civil liberties, the regime the Reds have supplanted was no paragon of virtue either.

Similarly in South Vietnam governments have come and gone, each scarcely less corrupt than the one that went before. Now the country apparently is entering the death throes of what element of democracy remains, with President Thieu gone and an aging and ailing vice-president in his place.

Jocelyn Boosts Canada

When it comes to golf, it used to be Al Balding and Stan Leonard who carried the flag for Canada.

They are now virtually retired from the pro circuit and today, in this International Women's Year, it is the lively and attractive Jocelyn Bourassa, from Shawinigan, who has stolen the limelight. Miss Bourassa was running second for a time to winner Sandra Palmer in this big women's tournament at Palm Springs, in the shade of the mountains and under the warm California sun, at the weekend.

In the end the Quebec player slipped to 6th place with several others, but her Gallic temperament, banter and accent won her a lot of attention, and there were comments by U.S. commentators to Montreal and next year's Olympics.

Whenever the world situation becomes too much it is pleasant to tune into golf or tennis such as the Big Four women's tournament in Texas won by Chris Evert.

Women are now competing for bigger than ever prize money in tennis and golf — and the rewards are doing a lot of looking good.

An Authoritarian Law

Farm Products Act Sets Quotas

By DON O'HEARN

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — One of the serious indictments that can be made against the 30 years the PC rule in Ontario is that it initiated and has kept on the books one of the most obnoxious pieces of law to appear in Canada, and perhaps, no probably, the most obnoxious law we have ever had in the province.

Now, rather than abolish this law, as it has been advised to do by one of its own commissions, it has enlarged it.

The house, after a stormy, but short debate last week, passed Bill 27, an Act to Amend the Farm Products Marketing Act.

This amendment means that chicks, eggs, hatchery eggs and fowl now go under the same authoritarian control which tobacco has been in Ontario for a couple of decades.

And believe me it is authoritarian.

Everybody producing eggs and poultry will be under quota.

Repugnant as this is, it may be necessary, but the means used to achieve it are as offensive as the controls over tobacco have always been offensive, and they have always had a very bad smell to anyone with even slight knowledge of and faith in our political system.

For they give the provincial marketing board and local boards the power to fix quotas and do other unseemly things for any reason that they "consider proper."

And they give agents of the boards power of entry without a search warrant.

Agriculture and Food Minister Bill Stewart would say these powers are essential. But in saying so he would be ignoring the advice of the government's most renowned expert on these matters.

In 1972 J.C. McIlturi, in the third report of his inquiry into civil rights came out most strongly against the scope given these boards in Ontario.

What he found most offensive was the wording of "consider proper."

The former chief justice was not a man for tirades but he said such a broad authority should not be handed out and that, if really necessary, legislation should be spelled out in much more detail.

But his words might as well have been spoken to the winds. They have been ignored.

From which can we take the conclusion, that when it come to principle the PC's don't know the rules of the game.

Hopes of U.S. Recovery to Offset Pressure on $ Here

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

For more than a year, the Canadian dollar has been under steady pressure on foreign-exchange markets. It recently fell below 98.5 cents (U.S.), its lowest value since September, 1971.

Whether the decline is good news or bad depends upon your point of view.

— A weakening dollar might help to ease world unemployment rate (7.2 per cent of the labor force) by making our exports less costly in foreign markets, and making imported foreign goods more expensive here.

—But it contributes to inflationary pressures, because we have no alternative but to keep on importing a wide range of items. And it's becoming increasingly obvious, as inflation pushes wage demands higher and higher, that unemployment is rising partly because many employers can't afford the increases demanded of them.

The movement of the dollar—or of any currency—is tied directly to the country's trade balance.

Canada's foreign trade has been in trouble for many months now, basically for two reasons:

—The five-fold increase in the price of the crude oil that Eastern Canada imports from the cartel, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

—The worldwide recession (itself largely attributable to soaring international oil prices) that has reduced the demand for many of the Canadian raw materials that feed the factories of the United States, United Kingdom, European Community and Japan.

The real value of our exports (discounting inflation) fell by seven per cent last year.

The drop in the value on Canada's foreign trade in goods and services more than tripled, to $2,463,000,000 from $783-million

With the aid of an assistant he has prepared a report with 50 recommendations for improving traffic safety in Ontario and Edward Island. He has distributed 700 copies to government, county leaders and various organizations in the island.

"The response has been very good," he says. "A number of organizations have said they plan to use the report as a basis for discussion and where plan to enforce it."

Mr. McDonald said he undertook the project—it included research from other countries—because he is concerned about the high accident rate on the roads.

One of the recommendations would reduce speed limits to 50 miles an hour on many roads and another would make seat belts mandatory.

The so-called Chateau Cable—a group of Progressive Conservatives who have been meeting to discuss party philosophy prior to the next leadership convention—came in for a good deal of attention at this week's party caucus. Senior party members were said to have gave expressed annoyance that an organized faction was discussing prior to the convention, expected next spring.

There is hardly to prevent like-minded people from getting together," said a party member as saying, "but you don't have to hold the press about it."

When MP's send out questionnaires to their constituents, they usually have fewer than seven per cent returned. But Crawford Deaville (L—Toronto-Greenwood) has a new record. He has questioned, asking opinions on capital punishment, farm aid, and unemployment insurance, broadly speaking, he has brought $5.5 billion this year, according to an estimate by Wood Gundy Ltd., investment dealers.

What's ahead for the dollar? Much depends on whether the monetary authorities in Ottawa—who manage our currency—decide it suits the Canadian dollar on the open market.

They are well equipped to do so because such support—our reserves of foreign exchange were a healthy $5.8 billion at the beginning of this month.

But since Ottawa has allowed the Canadian dollar to drift down this long and this far, it may allow it to keep on sinking.

With the worldwide recession still under way, Canada may be fortunate if this year's trade deficit is no worse than last year's.

Any real improvement in our trade outlook rests largely on the success or failure of the Ford administration's recent measures to revive the economy of the United States, which takes two-thirds of our exports.

The movement of investment capital also has a vital impact on foreign-exchange rates.

To a considerable extent, the weakness in the Canadian dollar can be interpreted as a lack of confidence in our economy among international investors.

Canada is going through a recession—there can no longer be any quibbling about definitions—and our federal government appears to be exhibiting a lofty lack of interest in the fundamental task of reinitiating real growth.

That appearance may yet may not be altered when Finance Minister John Turner brings down a new federal budget next month.

But until the current economic prospects do become brighter, it would be suicidal to intervene in some positive way, the Canadian dollar would likely to remain under pressure.

Sales Outlet Planned For Crafts, Produce

BANCROFT — Plans for the operation of a Farmers' Market and a Flea Market are well under way at the ARC Industries workshop at L'Amable.

The Market, which is proposed to operate each Saturday during July and August, will be located on property located at the South Baptiste Lake Road and Highway 62 north.

The property has been donated to the workshop for the market by the owners of the KOA Campground there.

The clients and staff from the workshop will be operating a concession stall and also will have crafts, tomato plants and other vegetables for sale.

According to ARC senior supervisor Ray Pronovitch, "We will be charging any exhibitors $2 membership and $2 weekly. We won't be providing any stalls . . . people will have to provide their own."

Mr. Pronovitch feels there is a demand for this type of operation in the North Hastings area.

"People have no outlet for their crafts or the produce of small market gardens," he said.

Not only will the produce of local market gardens be welcome but also the quilts, home baked goods and handwork as well as preserves, honey and maple syrup.

"There are no geographical restrictions for exhibiting," said Mr. Pronovitch. "We hope to have some folks from the Belleville, Prince Edward County and Peterborough areas."

At the moment the clients at the local ARC industries are busy making dolls and candles for sale as well as tending the produce crop in the inside greenhouse that they operate.

As part of the school safety program run by the Bancroft detachment of the OPP, Constable Les Hebhard uses an Ontario Hydro safety display to demonstrate the dangers of electricity to students.

Hydro Dangers Seen

BANCROFT — The lights flash, the wires glow and the sounds of the children' gasps indicate the lesson on safety with hydro that Constable Les Hebbard has just taught has been an unqualified success.

As Community Services officer for the Bancroft detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police, Constable Hebbard will be visiting every school in North Hastings and Lennox and Addington Counties during the next two months with a dramatic display from Ontario Hydro showing the school children what can happen if safety practices aren't followed.

"We're doing this display because we're into the schools a great deal with our other safety programs," said Constable Hebbard.

Only seven of the hydro displays are available for use in the schools and lessons by the OPP officers are geared to the age level on the children.

In addition to the hydro display, Constable Hebbard also introduces the kids to "Trevor" the safety bug.

Parents Studying Behavior

BANCROFT — A group of 25 North Hastings parents who have young teenage children have been meeting for the last three weeks with Jack Dixon of the Hastings County Board of Education in an effort to understand more fully their children.

The course is sponsored by the parents groups at North Hastings Senior Elementary School in Bancroft and the parents who attend have a concern for their children at heart.

"I have a lot of confidence in our young people and I've very rarely had one let me down," Mr. Dixon told the local parents.

"However as much as I'm optimistic about them, we must realize that we certainly do have some young people who need a great deal of help," said Mr. Dixon.

The sessions at the local school will continues for another week.

Pay Bill Stalled

Speaker Backs NDP Argument

OTTAWA (CP) — Improper amendments to the bill which would increase parliamentary salaries by one-third brought consideration of the proposed raise to an abrupt but temporary halt Wednesday.

Commons Speaker James Jerome backed a New Democratic Party argument that the bill was improperly amended in committee and ruled that "I can't allow it to proceed."

NDP House Leader Stanley Knowles had argued that the bill should be sent back to committee, but Mr. Jerome said he could not order such a move.

Instead, he ordered that the bill be stripped of the offending clauses and returned to the House only after being reprinted. New amendments would be considered after the bill came back to the Commons.

Mr. Knowles said a government spokesman agreed that it was unlikely to resurface in the House until sometime next week.

The bill would increase MP salaries to $24,600, retroactive to July 8, 1974, from the current $20,000.

Of the annual salary, $10,600 would be in the form of tax-free allowances. Cost-of-living raises of up to seven per cent a year also would be allowed during the current Parliament, with a commission set up to recommend subsequent increases.

Mr. Knowles, a vociferous opponent of the proposed raise, said outside the House that Mr. Jerome's decision was "an unsatisfied century."

"At least now the country will know by the delay what's going on."

The 66-year-old expert on Commons procedure told reporters the only precedent he had been able to find for a bill being stripped of committee amendments was in 1914.

But he acknowledged that the amendments, providing for the living-cost escalation and the commission for future increases, can be reinstated "if the government wants to put those dastardly things back in."

Mr. Knowles said if the government makes any more slips on the bill "I'll be ready" to act again, but the government spokesman said the bill will be studied for the next few days "because we'll want to be very careful."

Shulman Says Report Mentions SIU Payments

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. Morton Shulman, NDP member of the legislature for Toronto High Park, said Wednesday that a RCMP report, not released by the federal government, contains a sworn statement that three federal cabinet ministers received a total of $54,000 from the Seafarers International Union (SIU).

However, Federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said in Ottawa the report contained an unproven allegation by an SIU member who gave varying versions about the amounts of payments and the names of recipients.

The SIU member said he had proof but when RCMP investigated, said papers proving his allegation were missing, Mr. Allmand said.

Dr. Shulman said in an interview the money presumably came from shipping companies and was "for the purpose of ensuring that the federal cabinet did not enforce hay days regulations in union contracts."

Lay days are days when ships are in port, usually picking up or discharging cargo.

The report is of an investigation into allegations Dr. Shulman made last November that politicians and government officials had been bribed by SIU officials attempting to prevent action against waterfront violence.

Mr. Allmand said his hope is to release policing and allegations made, the names of persons who made the allegations and the conclusion reached by RCMP in each case.

Dr. Shulman, who said he learned of the contents of the report from a police source, said the report recommends against preferring charges, on grounds there was no proof the ministers received money from the SIU and, even if they did, they would be breaking no law.

Dr. Shulman said the sworn statement was to the effect that two cabinet ministers each were paid $21,000 and the third $12,000.

Mr. Allmand said figures given by the SIU member were between $54,000 and $75,000.

Dr. Shulman said he knows the names of the three cabinet ministers but said he would not give the names because "it would be very difficult for them to defend themselves."

The report outlines allegations that the SIU keeps two sets of books to avoid disclosure of political donations, he said.

Mr. Allmand said the investigation included a check into SIU finances but not a check into complaints of criminal behavior within the union because such allegations already were being investigated by Ontario Provincial Police.

Travel Control Bill To Be Rigidly Applied

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — "No statute in Ontario is going to be more rigidly and more ruthlessly enforced than Bill 168," Frank Drea, member of the legislature for Toronto Scarborough Centre and parliamentary assistant to the minister of consumer and commercial relations, said Wednesday.

The bill, known as the Travel Industry Act, is designed to protect the public from unscrupulous and fly-by-night travel operators. Unlicensed and shady operators might be fined up to $25,000 and a minimum of two years in jail for infractions.

Author of the bill, Mr. Drea said more than 200 delegates at the spring convention of the Ontario Motor Coach Association that the provincial police and rackets squad will police the new act "and they've never lost a case."

"The funny games are over," Mr. Drea said. "I hope anybody on the outside planning to pull a fast one realizes he will be made a horrible example of in the courts."

He said the new legislation will be passed in three weeks.

Lottery Is Popular

TORONTO (CP) — Robert Welch, minister of culture and recreation, was joking with his staff Wednesday about scalping Wintario lottery tickets.

"We're the victim of our own success," he said.

The reason for all the smiles in the ministry offices these days is the overwhelming public acceptance of the province's first-ever lottery.

A total of 2,160,000 tickets were printed for the first draw—to be held May 15—and 1,820,000 were released for sale April 17. The tickets were sold out within days and thousands more are being rushed to retail outlets.

Receptionist Susan Minas, stationed at her desk in Ontario Lottery Corp. headquarters in a downtown office tower, is besieged with telephone inquiries.

Prince Charles Starts His Tour of Arctic

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — The Prince of Wales arrived Thursday to a frigid sunset at the start of the Arctic leg of his 11-day Canadian tour.

Prince Charles, who began his visit in Ottawa Sunday, is spending most of his time in the Arctic, his first Northern trip since 1970 when he travelled here with Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip. The tour ends April 30 in Winnipeg.

Protected only by his camelhair top coat, wearing neither gloves nor hat, he still stopped for several minutes in freezing temperatures to chat with some of the 200 persons on hand to greet his aircraft.

Before departing the airport for his hotel and dinner with the commissioner and local officials, the young prince also picked up a new name.

In the Inuit language he is known as Atamaloo Pentecost-The Big Boss's Son—and that's the way the people awaiting his arrival referred to him.

There was no indication in his reception at this town of about 2,200 population of reports in Ottawa that the native people were upset at remarks he made Monday at a City Hall luncheon.

Tagak Curley, director of land claims for the Inuit Tapirisat of Canada which represents some 17,000 Eskimos, said the prince showed "no respect for Inuit integrity" when he said: "I shall be very, very careful as to whose land I rub.

"You never know what you are going to meet under the ice."

Today Charles begins his tour of the High Arctic by watching a snowmobile race here before flying north to Pangnirtung where he is to meet village officials, talk with local inhabitants and over-fly the newly-created Baffin Island National Park on his way back to Frobisher.

Communist Leader

For half a century William Kashtan has dedicated himself to advancing the cause of Communism in Canada. Mr. Kashtan joined the Young Communist League in 1927 and became leader of the Communist Party of Canada in 1963. (CP Photo)

Canadian Communist Looks Back Over Life

EDMONTON (CP) — For half a century William Kashtan has dedicated himself to advancing the cause of communism in Canada. He says he can see steady progress.

Mr. Kashtan, 63, joined the Young Communist League in 1927 and became leader of the Communist Party of Canada in 1963.

The product of a "working class family," Mr. Kashtan said he began reading Karl Marx at the age of 12 and became a Communist because of a "general feeling of dissatisfaction."

"Generally the workers hadn't the affluence one talks about and still don't have it. . . . Their conditions led to the feeling that there was a need for change.

"What assisted me in this regard was reading literature which my dad had brought home, including The Worker, which was published by the Communist party at that time.

"Reading the paper opened my eyes to the fact that there was a different way of seeing things, that one didn't have to accept poverty and indignity as a way of life, that there's a different kind of world possible if men set their minds to it and worked at it."

Mr. Kashtan, who lives in Toronto with his wife Della, remembers the lean years as a young party organizer in Toronto and Montreal. He was paid $4 a week and had to depend on friends for a room for the night or spend it in an all-night restaurant.

He remembers when the party was illegal in Canada and had to organize under another name or secretly. Authorities were never friendly to Communists, he said in an interview, and one of his earliest memories was of police breaking up an open-air meeting in Toronto.

"They threw me in a police van with two black eyes and I was charged with assault and battery of the police and I got 30 days in jail.

"I remember going down to Windsor when the auto plants were being shut down (during the Depression) and it was an exxie sight. Those big plants and not a worker to be seen.

"We had demonstrations every day, parades up and down the city asking for relief. And at that time, as now, a cold-blooded approach was taken by the establishment."

The Depression was the party's most active period and a time when its strength was the greatest, he said. It now has about 5,000 members.

Since the Depression, the party has had a poor reception from Canadian voters but Mr. Kashtan said this isn't discouraging.

"We don't measure our success by elections. . . .

"Generally speaking, we motivated ourselves by what we estimated to be the important question needed to be solved at a certain stage of development. . . .

"It's a measure of a people's development that they may support parties that have been betraying them all along. But we never betrayed the Canadian people.

"Sooner or later it will come out. It may not be in my lifetime but the politics we are emasculating are increasingly being taken up by others because they are correct."

Coke Goes Metric

OTTAWA (CP) — Coca Cola drinkers will get slightly more for their money under metric conversion, says company spokesman Don Metherel. Each of the 296, 300 and 750 ml rounded metric sizes introduced by Coca-Cola Ltd. to replace the 6½, 10 and 26-ounce sizes will contain about 15 ml more coke.

Australia's Alice Springs Now Is Hotbed of Violence

ALICE SPRINGS, Australia (Reuter)—Alice Springs, Australia's once sleepy desert settlement finally failed in novel A Town Like Alice, has become a hotbed of racial violence, drunkenness and prostitution.

With a floating population of 13,000, Alice Springs stands right in the centre of the continent. And, ironically, it has become the focal point of Australia's growing awareness of racial tension.

Flames in "the Alice," as the town is known, are being fanned by a crossfire of accusations from aborigines and the whites living in and around the town, troubled settlement.

The one point they agree on is that the underlying problem involves alcohol and its availability to the aborigines.

Publicans and liquor licence holders are leading the plea for greater control of drunkenness and rowdy behavior.

But aboriginal rights leaders say unscrupulous publicans have only themselves to blame since for the monster many helped create. Traditionally, aborigines in Australia have been protected from alcohol, and fear that its ready availability would cause a breakdown in black communities have apparently been realized.

It is estimated that between 15,000 and 20,000 aborigines live in the town and on nearby settlements.

Rights leaders say the vast majority of these people have lost dignity, discipline and respect for authority due to "grog running" in the town, which has a stagger top 71 liquor licences.

Rev. Jim Downing, chairman of the Institute for Aboriginal Development, is one of the community's strongest critics of alcohol dealers.

"For years they have served aboriginal and white drunks with impunity," he said. "Aboriginal girls only 13 and 14 years old are sold alcohol, and these girls become involved in prostitution."

Aboriginal rights workers charge:

—That taxi drivers carry flagons of wine to aboriginal reserves and sell them for $20 instead of the usual $2.

—That white staff on outstations near Alice Springs marking up the price of food and other goods sold to aborigines by up to 150 per cent.

—That white gas station attendants are charging $1 just to open on days they don't feel like working, and $2 on Sunday.

Aborigines at one settlement were refused access to fresh food by the manager for days at a time. While the build up in racial tension continues, fears grow that the basic causes of the problem will be overlooked and only the side issue treated.

Don't Reward a Tale-teller with Praise, Or You'll Raise a Nasty Little Tattler!

What do you do with a tattle-tale?

Once your children are old enough to distinguish right from wrong, you've got this problem to face. How do you encourage them to tell you about misdemeanors without rearing them to be little rats?

This is one of those dilemmas unable to be solved by a blanket approach. Saying "No tattling, ever" is only asking for eventual trouble, when there arises a situation you should have been told about.

As a general rule of thumb, most parents distinguish between petty or spiteful tattling, and useful reporting of activities which are potentially dangerous.

But if you have a child who is a chronic whiner — "Mummm-mee, Rickie is being baaaad again" — you might start to correct his behavior by first examining the reasons he may have for tale-telling.

Most often it is a need for attention that motivates a tattler. He may be hurt by unfavorable comparisons made between him and another child. Tattling on some mindred of that child's is his way of gaining status and equalizing the score.

Sometimes it is a straight case of jealousy among children in the same family. The child who feels less loved and admired will often try to bring about the downfall of the one he believes to be the parents' favorite.

There are other children who may not be jealous but who still need a tremendous amount of attention. Tattling is a signal that they are in need of praise and encouragement.

Quarrelsome kids often seek an adult to solve a fight they think they are losing. By reporting that their opponent cheated or "played dirty" they hope to turn the tide in their favor.

Some children snitch on others out of a sense of deep insecurity about their own ability to resist temptation. Their feeling seems to be that if they don't run and tell someone, they may end up being "bad" themselves. By leaving and tattling, they achieve recognition and get some moral support.

To stop the tattling cycle, take a positive rather than negative approach.

Don't say things like "Nobody likes a tattle-tale" to a child. He'll assume that he is despised and quickly adopt this feeling about himself.

A child who is scolded or punished for tattling will only learn to never tell you anything, and can carry this "don't get involved" attitude to extremes.

Refusing to punish the children who have been turned in by the tattler is an unsatisfactory solution, especially if they really have been misbehaving. The injustice of letting them go scot-free will simply lead to the building up of futile resentment in the tattler's mind.

In a positive way, you can sit down with the little blabbermouth, and explain that it is not his responsibility to tell you what others are doing. Advise him to leave any situation he finds unpleasant or wrong, but that unless another child is in danger of being harmed, that he need not run and tell.

Chatting with the child may help you to see why he has been tattling, and may give you the chance to build up his image of himself so that he doesn't need the old patterns of attention-getting.

Talking about honor, and honesty and integrity with your children can help them define who they are, and where they stand in your eyes.

As long as a child considers the source of authority for his actions as being outside himself, he will continue to look for praise for his "goodness" from others. He'll tattle on others, and expect to be tattled on, since the reward for good behavior does not come from inside himself.

The child who has a solid sense of morality, and who can exercise his own controls over his behavior without looking for a parent or teacher to back him up, is not going to be a tattle-tale.

Mayor Jeffrey listens to Dr. MacDonald

Honest Re-evaluation of Roles Can Benefit Both Men, Women

"We can't move heaven and earth over-night, but we've made a start."

Attributing this statement to Lieutenant - Governor Pauline McGibbon, Mayor Robin Jeffrey used it to illustrate the progress that women have made during the past decade. She was speaking to a classroom of students and adults attending a seminar on the changing roles of men and women at Moira Secondary School's Reflections of Man program Wednesday.

Also speaking on the topic was Dr. Eleanor MacDonald of Planned Parenthood of Ontario, who joined Mayor Jeffrey in her optimistic outlook, but added that "men need liberating as well.

"Sexual stereotyping holds men down too. They leave school and look to the future with no option but working to support themselves and family, having to bear this responsibility."

Dr. MacDonald cited the example of a couple she knows who have worked out an arrangement in which the woman works in a professional position, and the man stays home as househusband. They are perfectly happy, she said.

"I am a feminist," she said. "The feminist movement is all about evaluating and re-evaluating roles, and doing it honestly. Men and women need to work out together their joint responsibilities."

Mayor Jeffrey told the audience about the shifts in responsibilities that have taken place in her home since she became mayor.

"If any of you young women here are thinking of entering political life, test your fiance out before you marry to make sure he believes in complete equality and can develop thick skin as husband of a politician."

Mayor Jeffrey said that although she has not experienced male discrimination since her "trial period" when she first became an alderman nine years ago, she finds that women are often poor supporters of other women.

"The most hate-filled comments that reach me come from women," she said.

In discussing this problem, Dr. MacDonald suggested that women have been forced into competition by society, in order to catch a man and "success", they have to smile a lot when they're in public.

"When they get alone and free with each other, then they can let their hair down and really be bitchy," she said, but with a smile.

The resentment of women towards other women was "to deal with seriously, as one of the things that the feminist movement must face.

Getting the message across to women about the real meaning of liberation may eliminate some of that resentment and anxiety, suggested Dr. MacDonald.

"We aren't saying down with homemakers and mother s. We aren't saying that women have to go out and work. What we're saying is that you have to have a choice in order to have any kind of value system. If a woman chooses to be a homemaker, that's great. But we don't need more housewives by default," she said.

Integrating Handicapped New Goal of Education

The measure of any society is the provision it makes for its handicapped, r. J. G. Demeza, principal of Sir James Whitney School for the Deaf, old students at Moira Secondary School Wednesday.

Dr. Demeza was taking part in "Reflections of Man", the ay-long series of seminars organized at the school by Grade 13 English students.

"We do pretty well in Canada and in Ontario but we're not at the pinnacle of achievement yet," Dr. Demeza said.

He told students and guests of the school that there is a trend in educating the handicapped in the province to integration with regular classes.

He cautioned however, that there have been irrational uses of "good principle" when integration has been achieved at any cost.

"I'm not against in any way bringing the students into the mainstream of education. But we must focus on a wide range of needs of the handicapped." He said it is not practical for all school boards to provide for handicapped children at a local level. But in order to keep children more in their communities, provincial schools like Sir James Whitney have made changes recently designed to facilitate the eventual integration of the student.

"The key to integration is a good academic base," Dr. Demeza said, "so we start young." He said that the school has seven teachers who visit the homes of pre-schoolers.

Dr. Demeza added that new provincial programs allow student students, even those from northern Ontario, to go home on a regular basis. Only 125 of the 375 students at the school are resident on weekends now.

"When I started at the school the students went home only at Christmas."

Secretary Marjorie Prewer and her award-winning boss, Leslie Reid.

Leslie Reid Receives Award As NSA Boss of the Year

Deputy Director of Education for the Hastings County Board of Education, Leslie Reid received a surprise Wednesday night — the Boss of the Year award from the Belleville chapter of the National Secretaries Association.

Nominated by Marjorie Prewer, his secretary since 1969, Mr. Reid was given the award by last year's winner Wilf Wilkinson.

Mr. Reid began his career in Belleville as head of history at Belleville Collegiate and Vocational Institute, and became principal of Quinte Secondary School when it opened. He was later made assistant superintendent of education, and was appointed to his present position after several years on the educational administrative council.

Active as a lay-reader in his church, St. Margaret's on-the-Hill, Mr. Reid is also an enthusiastic promoter of YMCA fitness programs.

The award presentation followed the guest speaker for the evening, Pete Wickemeyer, manager of the new Proctor and Gamble Specialties Limited. He spoke on the role and accountability of secretaries, and the boss-secretary relationship.

A barbershop group from Trenton, Nuthin But Treble, entertained during the dinner, attended by 40 secretaries and their bosses, both male and female.

Healthy People Can Break Degrading Relationships

Dear Ann Landers: I am very curious about something. I have been reading your column for a long time and must admit the advice you hand out is pretty smart. But what would happen if YOU were madly in love with an alcoholic, a woman chaser, a gambler, etc? Would you break off the relationship as you advise others to do?

Don't you realize that some people who write to you have been deeply involved with no-goods for years and it's not easy to say goodbye? It's a way of life for them—and it beats being lonesome.

Please don't tell me you're too wise to get mixed up with crooks, cheats, liars and weaklings. Give me a good answer. What would you do?— There Now

Dear Now: If I were madly in love with a "no-good" I'd get professional help and find out what was wrong with me that couldn't enthrone myself from a relationship that was so degrading.

People who have a healthy regard for themselves don't settle for destructive and abodge involvements.

Dear Ann Landers: I have been suspicious of my daughter's behavior for quite some time. She is 18 and has been going steady with a boy, 17. Although I've questioned her repeatedly about the late hours and the condition of her clothes when she comes in at dawn she always swears she's a good girl.

Yesterday her diary fell out of her desk drawer. I read it. Three weeks ago she wrote, "Sam and I got married tonight. It was the happiest event of my whole life."

I believe they have had sex but I don't think they got married. Of course I am sick about it. How can I mention this to my daughter without letting her know I read her diary? I know she'll be angry.

Please help me out of this box. — Unhappy Mother

Dear Mother: You'd better confess to your daughter that you read her diary and ask her to forgive you.

It is too late to give her a lecture on morality and abstinence. If the girl is having sex with her boyfriend, she needs information so she can protect herself from becoming pregnant.

If you are not equal to the task, make an appointment for her with the family doctor.

Dear Ann Landers: There are six couples in our card club. We meet every week in each other's homes.

There's this one couple who speak to each other in German. They are partners in every game and it is impossible for us to tell if they are sending signals or what. Even before we sit down to play, and after, when we are having refreshments, they converse in German.

Several of us would like to tell them to knock off the foreign chit-chat or join another club. We think it is rude and it could also be unfair. Please help us. — Fed Up

Dear Fed: I'm not in your club so I can't tell that couple to knock off the foreign chit-chat. But surely, in your group of 10, there must be one person who has the courage to speak up and tell them it makes everyone uncomfortable when a language is spoken that no one understands. Since YOU wrote, I nominate you for the assignment.

Smoking and Vitamin C

Smoking, according to Dr. W. J. McCormick, of Toronto, is the "greatest despoiler of vitamin C, depletes the body of the vitamin by the adrenal reaction, and the toxics of the smoke which have a destructive action on the stored chemical."

"Over 10 years ago, in laboratory and clinical tests, it was found that the smoking of one cigarette, as ordinarily inhaled, destroyed the vitamin C content of an average orange. This observation was confirmed by researchers in the United States and in Poland."

from Get Well Naturally, by Linda Clark.

Next time you have a cold and start the business of going onto fruit juices — which is excellent — don't reach for a cigarette at the same time. If you go by me, never reach for one again.

Dear Doris: I have a girl friend who gives home parties for a firm. I mean the porties women invite other women to, to show off products and expect the women to make a purchase. This is directed to her:

I have attended jewelry, a bathroom products party, lingerie parties, sell plunge parties and kitchen container parties. I have also turned down invitations to other parties at your home.

I find I cannot afford you as a friend. I am sorry I had to buy my friendship with you. I hope one day you will get out of this business and that your friends (whom you have used for your own personal gain) still hold in the back of their minds enough friendship to become good friends again.

I'm only sorry I didn't realize this earlier. It would have saved me quite a bit of money.

Fed Up With Home Parties.

Dear Fed Up: I couldn't agree more. If a woman undertakes this kind of entertaining, it ought to be made very clear to everyone — at the time the invitation is given — just what the commercial angle is. Then the person invited either comes because of actual interest in the items to be shown, or politely declines the invitation, with no hard feelings.

Dear Doris: I am enclosing a quarter and a stamped envelope for "Betty At The Ball Game".

We always read your column. I clip them often for my scrap book, when they express my philosophy of life; and I hope they will influence my children when they grow up.

Mr. G.S.

Dear Mr. G.S.: You will enjoy "Betty" — which I am sending along.

I clip columns myself — other people's. I also keep a scrap book of some of my favorite poems. You are doing a fine thing in saving any bit of philosophy which you think you can share later with your children, as well as enjoy yourself (whether they are written by me or by somebody who can claim fame as a philosopher!)

There is helpful Canadian literature which may shed light on your problem. Write to Doris about it, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

Women's Exchange Sells Handicrafts

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP)— The women around here didn't wait for women's lib to get organized.

A visitor will find American handicrafts in a 165-year-old log room in the fall pine country. It houses the Sandhills Woman's Exchange, which opened its doors in 1922 and takes its name from the centuries-old tradition of barter in the region.

The exchange is devoted to "helping others to help themselves" by being volunteer agents for women and some men in the southeastern United States.

Handicrafted items are accepted on consignment and displayed in the cabin. A showroom, kitchen and tea room have been added.

The original operators of the exchange, a small group of women, travelled through the Carolinas teaching handicrafts and collecting the finished products. Today more than 100 members of the Sandhills organization act as salespeople and supervise the kitchen and tea room.

Prices range from 50 cents for a walnut-faced doll to $200 for a large patchwork quilt. The money is sent directly to the consignors and many persons have been able to educate their children and solve family health and housing problems by selling their handiwork.

Among the articles for sale are hooked and braided rugs, knitted and crocheted bed spreads, baby clothes, dolls, toys, needlepoint, pottery, bird houses, gingham sunbonnets and beeswax candles. One of the most popular items is pine kindling.

There is also a food counter with French-fried peanuts, oatmeal and raisin cookies, pound and fruit cakes, divinity and fudge, as well as a section of preserves, featuring the southern jelly made of scuppernong grapes.

Shrivel On the Vine

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — For the first time in the United States, raisins are being dried on the vine. Drying canes are secured on the spot they would be at pruning dormancy, then the vines are sprayed with a chemical which induces shrivel. The vine-dried raisin is lighter colored and sweeter tasting, says Vince Petrucci who developed the process.

Second Look Program

EDMONTON (CP) — The YWCA with assistance from the University of Alberta extension department, is offering a spring program for women who are contemplating changing their roles in life. Known as The Second Look, the course is designed for women whose family needs have changed or who are contemplating a change in their lives as a result of retirement or job placement.

AROUND TOWN with LANA ROBINSON

(. . . an advertising feature designed to keep you better informed of what's new around town.)

Just About Your Last Chance

That's the word from Vader's Car Sales, on College at North Front St. If you want the advantage of '74 savings on a new '74 Datsun, your time is just about run out. Vader's have only a few models left of their supply of '74, most of which are the great 710 series. So, I hate to preach, but you really will be sorry to miss out on such great cars at such great prices. Visit the new showroom and service facilities at Vader's and see what those '74s have to offer. I bet it will be an offer you just can't refuse.

Why Clean It . . . Or Try?

This may well be a question you are asking yourself as you face your worn-out carpets in an attempt to spring house-clean. Maybe giving up would be a victory. Sidney Ian's Carpet Division, at the rear of 179 Pinnacle St., could help you replenish your worn-out and sad-looking carpets very reasonably. And you name the color . . . and they have it! Sidney Ian's Carpet Division is also full of some very considerate people, who realize that ordinary business hours of 9 to 5 may not be convenient for you and your schedule. So all you have to do is to call 962-5744, and make an evening appointment. Sidney Ian's Carpet Division isn't your average carpet outlet, anyway you put it.

What A Property

If there are only two of you, or if you are looking for a model retirement home that speaks of elegance and taste, then you should call Grand Bend Real Estate at 968-6651 and ask to see this new listing on the West Hill. This is a two-bedroom bungalow, which outclasses the concept of 'bungalow'. It has a two-car garage, a workshop, a covered patio, a finished recreation room (with basement (even more room is finished), quality hard twist carpeting, aluminum siding and trees, shrubs and flowers on a 145 ft. deep lot. Now doesn't that sound like it merits a simple little phone call?

An Artistic Concept

Studio 231 is an interesting name for an apparel and wig boutique, I think. It has connotations of an artist's studio. And that's not a bad image, considering. At Studio 231, you can create a new you — with bright, happy 'Hello Spring' clothing, the latest in wig-wear and novel jewellery lines, particularly in Norwegian pewter. The artistry combines the selection of apparel at Studio 231, the helpfulness of the sales staff and your own good sense of taste about 'what is you'. Put them all together and you have a great new you. That's what sensational combinations are all about.

In Every Department

That's exactly where you're going to see evidence of the 58th Anniversary Sale now going on at Wrays Home Furnishers, 306 Front St. — BARGAINS IN EVERY DEPARTMENT. And this is not just any old merchandise. This is the same quality and attractiveness upon which Wrays has built its reputation all these 58 years. This merchandise is also the latest in furniture design, whatever your preference for furniture style. And remember that Wrays is your local headquarters for Colonial furniture. If your decor is Colonial, or whatever period, you'll find something delightful and different — and at a saving — at Wrays 58th anniversary sale right now.

In Case You Didn't Know

If you knew that Superior TV, 103 Cassiltes Rd., sells fine Hatashi component and console stereo equipment, good for you. Because I didn't know that until this week. And what's so great about that, besides the quality of the products themselves, is that Superior is applying its own five year warranty policy to Hatashi stereos, just as it does to Hatashi TVs. This means that you have a 100 per cent effective warranty on all parts and labor from Superior when you buy either a Hatashi TV or Stereo. And that says a lot, for both Hatashi products and for Superior's opinion of them.

While They Last

Belleview Glass and Mirror has a special shipment of patio doors, newly arrived, in 5 ft., 6 ft. and 8 ft. sets for immediate delivery. And Belleview is offering a 10 per cent discount on these patio doors while the supply lasts. These sunny days are a great inspiration for remodelling plans. Notes From The Tropical Garden

There are still a few Pomeranian puppies at the Tropical Garden Pet Shop, 301½ Front St. And arriving today, a new shipment of all kinds of fish for you aquarist types . . . Also new at the Tropical Garden are the latest fashion in bird cages, once made of bamboo. These cages are available up to seven tiers, and if you can't conceive what that looks like, you're welcome to visit the Tropical Garden this weekend and see for yourself. Maybe you'll like the cages so much, you'll buy a bird or two to match!

Lovely Sundays

Hopefully, we are now, officials and unofficially, Fahrenheit or Celsius, into the 'Lovely Sunday' season. This means that the driving will be good, the scenery exciting because of its changing-and dominance of green and the temperature will mount. And there is no nicer culmination to a Sunday drive over into The County than dining at the Ina Ou The Bay Tavern in Picton, which overlooks the Picton harbor. The day has been lovely, the Ina On The Bay surroundings can match the day. And the food is always up to Sunday fare standards. So show a Sunday — and a someone — that you appreciate them. Visit the Ina On The Bay for Sunday lunch or dinner.

Rosemary Brown 'Plain Socialist'

VICTORIA (CP) — The candidate is black, a woman and a serious contender for the national leadership of the New Democratic Party.

Rosemary Brown, member of the British Columbia legislature for Vancouver-Burrard, says there is a need to strengthen the party's base and clarify its goals and that she is the person to carry out these objectives.

"There is a job to be done in terms of building the party and making it a strong federal party which I think I can do," she said in an interview.

She is one of three who have declared they will seek the NDP leadership to succeed David Lewis, who suffered personal defeat in the July 8, 1974 federal election.

The other two are Ed Broadbent, 39-year-old member of Parliament for Oshawa-Whitby, and Lorne Nystrom, 32-year-old MP for York-Humber-Ville.

Ms. Brown, as she prefers to be known, is a relative newcomer to party politics, having been first elected in the B.C. general election of August, 1972, when the NDP ousted the Social Credit party, which had governed the province for 20 years.

But she has been active for some time in the B.C. Association for the Advancement of Colored People and is a member of the National Coalition of Canada.

She is also an ardent feminist and prior to her 1972 election success she was ombudsman for the Vancouver Status of Women Council.

One of her pet proposals since she was elected has been that the B.C. government set up a special department to handle women's matters but she has been opposed consistently on this by Premier Dave Barrett.

Was it discouragement on this matter or other provincial issues that led to her decision to run for the federal NDP leadership?

"No, it is not because of any dissatisfaction," she said with a lilting accent that betrays her roots in Jamaica, from which she emigrated 25 years ago at the age of 19

"If I could have chosen any other time for a leadership race it would not have been at this time. I think a better time for me would have been in another two years when I have completed my term as a provincial politician.

"But we have no control over these things."

She concedes that critics who say she lacks political experience have a point but adds that she can learn from those party MPs who have lengthy experience in the House of Commons.

Some reports have labelled Ms. Brown a radical socialist but she rejects such labels.

"I'm not a democratic socialist or a social democrat or a pragmatic democrat or just a plain, ordinary socialist."

She has strong views about what the federal party should be doing to clarify its position on such issues as public ownership of the country's economy.

She said the party should commit itself publicly to the kind of basic socialist policies outlined in the Regina Manifesto of 1933 which was adopted as a program for the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, forerunner to the NDP.

Ms. Brown's first priority if elected leader would be to start building a stronger national base for the party. (CP Photo)

Scientists Will Fight Pacific Whaling Fleets

MONTREAL (CP) — Beginning April 27, scientists in kayaks and high-powered rubber boats will try to disrupt part of the $150 million whaling industry in the northeastern Pacific Ocean.

They also will transmit, live, the sounds of suffering and dying whales to the International Whaling Commission meeting in London this June.

Part of a desperate attempt by the Greenpeace Foundation to save whales from extinction, the operation is the scientists' answer to "a critical problem of planetary survival.

"We are talking about the highest form of life in the oceans when we talk about whales," said Dr. Paul Spong. "The whale is the equivalent of humans on land. Some, the sperm and the killer whales, have outstanding brains."

Dr. Spong produced a montage of whale films, called Greenpeace Whale Show, in Montreal before embarking on a European tour during which he will try to stir public and government support to save the whales.

Dr. Spong, a physiological psychologist, has studied whales for eight years and lives in Alert Bay, B.C., 300 miles north of Vancouver.

wo years ago he became involved with the Greenpeace Foundation, originally formed in 1971 to protest United States nuclear testing in the Aleutian Islands.

His European trip will take him to the Soviet Union, where he hopes to meet the Soviet minister responsible for the 1968 ban on the killing of dolphins because of their advanced intelligence.

Dr. Spong's work is cut out for him—the Russians and Japanese account for 80 per cent of the world's whaling operations. Neither country approved a resolution on phasing out the hunt for fin whales at last year's International Whaling Commission meetings.

The Greenpeace Foundation has other alternatives, however. Dr. Spong said dedicated scientists are willing to "risk their lives" in hunt waters 50 to 300 miles off the coast of Vancouver Island.

"We have a variety of strategies," said Dr. Spong. "Some we're making public but we also have some secret weapons."

Authority Symbol

Once-banned Potlach Permitted but Rare

KINGCOME INLET, B.C. (CP) — To potlatch means to give—and for Indians of the West Coast it meant a great celebration on the birth of an heir to the chief, the marriage of a high-ranking band member, the erection of a totem pole.

The gift-giving ceremonies were held in a big house or longhouse, once the habitat of Indians on the coast of British Columbia.

There was a time when villages consisted of five to 10 big houses, with five to 10 families living in each, under the leadership of one band chief.

Today in this area bounded by the coastal range on the east and the Kingcome River on the west, 200 miles north of Vancouver, stands what may be the last of the great longhouses.

Padlocked and in disuse, it is one of the treasures remaining with the 75 members of the Tsawataineuk band living on the inlet's Gwayni Reserve.

Misunderstood by the missionaries who interpreted potlatching as heathenism, the ceremonies were outlawed in the 1920s and the longhouse and other traditions slowly disintegrated.

Dave and Flora Dawson have lived on the reserve 31 years and have watched the changes, seeing the young people drift away.

"This tribe was one of the last to abandon potlatching," said Mrs. Dawson. "We carried on as long as we could. The Indians went to Ottawa to try to fight the case against outlawing it but eventually, we just gave up."

Today, under new, enlightened legislation, the potlatch is permitted but time has taken its toll. There is not the enthusiasm and distribution of wealth that past potlatches have witnessed.

Graffiti disfigure the entrance to the longhouse.

"I try to stop these things but it's the new generation," said Mrs. Dawson.

The Dawsons settled at Kingcome when the site was a deserted village and gradually were joined by other Indians of the Kwakewith.

A school was built; recently a modern health centre was erected, visited periodically by a dentist and a doctor.

The cedar longhouse, estimated to be 60 years old and the last original one of its kind in the province, is in sharp contrast to the modern structures around it.

SOLD TREASURES

One Indian from another band tried to sell the longhouse. Others leaving the reserve have stolen tribal treasures, even totem poles older than the longhouse.

Some band members, the Dawsons among them, will not exchange the tribe's relics, under any circumstances or for any price.

Minnesota Ice Fishermen Have Wall-to-wall Carpets

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Ice can be spent now that the state fishing, once the simplest of the sport has progressed winter sports, has sprouted from shivering inside a crude some refinements that include shack to lounging in a comfortable dwelling.

hole-to-hole carpeting, television and a rig that cuts a hole through three feet of ice in seconds.

The old home-made chisel has been replaced by power-driven or hand-operated drills. The old buffalo hide or ankle-length sheepskin coats have given way to snowmobile suits.

A lot more than bait money

Only today's Canadian rubber-leather combination boots with heavy felt liners offer a reminder of the day when city ice fishermen copied farmers and wore rubber chore boots over felt shoes.

Many fishing shelters in Minnesota have become, efficiency-type, temporary dwellings. In addition to carpeting, some sport oil-burning space heaters, curtains, self-contained indoor toilets, bottle-gas stoves with ovens, books and battery-operated television sets.

The eight-inch fishing hole in each corner can be drilled with an auger powered by a small gasoline engine and held with handlebars. It costs from $100 to $200. A hand-operated auger can be had for much less but requires considerable power.

The fishing itself wasn't changed drastically. A good line, hook and a bobber is the basic outfit, with minnows for bait if angling for walleyes, northern pike or the popular winter panfish, crappies.

Small shelters are pushed out into the ice as soon as there is enough to hold an angler but house owners are forced to wait until the ice can support a car for towing the dwellings. Some shelters are large enough to do double duty as summer cabins on the lake shore.

Environment We Create Is Also Creating Us

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) — Until recently "we've believed that man is the conqueror of his environment," a psychologist at British Columbia's Simon Fraser University recalled.

"But the environment we've shaped is shaping us back," said Dr. Robert Gifford. "The environment we've created is creating us."

Therefore, "it is an absolute necessity that appropriately-trained psychologists be used in planning towns, public buildings and institutions."

Dr. Gifford said British Prime Minister Winston Churchill was one of the first laymen to realize the interaction between buildings and people when he insisted Britain's Parliament Buildings be rebuilt just as they were before they had been bombed during the Second World War.

"Churchill said that in those buildings the world's greatest democracy had been formed. If they changed the buildings, they might lose their democracy. He was aware of how our environment can shape us."

The professor, as concerned with streets and highways as he is with buildings, described cross-city freeways as tyrannical.

"They were built as a convenience, they now are a necessity.

"They zip past ghettos and parks alike. In most large American cities the freeway has wiped out the small corner store for the big supermarket across town.

"I would rather pay five cents more and get a polite hello than save five cents and get a nasty look."

Even off highways, the automobile shields us from our environment, he said.

"We are in a bubble, separated from odors, wind. We see behind glass and the most personal thing we can do is bonk. We don't see the proceedds of facial expressions."

Dr. Gifford said patients in mental hospitals "are the most sensitive people in our society, acutely aware of their environment."

"In long corridors—in hospitals for example—you see lights reflected on the floor, lots and lots of door-handles, pipes exposed, fans ready to chew you up. Time has stopped. Space is infinite. The normal person walking those corridors feels vague discomfort. The patient, who is already alienated in time and space, can freak out."

Dr. Gifford said patients in a mental hospital in Saskatchewan complained of the long tables and chairs lined against the walls in the dining room.

Board Turning Its Attention to Appearance of Downtown

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Belleville's downtown board of management — the body most responsible for revitalization of the central business core — is moving out of the parking business.

Jack Ireland, chairman of the board, city alderman and downtown merchant, told The Intelligencer Wednesday, "the priority of the board has changed a little, placed somewhat and the question of parking has been placed squarely in the hands of the city's parking authority.

which bonded downtown merchants together was the need for parking.

Mr. Ireland said the board has changed its direction somewhat and the question of parking has been placed squarely in the hands of the city's parking authority.

"We're now trying to plan the aesthetics of the downtown core — how to make it a more unified areas with a theme and coordinated," said Mr. Ireland.

Within the next two or three years, city council will be turning its attention to the downtown sections of other municipalities to bring together ideas to be used locally.

"If necessary, we will hire a consultant to create some kind of plan for the central core," said Mr. Ireland.

The board of management represents all businesses in the downtown section between Station and Dundas Sts., including business on the west side of Pinnacle and both sides of Front St. to the east side of the river.

The board operates on an annual budget of $25,000, raised by a special tax levy applied to each of the board members.

So far, the board has arranged flower planters, tree boxes and parking programs for downtown shopper convenience.

Shelving Programs Only Tory Ploy Says Liberal

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

MARMORA — Ontario's conservative administration is re-elected it will almost immediately introduce regional government across the province, argue Liberals were warned here Wednesday night.

Restructuring of local governments is only one among a number of unpopular programs the administration of Premier William Davis has temporarily shelved until after the next election, said Murray Gaunt, Liberal MPP for Huron-Bruce.

While the government appears to have softened so controversial issues the change is "only a facade" to get it through the campaign, he told a crowded Liberal party meeting Wednesday selecting a candidate for Hastings-Peterborough riding.

"I'll the Conservatives win the next election, I predict regional government will be imposed right across this province within a year," said Mr. Gaunt.

His keynote speech — to the convention at the Relm Club that chose David Hobson, 30-year-old Bancroft high school teacher as candidate — also attacked the Davis Liberal government for:

— A reputation for sound financial management which, said Mr. Gaunt, is more myth and a "public relations image" that is becoming provincial debt disproves.

— A current budget that is "a callous attempt" to "buy people with their own money".

— Taking Eastern Ontario "for granted" and allowing the region's farm and industrial development to languish.

Despite an inflation rate of one per cent a month, Ontario has had nothing but deficits since Mr. Davis became premier, said Mr. Gaunt. Liberal agricultural critic.

In four years Ontario's accumulated net debt has more than doubled to $2.9 billion. This year, the government is going to debt by $1.5-billion.

"The plain fact is the Davis government is fueling inflation — not fighting it," claimed Mr. Gaunt. His "consistent overspending is a significant contributing factor" to inflation.

Convention Winner

One of the most immediately excited people to respond to David Hobson's winning bid for Liberal candidacy in Hastings - Peterborough was his wife, Anna. She rushed to platform and delivered congratulatory kiss after Marmora convention chose him the new constituency in the next provincial election.

Capital Punishment Not Deterrent: Judge

Capital punishment as it pertains to those convicted of murdering police officers and penal institution personnel will never be effective because "politicians are chicken," says Gerald McAuliffe, news reporter with the Globe and Mail in Toronto.

Speaking at a day-long seminar here Thursday at Moira Secondary School, Mr. McAuliffe, author of recent articles on police brutality, said federal members of parliament were duped by the Liberal government when the present system was brought into effect.

"They passed a law the Liberal government has no intention of enforcing," he pointed out. "The politicians have made a farce of their own law."

Mr. McAuliffe, whose stories resulted in the formation of a royal commission to investigate the Metro Toronto police department, was a panelist during one session with provincial criminal court judge J. L. Clendenning of Belleville, John Jayasuriya, assistant director of the Quinte Regional Detention Centre in Napanee and Mark Krasnick of the Canadian Law Reform Commission.

Judge Clendenning commented, "capital punishment doesn't act as a deterrent until after the event, unfortunately".

Mr. Jayasuriya noted studies between American states which do and do not have capital punishment have showed no significant statistical difference in the number of murders and said he feels it does not act as a deterrent.

Mr. Krasnick remarked, "changing the law has a profound effect on other people which we cannot predict."

Hobson Gets Nod For Liberal Bid

MARMORA — A clamorous, crowded convention here Wednesday night elected a contestant to champion hopes for a revitalized Liberal challenge to decades of Conservative supremacy in this area.

The Liberals chose David Hobson, 30-year-old high school teacher with a background of local politics involvement and organizing, to bid for Hastings-Peterborough riding in the next provincial election.

The convention was the medium of choosing a candidate.

But, for party organizers, the medium also became a message of hoped-for revival: The convention — which drew a standing-room-only crowd — was the biggest muster of provincial Liberals here in years.

About 500 came by car and bus from across the riding's estimated 3,000 eligible voters of rural municipalities to pack the Relm Club on Highway 7 west of here.

Liberal association vice-president Brent Crosby, of Marmora, claimed the mood of the event evoked memories of the 1930s — when the Liberals last swept to power in Ontario under Mitchell Hepburn.

The new riding — which amalgamates 10 townships from Peterborough County with 23 in Hastings — is among most-watched electoral areas awaiting final approval by the legislature. Both present ridings are Conservative. Clarke Rollins, MPP for Hastings since 1959, already has announced he will seek his party's nomination for the new constituency.

Heightening the Liberal event was the fact the nomination was contested — with music as well as words — as its two nominees brought bands along to back bids for their party's ticket.

Mr. Hobson won over Don Mullan, 38-year-old publisher of four weekly newspapers in the area.

Both men struck a theme used by Liberals at the convention — charges that the Conservative government of Premier William Davis has lost contact with Ontario's citizens.

Workman Improves

A workman whose hand was so badly severed last week that his wristwatch fell off, is resting comfortably in Toronto's St. Michael's Hospital with the hand back in one piece.

Doug File, 38, of 278 Dundas St. E. was working on demolition of the old Canada Cement plant at Point Anne when a section of roof fell on him, slicing through the palm of his hand.

Reg File, the injured man's father, said today his son asked fellow workmen to retrieve his watch and the severed portion of his hand which was put into a plastic bag and sent with him to Belleville General Hospital, then to Hôtel Dieu Hospital in Kingston and finally to the Toronto hospital.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following call for assistance during a 24-hour period which ended at 8 a.m. today.

Wednesday, April 23, 11.42 p.m. — electric kettle boiled dry at 43½ East Bridge St. burning a hole in a table top, minimal damage.

Under Attack

Provincial politicos come under attack as Murray Gaunt, MPP for Huron - Bruce, delivers keynote speech to Liberal convention at Marmora Wednesday night. The rally chose a candidate for next provincial election in new Hastings - Peterborough riding.

More Autonomy Goal Of Parti Quebecois

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

The Parti Quebecois would never build a "China Wall" around Quebec if it takes over power in the province, says a party official Francois Des Rosiers.

Speaking to students and teachers Wednesday at Moira Secondary School Mr. Des Rosier said "more power than ever the province of Quebec can have is afraid to isolate itself in view of energy problems." He said recent gallup polls are predicting a Parti Quebecois victory in the next provincial election.

"It will take power in the next election." said Mr. Des Rosier. "we will not leave confederation without first asking the people of Quebec through a referendum." He said the party believes that government should ask its electorate for permission before it makes major changes.

The 30-year-old former candidate in the last election said he views the future of this country as being divided into five major regions which each have their own autonomy but held together by a federation. "This could also be an economic economy," he added.

Mr. Des Rosier, a past-president of the National Party Association, said that in 1973 the Parti Que ecois captured 31 per cent of the popular vote not because of electoral boundaries only won seven seats in the Quebec legislature.

He said the party now is raising funds for the next election and the objective has changed. He said the money is raised by private donations and that the party will not accept company or union donations of any size. He hoped the party would attract 40,000 members.

He speculated that other provinces including Ontario will begin to see themselves as wanting and deserving more autonomy. He said he believes provinces should have control of communications and immigration.

Although he did not like to use the word separate Mr. Des Rosier said the five major regions of Canada would be better served by a federation rather than a confederation.

Concerning immigration he said Quebec should be allowed to assimilate its immigrants into the french culture just as Ontario has the right to assimilate its immigrants into English-speaking culture. Mr. Des Rosier said he would run again as a Parti Quebecois candidate in the next provincial election.

Mohawks Forming Own Volunteer Fire Brigade

TYENDINAGA — A fire chief has been appointed to organize a volunteer firefight ing unit on this Mohawk Reserve.

He is Garnet Maracle, chosen by a selection committee appointed by the reserve council, said Chief William Brant.

The reserve at present contracts its fire protection from neighboring Deseronto. But, in recent years councils have been taking steps to provide the community with its own firefighting unit.

This has been the acquisition of a pumper truck and da tanker.

Mr. Maracle, who has taken firefighting courses at Loyalist College, will lead a force that may number about 20 volunteers, said Chief Brant.

He said the reserve's own firefighting unit should be operational in a few months.

Canada Needs Political Watchdogs Says Reporter

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

Globe and Mail investigative reporter Gerald McAuliffe says he believes the press should be muckraking but that there should be a better way to expose injustice.

Speaking to students and teachers Wednesday at Moira Secondary School, the 36-year-old reporter said the federal and provincial governments have no method for investigating problems. He said the United States federal government has standing committees ready to tackle areas in need of investigation.

Author of the now-famous series on police brutality in Toronto, Mr. McAuliffe said the press has a responsibility to investigate areas of concern but after presenting ks finding it has no right to give the solutions.

"We need political structures that can probe areas of concern," said Mr. McAuliffe, who maintains the Globe and Mail is the only opposition of the government in Ontario.

However, he said it should not be this way. He said the Globe and Mail published the series on police brutality only after every other means of getting it out had failed. He said the stories had been finished eight weeks prior to publication.

He said the newspaper's intention was to create a royal commission and for that it succeeded.

Mr. McAuliffe said he was personally responsible for about eight royal commissions in his career. He told the students that the Globe and Mail considered carefully the impact of the stories on Toronto and the province.

"We knew what it would do," explained Mr. McAuliffe, "and we wished there had been a better way but the Toronto police commis sion would not speak to us."

He dismissed the idea that shock journalism with papers on the basis that the Globe and Mail lost between 2,000 and 5,000 subscribers after publishing the series. He said the series cost the newspaper thousands of dollars in legal bills.

Mr. McAuliffe said the issue is not ethics in the media but more to the point, ethics in public life. He said he now has about 11 libel suits against him and that the Globe and Mail is paying thousands of dollars in his defence.

Press in Canada Called Incompetent

The Canadian press is hopelessly incompetent in the area of investigative reporting, says Globe and Mail reporter Gerald McAuliffe.

Speaking to students and teachers at Moira Secondary School Wednesday night Mr. McAuliffe said "take for example the paper in this town (Belleville) — it has abdicated its journalistic duty." He failed to cite any examples.

Mr. McAuliffe, an investigative reporter himself, said the Thomson chain of newspapers in Canada had "totally ignored" its responsibility to investigative work. The Intelligencer is owned by Thomson Newspapers.

Investigator

Globe and Mail's investigative reporter Gerald McAuliffe met with students and teachers Wednesday at Moira Secondary School to discuss the role of press and muckraking. Mr. McAuliffe was the author of a series of stories on police brutality and the Toronto police force.

Gas Taken

PICTON — A Picton man is in custody today following a break-in at Pearsoll's Gas Bar on Bridge St. early today. Gerald Pryde, 24, of 21 Centre St., has been charged with break, enter, and theft.

Panelists Urge Public Input into Law Reform

Four panelists speaking on crime, laws and rehabilitation during a day-long seminar at Moira Secondary School here Wednesday have urged more public input into all aspects of the judicial process.

Mark Kasnick of the Canadian Law Reform Commission commented, "those of us in Ottawa have the task of changing the law but there is no input from the general group being affected."

He said he found this amazing since there are "about 40,000 laws which affect each one of us each day."

"Laws are supposed to be a reflection of society," noted Mr. Kasnick. "Change through our laws will not work until people get out and change the laws in their own communities."

Gerald McAuliffe, Globe and Mail reporter and author of articles on police brutality in Toronto, said he feels there is "an incredible public apathy, both in politics and the judicial process.

"We have a tendency in this country to bitch about something but not write it down," he said.

Judge J.L. Clendenning of provincial criminal court in Belleville said apathy towards the number of laws being forced upon people is causing the loss of one of man's basic rights.

"Maybe we're formalized far too many things in our society and we're losing our freedom," he remarked.

John Jayasuriya, assistant director of the Quinte Regional Detention Centre in Napanee, pointed out another area of public involvement in rehabilitation of offenders.

He said there must be "acceptance by the community after the incarcerated person has paid his liability to society in either large doses or small doses."

Five Held In Theft

PICTON — Five Prince Edward County persons have been charged with break, enter and theft following a break-in at the Greenbush Market near Picton.

Canadiens Rated Underdogs

GERRY DESJARDINS

MONTREAL (CP) — Scotty Bowman is telling all who will be underdogs in their Stanley Cup semi-final series against Buffalo Sabres which begin Sunday in Buffalo.

"We haven't been underdogs in many series," Bowman said. "I think we have to be in this one. We only had a tie against them in five games."

The tie came in the last regular-season meeting between the clubs Feb. 9 in Buffalo. In the five meetings, Buffalo outscored Montreal 30-22.

"They have added Gerry Desjardins in goal," Bowman said. "He has helped their club.

"I think if they had had Desjardins all season, they would have finished with more points than Philadelphia and ourselves.

"We are going to have to play a lot better than we did against Vancouver. We played well defensively against the Canucks, but they played defensively as well.

"Look at Buffalo's series against Chicago. They didn't have any trouble scoring against them and Chicago is a good defensive club."

One of the key things Montreal must do in the series is contain the high-scoring French Connection line of Gilbert Perreault, Rick Martin and Rene Robert.

Perreault has three goals and four assists, Martin three goals and three assists and Robert two goals and four assists.

Two years ago, the Canadiens and Sabres met in a hard-fought quarter-final series which Montreal took in six games. In the series, Perreault had three goals and seven assists, Robert scored five goals and three assists and Martin had two goals and three assists.

"We are going to have to get all out against the Sabres," said Guy Lafleur, who was credited with the game-winning goal at 17:06 of the sudden-death overtime period Tuesday against Vancouver. "The Sabres have a spectacular team and they are explosive on offence."

At the moment, Lafleur is tied for the playoff points leadership along with Jude Drouin of the Islanders. Lafleur has five goals and four assists while Drouin has three goals and six assists.

Penguins Looked Too Far Ahead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Canadiens are looking forward to playing the underdog role in the National Hockey League playoff semi-finals while Pittsburgh Penguins are trying hard not to look ahead to the semi-finals at all.

The Penguins thought they were on the way to the semi-finals until New York Islanders reminded them they were still playing a quarter-final series which has the sixth game tonight at Uniondale, N.Y.

Pittsburgh won the first three games of the best-of-seven quarter-final, and then, with visions of a semi-final against Philadelphia Flyers dancing in their heads, the Penguins lost the next two to the Islanders.

"Yes, we were thinking a little bit about going to Philly," said Pittsburgh's Dave Burrows after the Islanders' 4-3 win Tuesday night.

"But I definitely don't think we'll be that way when we go to Long Island."

If the Islanders win tonight, the seventh and deciding game of the quarter-final is set for Pittsburgh on Saturday with the series winner advancing against Philadelphia.

Islanders goalie Glenn Resch says he's looking for a little luck to help the Islanders continue their winning streak which started when Resch took over in goal from Billy Smith.

"Hey, luck has to enter into it no matter how good you are or you don't survive in this league," said Resch.

HARRY NEIL

Saints Add Zip for Tonight

QUEBEC (CP) — Someone asked Harry Neale Wednesday what changes he plans to make for tonight's second game of the best-of-seven World Hockey Association semi-final between Neale's Minnesota Fighting Saints and Quebec Nordiques.

"The major change will be that we will be playing with more enthusiasm and more zip," Neale said.

And Minnesota goaltender John Garrett added: "Everybody knows, even the Quebec fans, that we can do better than we did Tuesday. We proved that during the year, didn't we."

The Fighting Saints, who eliminated New England Whalers in a six-game quarter final, were 3-0 against the Nordiques in Quebec this season but they played much better in those three games than they did in Tuesday's 4-1 loss.

Quebec forward Michel Parizeau said he is convinced the Saints will work much harder in the remainder of the series and we will have to work harder too."

Meanwhile, Quebec coach Jean-Guy Gendron will have to find a replacement for right winger Ronald Leclerc on the line with Buddy Gautier and Jeannot Gilbert. The line got three of Quebec's goals in the first game, with Gilbert scoring two and Leclerc adding the other.

Leclerc was suspended for pushing linesman Pierre Bassinger near the close of Tuesday night's opening game here. He received a 10-minute misconduct and a game misconduct for his vehement protest of a delayed offside call by the linesman.

Gendron was slapped with a $250 fine for making an obscene gesture to referee Ron Harris of Montreal.

Defenceman Tops Offensive Attack

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Defenceman Chris Ahrens showed his offensive prowess Wednesday night, scoring two goals and adding a pair of assists to lead New Haven Nighthawks to a 7-4 win over Hershey Bears in an American Hockey League playoff game.

The win gives New Haven a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven semi-final series with the next game scheduled Saturday at Hershey.

In another semi-final game Wednesday night, Springfield Indians defeated Rochester Americans 6-1 to even their best-of-seven series at two games each. The teams return to action Friday night in Rochester.

Ahrens's scored his second goal of the game at 5:46 of the third period to break a 3-3 tie, then assisted on goals by Rick Chinnick and Rich Mastaia to put the game out of reach.

Chinnick added another goal in the last minute of play, as did Hershey's Jack Sorbey.

The Bears, defending Calder Cup champions, took a 5-0 lead early in the first period on goals by Morris, Titanic and Joe Lendrigan. New Haven's Walt Ledingham scored before the period ended and Tom Colley tied the game for the Nighthawks at 13:34 of the second period.

Ahren's first goal gave New Haven a 3-2 lead, but Derek Smith of Hershey tied the game at 4:39 of the final period, setting the stage for Ahren's second and go-ahead goal just over a minute later.

New Haven directed 58 shots at Hershey goaltender Tim Regan while the Bears had 36 on Brian Holderness.

The Indians scored five goals in the last two periods to break a 1-1 tie before their hometown fans. Each team has won twice at home.

Rookie Lorne Stammler scored Springfield's second goal late in the second period to break the 1-1 tie and Dale Lewis scored less than two minutes later to give the Indians a 3-1 lead going into the third period.

Lewis, Mark Heaslip and Phil Hoene scored third-period goals for Springfield.

Jim Nichols gave Springfield a 1-0 lead in the first period before Pat Paquette scored Rochester's only goal early in the second.

Lefties Carry the Load

Montreal Expos must be thanking their lucky stars for the infusion of pitching talent the club received from the American League during the off season.

Expos were very bidding when they completained repeatedly last year that a lack of left-hand pitching was hurting the team. And club officials took steps to correct that shortcoming.

From Baltimore Orioles came proven southpaw Dave McNally. Woodie Fryman, another lefty with satisfactory credentials, was picked off from Detroit Tigers.

Well, here we are, 12 games into the 1975 season and Expos have five wins.

McNally and Fryman, demonstrating a remarkable talent for making their presence felt on the pitching mound, have accounted for all five wins.

McNally is 3-0 and Fryman, 2-0.

Now all Expos have to do is convince the other hurlers in the starting rotation, accomplished performers like Steve Rogers, Dennis Blair and Steve Renko, that the time has come to start producing.

Some of the right-handers must start coming through. And in a hurry.

If they've been waiting to see if their ranks have indeed been strengthened with the arrival of the port-siders, it should be obvious to the other members of the mound corps by now.

McNally and Fryman are for real.

It's time the other Expo pitchers refrained from casting appreciative, if not even envious glances in the direction of the two newcomers, and began to prove something themselves.

Yes, sir, the lefties have arrived.

Now, if the right-handers would only return.

All round individual leaders among the girls, were Julie Metus, Queen Elizabeth, 15 points; Margaret Lake, Hillcrest, 14; Heather Thrasher, Hillcrest, 13, and Linda Richardson, Stirling, 11.

It was Stirling's Mike Jackson showing the way in the boys' events with 16 points. Queen Elizabeth's Don Simonds was next in line with 14; Danny Monds, Tweed-Hungerford had 13 and Tim Cross, Hillcrest, 10.

Weekend Test Runs Make for Crowded Track

By DOUGLAS TAYLOR

MOSPORT — Some 150 members of the automobile racing fraternity braved early morning rain and high winds here on the weekend, turning out with machines of every description to take advantage of an open practice session prior to the season's start.

Among the more easily recognized drivers who came to take practice laps and get the feel of the track again, were a large number of regular Formula Ford and Sedan Series competitors.

Paul Lambke of Cambridge, 1974 Sedan Series winner, was there, as were John Simons of Hamilton and Lincoln Kinnan of Stoney Creek. All three were driving Datsun 510s.

Werner Von Engelbrechten and a teammate were back with the highly challenging Beach Auto BMW entries which constantly provided a threat to Lambke in 1974.

The Bulova Championship which opens here Sunday, has, since its inception in 1972, grown rapidly to become what is widely considered to be the foremost series in North America for the development of young race drivers.

VON ENGELBRECHTEN

Eddie Miller of Lakewood, California, two-time winner of the U.S. Formula Ford championship, described the two races which he ran and won at Mosport in 1974, as the toughest he had ever entered.

This year's seven-race series will be missing two familiar faces in Luke De Sadeleer and Rod Bremner. Bremner took the Mosport Drivgo to Europe Scholarship and is each of his first three races in England, has finished in the top 10.

De Sadeleer's racing plans for 1975 are undecided as of yet but he is not expected to be a regular participant in the Formula 100 class.

In the 2.5 litre Sedan competition, George Decamacho is slated to return, piloting his Fiat in competition with others in the hunt for C Class honors.

Newcomer Peter Young and Stephanie Rays de Peres are also expected to be in the line-up on the starting grid, Sunday.

Howard Kelly of Kingston took part in the practice sessions, piloting his Titan MK 6C through its paces.

Adding to the array of machines in action were a large number of Formula Super Vees and a mixture of others ranging from those guided by novice licence holders of the regional race series to a pair of Formula 5000s.

Horst Kroll of West Hill showed up with the two large power plants, one his Lola T 260 from last year and a new March.

Two Corvettes, driven by Don Clement from Orono and Craig Hilliard, Richmond Hill toured the layout.

It was a great day for amateur photographers who had the unique opportunity of "shooting" everything from minis to Formula 5000s.

Fryman Wins Second as Expo

MONTREAL (CP) — Left-hander Woodie Fryman handcuffed Pittsburgh on seven hits and contributed a run-scoring single in a four-run second inning as Montreal Expos defeated the Pirates 5-0 in National League baseball action Wednesday.

Fryman, now 2-0, picked up his second victory in as many starts this season against the Pirates, who are 0-4 against Montreal in 1975.

Tim Foli, who had singled and stolen second, gave the Expos a 1-0 lead in the first inning when he raced home as Pirate's grounder at second.

The Expos increased their lead in the second on run-scoring singles by Fryman, Pepe Mangual and Mike Jorgensen, whose hit got past centre fielder Al Oliver to allow another run to score on the error.

Jorgensen wound up at third base and after Foole walked, Larry Demery relieved Pirates starter and loser Jerry Reuss. He foiled the attack, getting Larry Parrish on a grounder.

Fryman worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the seventh after two-out singles by Richie Hebner and Art Howe and pinch hitter Frank Taveras's walk. Fryman got Stennett to ground into a double play.

Fryman, who shut out the Pirates 5-0 in Pittsburgh last Wednesday, struck out nine, walked two and hit a batter. The 6-year-old, acquired from Detroit Tigers of the American League in the off-season, stretched his string of scoreless innings to 30.

First Major League Victory

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Doug Konieczny, after suffering through five losses in major-league baseball, three last year and two this year, finally got around to the win column Wednesday night when Houston Astros beat San Francisco Giants 3-2 in the first game of a twinight doubleheader.

Roger Metzger and Ken Boswell gave him the runs he needed and Ken Forsch gave him some much-welcomed relief.

In the nightcap, it was Giants' rookie Pete Falcone who wore the grin after he wore down the Astros 3-0 with a no-hitter for his first shutout in the majors.

In other National League games, Montreal Expos beat Pittsburgh Pirates 5-0, Chicago Cubs defeated Philadelphia Phillies 9-3, New York Mets beat St. Louis Cardinals 7-1, San Diego Padres beat Los Angeles Dodgers 7-1 and Atlanta Braves edged Cincinnati Reds 5-4 in 11 innings.

"I felt good," Konieczny said. "I don't know if I was throwing as hard as in past games, but I had good command. I was throwing the ball where I wanted it."

Metzger batted in two runs on a squeeze bunt and a sacrifice fly while Boswell tripled in the other run.

Chris Speier's double and Bruce Miller's single gave Falcone the only run he needed, but the Giants got two more on Falcone's single, a sacrifice, a stolen base and catcher Skip Jutze's throwing error and on Gary Thomasson's homer.

Bill Madlock doubled and singled to drive in four runs in Chicago's pounding of the Phillies. The Cubs' 13-hit attack also included homers by George Mitterwald and Rick Monday.

Pitcher Tom Seaver gave up only four hits and Rusty Staub hit a grand-slam homer off Bob Gibson to give the Mets their fourth consecutive victory.

Mike Ivie, Rafy Hundley and Bobby Tolan drove in two runs each for San Diego to end a personal 15-game winning streak by the Dodgers. Don Sutton and rookie Joe Mcintosh to record his first major-league complete game with a five-hitter.

Mike Lum drew a one-out walk from Don Gullett in the 11th inning and, with two away, Larvell Blanks doubled him home to push the Braves past Cincinnati.

Dead Heat Pays Double Exactor

DUNDAS, Ont. (CP) — A dead heat for second place resulted in a double exactor payoff in the seventh race at Flamboro Downs Raceway Wednesday but the rewards were less than exciting.

Royal Butler won the mile pace and paid $3.90, $2.90 and $2.70. Brass Ring and Alios Hall Dusty crossed the finish line together in runner-up position.

Royal Butler and Brass Ring paid $27.20 but Royal Butler and Alios Hall Dusty combined for an exactor return of only $7.90.

Puff M Smoke paced Electro Gene former, the daily double which paid $4.60.

The sixth race, a $1,100 mile trot, was won by Greenwater which paid $9, $4.40 and $4.10.

Greenwaste finished with Fall of Pride for a $38 exactor.

Trip Mate Pays Off

TORONTO (CP) — Trip Mate, claimed March 6 at Mohawk Raceway for a record $40,000, won the first time for his new owner Bill Wellwood of Mississauga, Ont., at Greenwood Raceway on Wednesday.

The pacer, a four-year-old son of Bret Hanover, came from behind on a muddy track to beat Sample Copy in the featured seventh race.

Wellwood claimed the horse, which had career earnings of $38,514, starting the 1975 season, from Dr. John Hayes of Beamsville, Ont., and his partners, John Mooney and Jack Hood of Toronto.

In three previous starts, Trip Mate finished fourth twice and was second once.

Trip Mate paid $3.70, $2.40 and $2.20 and combined with Sample Copy, a former stablemate, for an exacta of $6.40.

Holly's Champ and Pinedale Jerry formed the daily double worth $88.60.

Brent Davies, in the sulky behind Pinedale Jerry, also won the fourth with Minda Marie and the co-featured eighth race with Arapride, bringing his victory total for the season to 36.

The ninth-race exacta of Joey Anderson and Arawana Soap Shot paid $56 before a crowd of 7,019 which bet $296,395 for the night.

Goldplated Hurler Knocked Out Again

Former Teammates Say Hunter Will Still Win 20

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jim Hunter has been like a Catfish out of water since his arrival in New York. But his former Oakland baseball teammates believe he'll stop floundering soon.

"He'll be all right," says Ray Fosse. "He's always been a slow starter."

"Unless he dies, Catfish Hunter will win 18 to 20 games this year," says Reggie Jackson. "All he'll have to do to get that many is get out of bed every morning. He's a superstar."

Pitcher Ken Holtzman also feels that you can't kill a Catfish, especially if it's goldplated.

"If the Yankees are worried about Catfish, they're in trouble," said Holtzman. "I think they've got a fine team and Cat should be the last man they worry about."

Hunter is 0-3 as a Yank and Wednesday the Cy Young winner was knocked out for the fourth straight time this season during the Boston Red Sox' wild 11-7 victory over the Yankees at Fenway Park.

"I'm still not making the right pitches at the right time," said Hunter, who won 25 games in the last four seasons for the A's before escaping from Oakland through a contract loophole. "My breaking pitches, the slider and the curve, still are up high."

In other American League games Wednesday, Cleveland Indians beat Detroit Tigers 4-3, Milwaukee Brewers defeated Baltimore Orioles 8-5, California Angels beat Texas Rangers 4-1 and Oakland A's beat Kansas City Royals 3-2. Rain washed out the Chicago-Minnesota game.

Cecil Cooper started a five run uprising against Hunter, Sparky Lyle and Dick Tidrow with a pinch triple in the seventh inning to lead the Boston success. Lyle took the loss after Tidrow, the third New York double to Bob Montgomery, capping the decisive rally.

George Hendrick and Jack Brohamer each drove in two runs and Cleveland survived a Detroit rally in the sixth inning to beat the Tigers.

Cleveland led 4-1 going into the bottom of the sixth, when Gary Sutherland opened with a home run for the Tigers. Third baseman Bucky Bell dropped Willie Horton's pop-up for an error but Nate Colbert hit into a double play before Bill Freehan unloaded another home run off winner Jim Perry.

Doubles by Bobby Mitchell and Sixto Lezcano broke an eighth-inning tie and Milwaukee went on to beat error prone Baltimore.

Bill Singer checked Texas on six hits while Tommy Harper had three consecutive hits and drove in the winning run as California beat the Rangers.

Bert Campaneris singled home the winning run and both Rollie Fingers and Jim Todd stopped Kansas City uprisings to preserve Vida Blue's fourth victory for Oakland.

Kings Out, Braves Square

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chicago Bulls built an 81-61 lead and went on to a 101-89 victory Wednesday night to eliminate Kansas City-Omaha Kings 4-0 in their National Basketball Association Western Conference semi-final series.

"We're the best defensive team in pro basketball," coach Dick Motta said. "If we play like we did against the Kings, we'll go all the way. This was our toughest series."

Bob Love led the Bulls with 28 points, and Nate Archibald had 26 for the Kings.

In the other NBA playoff game, Buffalo Braves beat Washington Bullets 105-96 to even that Eastern Conference best-of-seven semi-final at three games apiece. The deciding game of the series will be played Friday night at Landover, Md.

Buffalo's Bob McAdoo, who admitted after the game he was "dead tired," scored 37 points.

"I stopped pressing in the fourth quarter," said McAdoo, who scored 22 of his points in the first half. Jim McMillian was excellent in a supporting role with 20.

Washington's Phil Chenier, who had scored 19 points before intermission, could manage only six in the second half.

In the American Association, Kentucky beat St. Louis 108-103 in Wednesday's only game. Kentucky now leads that Eastern Division final 2-0.

Bayern and Leeds Qualify for Final

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Defending champion Bayern Munich of West Germany and Leeds United of England qualified for the European Cup soccer final May 28 in Paris, following second-leg semi-final matches Wednesday.

Bayern reached its second successive final with a 2-0 win over St. Etienne of France. The first game was tied 0-0 in France.

Leeds advanced to the final for the first time with a 3-2 aggregate over Barcelona of Spain. Leeds won the first leg 3-1 at home and the teams battled to a 1-1 draw Wednesday.

In Munich, Bayern took a second-minute lead on a goal by Franz Beckenbauer, who captained West Germany in last year's World Cup finals, and ensured the win on a 60th-minute goal by Doerfberger.

In Barcelona, Peter Lorimer gave Leeds a 1-0 lead in the seventh minute but Manuel Clares evened the score in the 68th minute.

Dynamo Kiev of the Soviet Union and Ferencvaros of Hungary will meet in the Cup Winners Cup final May 14 in Basle, Switzerland.

The Hungarians drew 2-2 away to Red Star Belgrade of Yugoslavia to take the series 4-3, while Dynamo lost 2-1 away to PSV Eindhoven in the Netherlands but reached the final on a 4-2 aggregate.

In the only UEFA second leg semi-final game, Twente Enschede of the Netherlands qualified to meet Borussia Moenchengladbach in the two-leg final with a 1-0 win over Juventus of Italy at Turin, giving the Dutch club the series 4-1 on aggregate.

Borussia clinched its place in the final Tuesday with a 4-1 aggregate over fellow West Germans FC Cologne.

Beavers Get Six in Second

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — Sherbrooke Beavers erupted for six goals in the second period Wednesday night and went on to defeat Laval Nationals 10-5 to take a 3-0 lead in their best-of-seven Quebec Major Junior Hockey League final series.

Sherbrooke could wrap up the series with a win Friday night in Laval and advance to the Memorial Cup tournament final in Kitchener, Ont., May 9-11.

Sidney Vervey and Robert Simpson scored two goals for the Beavers with Marc Tessier, Alain Belanger, Peter Marsh, Joe Carlevale, Michel Brisebois and Robert Desormeaux getting the others.

Michel Bossy scored twice for the Nationals with singles going to Mike Dal Bello, Tony Peluso and Denis Hay.

Referee Guy Rochefort of Cap de-la Madeleine assessed three minors and a major to each team in the game watched by 4,452 afm.

The Beavers outshot the Nationals 46-34.

Thorburn Eliminated

SYDNEY, Australia (CP) — Canadian Cliff Thorburn was eliminated from the world professional snooker championships Wednesday, falling 32-14 to Australian champion Eddie Charlton in quarter-final play.

The Toronto shooter, a former Canadian and North American champion, simply didn't have the shots to match Charlton, who had defeated the current North American champion, Bill Werbeniuk of Winnipeg, in second-round action.

Charlton advanced to semi-final play with Irishman Dennis Taylor while defending champion Ray Reardon of Wales and Alex Higgins of Ireland will meet in the other semi-final match.

Wants to Get Back in Public's Eye

TORONTO (CP) — George Foreman, who doesn't expect to gain much from his Saturday boxing exhibition against five consecutive opponents, was asked to explain why he agreed to such a match.

"It keeps me doing what I do best—fighting," said the former world heavyweight champ.

Foreman, 27, has knocked out 37 opponents in 41 fights but he hasn't had a match since he lost the world crown to Muhammad Ali last October in Kinshasa, Zaire.

So now he has agreed to meet five men in consecutive three-round bouts. Promoter Don King admits that none of the five—Boone Kirkman, Terry Daniels, Alonzo Johnson, Charley Polite and Jerry Judge—could be expected to go 10 rounds against Foreman. As expected, Foreman eliminates all five with ease, the exhibition is unlikely to add much to his reputation.

And the estimated $200,000 Foreman will earn from Saturday's match is a small prize compared to the $10 million he and Ali fought for last year.

"Once you've lost that title, it isn't as easy as people think to get a fight," said Foreman.

"I tried to get a fight with Joe Frazier. No way.

"I tried for a rematch with Ken Norton. No way. Ali? You know the answer as well as I do. No way. Since the Kinshasa fight, I made a movie. I been on a bunch of television shows. But that's not my business. My business is fist fighting.

"I know I can beat Ali. Nobody is this world can beat me when I'm at my best. But I gotta get back in front of the public as a fighter. That's what I get out of fighting these five guys."

Helping put Foreman back in front of the public as a fighter will be ABC's Wide World of Sports television show which will show the fight live starting at 4 p.m. EST.

Stanley Cup Overtime Becoming Thing of Past

By MEL SUFRIN
CP Sports Editor

Marathon Stanley Cup overtime, once a fairly common occurrence, seems to be a thing of the past.

In the National Hockey League's early years it wasn't unusual for playoff overtime to run for two periods or more although there were also some quick endings.

But since expansion in 1968, the average overtime is down to less than nine minutes compared with nearly 18 minutes in the preceding seven years.

When Guy Lafleur scored at 17:06 of the first overtime period in give Montreal Canadiens a 5-4 victory over Vancouver Canucks Tuesday, it was the longest stretch of extra time since 1971.

That year, Peter Stemkowski scored at 41:29 for New York Rangers in a 3-2 win over Chicago Black Hawks, and a few days later Jim Pappin ended the extra time at 21:11 in a 2-1 Chicago victory over Montreal.

Otherwise, no other overtime among the 43 since 1968 has gone past the end of the first period.

There have been seven extra-time games in the 1975 playoffs and the average overtime has been 6:44. In one game, Jean-Paul Parise of New York Islanders set a record by scoring in 11 seconds against New York Rangers.

That clipped one second from the old mark of 12 seconds set by Pit Martin of Chicago against Pittsburgh Penguins in 1972.

Johnny Bower, the former Toronto Maple Leafs goaltender, says experience may be one reason games tend to end more quickly.

"A team like Montreal knows from experience how to play in overtime. A lot of the expansion clubs haven't got this experience."

He is also of the opinion that the NHL was more defensive-minded in the old days. Only with talent spread more thinly, defences are a strong right through as they used to be.

Before the six old-line clubs began admitting new members, it wasn't uncommon to talk about kitty-bar-the-door tactics. You rarely hear the term any more. With the emphasis on offence, it's doubtful many teams could employ those tactics even if they wanted to.

In the 1930s, when 1-0 and 3-1 scores were common, the average playoff overtime period was 14.1 minutes. Two such games were declared ties after 20 minutes—Ottawa and Boston 0-0 and 1-1 in 1927.

In the 1920s the average was 26.7 minutes but that included the two longest games ever played.

Ken Doraty scored for Toronto after 104.46 to defeat the Bruins 1-0 in 1933 and Mud Bruneteau scored for Detroit Red Wings at 116:30 to beat Montreal Maroons 1-0 in 1936.

The average was 15.1 minutes in the '40s, dropping to 12.3 in the '50s and rising to 17.9 in the 1960-67 period. In 25 games played so far in this decade the average has been less than eight minutes.

The Canadiens have played most overtime games 34, losing 30 and tying two. But Toronto has the best overtime record among the established teams — 22 victories, 27 defeats and one draw. And Boston has the poorest mark — 19 wins, 30 losses and three ties. Philadelphia Flyers are best among the newer teams with six wins and three losses.

JOHNNY BOWER

Canadian Reps in Admiral's Cup

TORONTO (CP) — Canada will be represented for the first time in the Admiral's Cup offshore racing series starting Aug. 1.

The four-race series began in 1957 and traditionally the battle between the three-boat teams from Britain, the United States and Australia. In 1971, however, the German team was handily and a big sloop called Saudade, skippered by Bernard Bellhen of Hamburg, took individual honors.

The Canadian boats will be Dynamo, a 40-footer custom designed and built for Gerhard Moog of Toronto by C and C Yachts Ltd. of Oakville, Ont.; Kanata, a 41-footer, designed and built by Vladimir Plavsic of Vancouver; and a Norwegian-owned C and C-46, to be chartered by Bruce Sully of Goderich, Ont.

Moog has been designated by the Canadian Yachting Association as captain of the Canadian team. He and Sully will be sailing under Toronto's Royal Canadian Yacht Club colors. Plavsic sails out of the West Vancouver Yacht Club.

The team will be assembled at Cowes, Isle of Wright, on July 25. The Royal Ocean Racing Club which runs the event every two years expects at least 20 national teams of three boats each.

Lloyd Leads Wings

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Terry Lloyd scored five goals and assisted on four others Wednesday night to lead Philadelphia Wings to a 19-6 win over Long Island Tomahawks in National Lacrosse League action.

Ranked Third, Still Confident

CARLSBARD, Calif. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus and Johnny Miller are listed as the co-favorites, but Tom Weiskopf may be the man to beat in the $200,000 Tournament of Champions.

"I'm playing as good, or better, than I did in '73," Weiskopf said before teeing off today in the first round of this tournament that brings together only the winners of regular pro golf tour events from the last 12 months.

He has finished second, first and second in his last three starts and appears to have regained the form and flair that brought him the British Open crown and six other titles in 1973.

However, Weiskopf is listed as the third choice behind Nicklaus and Miller in the odds, the man field that will chase the $40,000 first prize.

"Obviously, Jack and Johnny are playing very well," Weiskopf noted, "but there's no reason I couldn't win."

Nicklaus has won his last three starts, climaxed by his fifth Masters crown.

Miller has yet to beat Nicklaus this year. He tied him for sixth in the Bing Crosby and Nicklaus has finished ahead of Miller in every other tournament in which both played.

Miller, the defending title holder here, needs to finish ahead of Nicklaus to retain his money-winning lead, a position he has held since January, 1974, Nicklaus now trails him by only $234.

Killanin Tours Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee (IOC), began a five-day Canadian tour Wednesday by meeting James Worrall, Canadian member of the IOC executive.

Worrall said the two-hour private meeting dealt with general IOC problems but not with problems of the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

Today, Killanin was to address the Empire Club, appear at a news conference and attend a reception and dinner as guest of Olympic Trust, the Canadian Olympic Association's fund-raising organization.

On Friday, he will be in Kingston to inspect preparations for the Olympic yachting competitions and on Saturday, will begin a tour of competition sites in Montreal.

BIRTHS

DAVIS — Kent Anne is happy to announce the arrival of her baby brother, Scott Evan, 8 lbs. 11½ ozs. born Monday, May 13th, 1974, at Belleville General Hospital. Proud parents are Gary and Nancy (nee Easler). Special thanks to Dr. Richard and nurses on fifth floor.

IN MEMORIAM

HARRISON, Pauline — In loving memory of our dear mother who died years ago, May 17, 1964.
Through your smile is gone forever,
And your hand we cannot touch.
We'll always have so many memories
Of you mom, we loved so much.
Your memory is our keepsake,
With which we'll never part.
God has you in His keeping,
We have you in our hearts.
—Sadly missed and never forgotten by daughters Cindy and Wendy and son-in-law Douglas.

HARRISON — In loving memory of a dear mom, Pauline Mae Harrison, who passed away April 24th, 1964.
The years may wipe out many things,
But this they'll wipe out never!
The memory of those happy days,
Which we have spent together,
Will be remembered by daughter Linda and family.

WILFRID — In loving memory of our husband, father Wilfred Beith who passed away April 24, 1974.
A light is from our household gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
Some may think you are forgotten,
Through an earth spin no more,
But in memory you are with us,
As you were before.
As fondly forgotten by wife Rubie and family.

BELL — In loving memory of a dear father, Wilfred Beith who passed away April 24, 1974.
One year has passed since that sad day
When one we loved was called away
God took him home, it was his will Within our hearts he lives still.
Never forgotten by Robert and family.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

FRIDAY, April 25

ARIES (March 21-April 20) This could be an expensive day if you get involved in a business area you're unfamiliar with. Avoid complicated deals.

TAURUS (April 21-May 20) Plan first as to how you'll handle important matters today. Your on-the-spot decisions are not reliable.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't try to paint-of lush you should be doing. You'll only have to do them later—with a possible penalty.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't jump to too hastily on a business tip you may learn of from an influential contact. It isn't that good.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you try to pile the robust with too heavy a hand today, the family may take some steps to dethrone you. Walk softly. Prestige the big stick.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be extra-careful when travelling today. Keep a sharp eye on those who share the road, whether you're walking or driving.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) In your eagerness to satisfy a whim, you're likely to pay far more for something than you would if you were in a more practical mood.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You may have to set your desires aside the next few days in order to meet demands of others. Just don't be a complete patsy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be wary. Don't unthinkingly say or do something today that will cause a serious breach between you and a close friend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't try to file the show within your clique today. Be democratic. Let everyone have a voice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A goal you have in mind today will not be in accord with an associate's, yet you must do what's best for you. He'll understand in the long run.

Smart Kids Get Jobs

NUTLEY, N.J. (AP) — Most of the young people Frank Capallo hires as part-time employees in his fruit-basket business are honor students.

Of the five college students now working for Capallo, four have averages and the fifth has a B average. Four of his 10 full-time student workers are on the honor roll at their schools.

"I do it on purpose," said Capallo. "The smarter the kid, the harder he works."

During holiday seasons, Capallo hires about 50 students.

The kids really run this place," he said. "They do all the jobs, from book-keeping to placing orders."

Capallo, 57, a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, has a master's degree in retailing from New York University. He awards scholarships to three of his college-bound helpers each year.

Capallo likes to talk about his former employees.

"Two years ago, we had a kid who was No. 1 at Fordham. Another guy is the comptroller for one of this country's largest pharmaceutical firms."

His current student employees said they like working for Capallo.

"You learn pride here," said Billy Smith, who is working on his masters in engineering. "You never work harder than you do here, but you'll never learn as much anywhere else."

Sam Paparatto, a freshman math major with a grade average of 3.8 of a possible four points, has worked for Capallo nearly three years. He said it has been an excellent way to work your way through school. You learn a lot here."

Unlucky expert does it again

"The queen. My partner took his ace, thought for a while as I sweated it out and finally led a club for me to ruff."

We have to omit the rest of our friend's talk. It was all expletives deleted. The substance was that at the other table his North-South partners bid up to five spades with their cards and when West bid six hearts, North proceeded to double. That to complete the rout, South opened his singleton diamond. East made his heart slam with an overtrick.

Opening lead — Q ♥

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

The unlucky expert had conceived us again. He started out with, "Team of four has to be my most unlucky game. I have three partners to toss me around there. Look at this hand that cost me a match.

"I eat West. I considered a seven-heart bid for some time, but finally gave up the idea. I was afraid that if my partner did not hold the ace of diamonds the opponents would bid and make seven spades. Obviously North was void of hearts."

"Good reasoning," we replied. "What diamond did you lead?"

CARD SENSE

A — Pass. You have done enough.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Instead of bidding three spades your partner has jumped to four spades over your three hearts. What do you do now?

Bed Is No Cure For Periodic Pain

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thostesen: I am 35 years old and have not had much pain with menstruation since I was a teen-ager. But for the last two or three years I have literally had to stay in bed the first couple of days of my periods because of "flooding."

It leaves me with a weak feeling. What can be causing this?—C. N.

You offer just enough information to raise suspicions, but not nearly enough for me to be helpful to you. You don't mention having seen your doctor, which would be your first step, and the first step, incidentally, for other gynecologists suffering such flooding. And by all means have a pap test.

Neither are your clear about whether or not you are now experiencing pain during your menstruation or just prior to it. If pain is involved, then one might suspect endometriosis, a condition I've discussed before. In this, tissue resembling that of the uterine lining membrane occurs in other areas of the pelvic cavity. It is a common cause of such symptoms as you describe, and it is not at all uncommon in women your age.

Another reason for seeing a doctor is that the continual flooding can cause you to become anemic, and this could be the cause of your weak feeling.

Other possible causes are disorders of the pituitary gland itself, or even a glandular imbalance. Waiting in bed is not going to help you at the source of your problem. A proper examination is in order.

I detect more and more these days a certain carelessness among women about getting periodic pelvic examinations. This is apparent from letters I receive. Many using the contraceptive pill, for example, seem to feel that, free of pregnancy or the fear of pregnancy, examinations are futile. But on the contrary, women on the pill should be examined regularly, perhaps even more so than those who are having periodic pregnancies.

Other women readers who see themselves in this description should take note.

Dear Dr. Thostesen: I would like to know what causes mucus in my throat. Is it my sinuses, it makes me cough once in a while.

Mucus formation is the body's attempt to relieve irritation. Smoking is a prime cause of such irritation, and it can result in chronic secretion of the mucus from the membranes of the nose and throat.

The dryness in your throat can be caused by mouth-breathing while you sleep. And this can be the result of a defect in the nasal passage. If you have a deviated septum (crooked nose) you are excellent candidate for this.

Quit smoking, or cut down if you smoke, and see if the mucus doesn't improve the situation. It usually does.

Dear Dr. Thostesen: Is it true that if your gall bladder does not show up in an x-ray you are in for trouble?—R. M.

Yes. A non-visualized gall bladder means something is very likely amiss.

The test medium, which is an ingested iodine compound, is eventually discharged by the liver and collected in the gall bladder, a coil de sac (dead end) organ. If the gall bladder is functioning, this substance will show up in an x-ray as an outline of the gall bladder. If it does not visualize.

The majority of non-visualized gall bladders are diseased. The answer is usually removal, a surgical procedure which has been highly successful and leaves no harmful effect.

Clean Cab His Object

HAMILTON (CP) — If there's one thing taxi driver Alan Kent can't stand it's a dirty cab.

And any passenger who hires his taxi soon learns of his feelings. For on the headrests and dashboard are signs reading "Please do not touch sign. Please use the ashtray. Please help to keep the car clean."

Mr. Kent, who has been driving a taxi more than five years, says the signs work.

"People are always complimenting me on how clean my car is inside. They just can't believe it's three years old."

Mr. Kent has no objection to persons smoking in his car but he objects strenuously when they drop matches or cigarette butts on the floor.

Pointing to a small burn mark on an armrest, he recalls the night the sign didn't work.

"I was working for another company when I got a call to pick up a friend of the boss. The man was drunk. I watched him as he dropped ashes on the floor and I put up with it until he tried to butt his cigarette on the arm rest," Mr. Kent said.

"I told him to read the sign and use the ashtray. He got upset and said he'd make sure my boss heard about it. I pulled into the curb and dropped the guy off right there."

Reporter at Edmonton Lived Like Pensioner

EDMONTON (CP) — "There just aren't many laughs on $114.27 a month," says Jim Davies, a 28-year-old reporter who lived on a pensioner's basic income for 30 days.

He practically "suffered a heart attack" when, over-charged for bacon, was stricken by conscience at spending 53 cents for two rolls of toilet paper and considered the love affair a mere tragedy in below - zero temperatures.

The nights were particularly bad. "holed up in my small room, my only entertainment a small transistor radio and a pocket novel."

He found some consolation in the good humor and quiet acceptance of many of the elderly he met.

"I remember one elderly fellow smiling after I asked him if he was going to Vancouver was to start a new life. 'No,' to end an old one,' he replied."

There was the elderly lady in a purple dress who taught him the fox trot and advised him not to worry about stepping on her toes at a senior citizens' dance.

And the 70-year-old man at an outdoor skating rink who could skate while bent into a sitting position, one leg held out in front of him. "I've been skating for 41 winters and I'll bet nobody on this ice can do what I can out there."

But there was also the darker side—the old woman terrified by a pahandler, the bashful old man in a stylish suit who had lost his wife and declared, "Living alone stinks."

Mr. Davies said he was reluctant at first to take the assignment when approached by The Edmonton Journal city editor, who told him he would be cut off from all friends, family and regular routine.

Yet, "I can honestly say I enjoyed it."

He admits he was lucky, and it might be difficult for an older person to live as cheaply as he did. He did not have a car or drive, had no medicine to buy and no insurance premiums to pay. His room was a scant 10 by 15 feet, up two flights of stairs, and he shared a bath with 15 other roomers.

"I haven't had to worry about paying utilities — the light and water are included free in my $50-a-month room—and, of course, I haven't had that luxury, the telephone."

Food took the largest chunk out of his budget, $73. Personal items and household expenses came to $14, clothing came to $10, entertainment to $17 and laundry to $13.

Mr. Davies spent much of his time in public libraries—"I read no fewer than 11 novels"—museums, art galleries and shopping centres, which he discovered were social meeting places for the elderly.

"Loneliness, I soon learned, is the biggest enemy of many pensioners, but with community centres and public facilities throughout the city there's no need to be lonely."

He spent one morning at the courthouse watching trials, and one afternoon at the legislature: "As I walked up to the legislative building entrance, the walkway bordered by Buicks, Cadillacs, Oldsmobiles and other luxury cars, I had to wonder whether the men in this building could really understand the plight of the province's pensioners."

He learned where to find a 25-cent haircut, and a $ . . . double feature. He found bingo games inexpensive and enjoyable: "What else is there?" he quotes a bingo fan.

He drank beer with war veterans in the Legion, and noticed how his penny-counting had changed his drinking style.

"Instead of being a regular arm-bender at the table, I'm now in the habit of nursing a beer. Instead of seeing a procession of cold, frothy glasses, I now gaze at a headless, warm beer, the product of slow, thoughtful sipping."

Snacks, "something that was a normal part of my regular life, suddenly became a thing of the past."

Mr. Davies, who was not identified in the newspaper on his month as a pensioner, was over, said the biggest problem he had is preserving his "secret identity" was that each time he [illegible] in his daily account, it meant he couldn't see that person again.

He had to "blow his cover" to get past the front doors at three senior recreational centres, but the only other place he had trouble concealing his identity was at the dance he attended.

"There, probably at least a dozen elderly women came up to me during the evening of one-steps, fox trots and Gay Gordons and whispered confidentially that: 'I know you're the Journal's pensioner, but I won't tell anyone.'

"All I could do was nod and smile and hope that it wouldn't affect their normal behavior."

Mr. Davies' series prompted hundreds of letters and telephone calls to the newspaper, suggesting how the reporter could better manage his budget and even inviting him to dinner.

When Mr. Davies failed to put anything in the collection plate at church, he was blistered with criticism. On the following two Sundays, he was more generous.

Rare Fish Eats Tomatoes

TORONTO (CP) — The Metropolitan Toronto Zoo has acquired a rare fish that eats anything, although its favorite dish is tomatoes.

Bill Roman, who donated the 13-pound fish to the zoo, said that while he and his family had "the Osphronemus gorami, a species from the Indo-Malayan peninsula, it grew out of a 30-gallon tank, and finally the last container had to hold 300 gallons.

Mr. Roman was given the fish by a friend who was working on research in the biology department at University of Toronto. When the species of the fish was established, Mr. Roman set out to find out as much as he could about the addition to his fish collection.

"They have an auxiliary internal breathing system, which allows them to breathe above the surface of the water, and to survive through a dry season in the minimum of water," he said.

This is why they can live in polluted water and still remain edible.

"The species has been of considerable interest to scientists in the Soviet Union and the United States who see them as a valuable food supply in an increasingly polluted world."

Liquor Ads Out

OSLO (AP) — Norway has imposed a total ban on advertising liquor, wine and beer. Brewery trucks can be marked with company names but not products.

Economic Changes Are Quick in Japan

VANCOUVER (CP) — North Americans and Europeans have trouble understanding Japanese because of the "cultural remoteness" of the country and its people, says Dr. James Abegglen, a Boston business consultant.

"Japan is extraordinarily homogeneous—culturally, ethnically and linguistically—and this characteristic should make it easier to understand than many other countries," said Dr. Abegglen.

"But the Westerner has to travel a far greater distance culturally than if he were learning about other Western countries and this, combined with Japanese attitudes towards foreigners, presents problems in mutual understanding."

The Boston consultant was one of the speakers at a three-day conference on Japan sponsored by the division of international studies at University of British Columbia.

Dr. Abegglen said Japan is neither as monolithic nor as fragile as it is often represented by foreigners.

"It has a strong economy, and certainly one of the best-managed in the world," he said.

"But an economic change or trend that would take 10 years to develop in the U.S. or Britain will take only three years in Japan. Conditions change very quickly and this telescoping of time is one reason why international views of Japan are often grotesquely inappropriate."

Dr. Abegglen, president of the Boston Consulting Group KK, Tokyo, described Japanese economic policy as complex but rational. He contrasted this with United States economic policy which, he said, sometimes appears far from rational.

Toshiro Shimanouchi, an adviser to Keidanren—the association of Japanese corporations—and a former ambassador to Norway, said the high degree of Japanese homogeneity was an asset in the past, but it now has become more of a liability.

"Japanese people lack experience in dealing with ethnic groups other than their own," he said. "The oil crisis brought home to us dramatically the need to be able to deal with other people, and we must learn to live in an interdependent world."

Foreigners often find it difficult to deal with Japanese because they do not understand the unique Japanese form of verbal communication, he said.

"Japanese is not a language of logic, but rather one of mutual understanding of unspoken thoughts. A Japanese does not like to say no and he does not express his inner thoughts for fear of hurting the listener's feelings."

The language has been internationalized by taking in English and other foreign words, but in such a manner that it is understood only by the Japanese themselves, Mr. Shimanouchi said.

Prof. John Howes of UBC's Asian studies department said Japan's modernization, which began more than 100 years ago, uses consensus as a basis for decision-making.

"The Japanese have become accustomed to looking to government for major decisions, and to accepting these decisions when they are made," he said.

"But if this consensus system breaks down, as it may do as a result of increasing exposure to practices in other countries, Japan could have a major problem in adjusting."

Whelan Scolds

TORONTO (CP)—Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan scolded Canadians Wednesday for complaining about the high cost of food.

Mr. Whelan said Canadians spend less—about 20 per cent of their total income—on food than is spent in any other country in the world.

Yet, he said, "we bitch and complain about it more than anywhere else in the world. When the price changes, all hell breaks loose."

Protest Quota

MOONBEAM, Ont. (CP) — About 125 members of the Northern Ontario Consumers Association prevented two representatives of the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) from taking inventory at an egg producers' farm Wednesday in this community about 75 miles northwest of Timmins.

The group blocked entrances to the driveway and henhouses on the farm of Guy and Pierre Reynoude, protesting CEMA's quota for the brothers, the only source of fresh eggs for northeastern Ontario.

Arsenic Problem

TORONTO (CP) — As advisor to provincial Health Minister Frank Miller says that although there is no pressing cause for alarm, several Northern Ontario smelting industries may have to spend substantial funds to meet contemplated new standards on the exposure limit of arsenic.

Dr. G. J. Stopps, senior environmental health advisor to Mr. Miller said in an interview that new concern, "but certainly not any panic," arises from studies showing arsenic exposure as a significant condition in lung and possibly stomach cancer among workers in a chemical plant in Baltimore.

Food Costs Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The annual retail cost of a farm-produced food market basket dropped $9 in March, the first drop since last July, the United States agriculture department said Wednesday. In March, officials said, a year's supply of market basket food cost an average of $1,831 for a theoretical household of 3.2 persons. The indicator had risen to a record annual rate of $1,830 in February.

HAMILTON (CP) — Kenneth Elliott, former Hamilton Harbor commissioner, and business consultant Reginald Leigh Fisher, were remanded to June 27 when they appeared in provincial court Wednesday on charges of tax evasion. A trial date will be set at that time.

The two also face charges of tax conspiracy.

Want Review

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian Automotive Parts Manufacturers' Association said Wednesday it will press Ottawa to review the 10-year-old, Canada-U.S Auto pact because of their shrinking share of the North American market.

'Kenora Talks Back' Stirs Controversy

KENORA, Ont. (CP) — Eleanor Jacobson says discrimination in this northwestern Ontario town is directed not against the Indian population but against the average taxpayer.

Mrs. Jacobson has just published a book on the effects of alcohol and the aftermath of the Anicinabe Park siege that has stirred up a sizeable portion of the community.

Bended Elbow—Kenora Talks Back is her attempt to counter what she says is wrong and damaging publicity resulting from Anicinabe, a park held under armed occupation for six weeks last summer by a group calling itself the Ojibway Warrior Society which claimed the land was wrongfully sold to the town in 1869.

Mrs. Jacobson says the Anicinabe occupation was carried out by Indian thugs and misfits and that the good people of Kenora suffered as a result.

She says the continuing Indian problem on the streets of Kenora is a direct result of alcohol and blames the government for allowing Indians to buy it here.

She prefaces Bended Elbow (a takeoff on Wounded Knee) with the following: "The Indians refer to the taxpayer as the white man, when in reality all taxpayers are not white. So the phrase white man in this book is Indian slang for taxpayer."

Under that appears a picture of a couple in sexual embrace on the grass. Farther on are pictures of more Indians, mostly lying drunk in parks, on streets and in cafes.

Mrs. Jacobson says native people must voluntarily give up alcohol before the problems will begin to clear up. She suggests abolition of Indian reserves and integration of Indian people into white society, a move she says would restore native people's self-respect.

She complains that tax dollars are financing Indian aid programs she says are failing in many cases, she says, government funded housing is burned down by the Indians and schools, such as an elaborate facility built at the Wabadeg reserve north of Kenora, are abused.

Ex-mayor Jim Davidson calls the book "garbage."

Buchanan Examines Book

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said Wednesday that he is examining Eleanor Jacobson's book about Indians to see whether it constitutes hate literature.

Wally Firth (NDP—Northwest Territories), a Metis, asked the minister in the Commons to consider taking action under existing hate-literature laws.

Mr. Buchanan said he has discussed the book, Bended Elbow—Kenora Talks Back, with Peter Kelly, chief of the Kenora, Ont., Indian Band and shares his concern.

Mr. Firth said later he had not read the book himself, but he read about it in a newspaper story. He was satisfied with Mr. Buchanan's response "because he seemed to be taking a positive approach."

Reach Contract
Letter Carriers Return to Work

Quinte Carriers Off Half a Day

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Regular home mail delivery resumed in Belleville and Trenton today as letter carriers returned to their routes.

Mailmen in both centres walked off their jobs Thursday morning protesting the progress of contract negotiations with the federal treasury board but were called back to work by 2 p.m. with the news a tentative agreement had been reached.

If this agreement had not been reached, Belleville letter carriers would have remained off the job for both Thursday and Friday with mail tied up until at least Monday. At Trenton, the walkout was to have been just for one day.

The key in the agreement is a cost of living clause — the first such clause ever granted a public service union.

Jim Campbell, president of the letter carriers in Belleville, told The Intelligencer Thursday night following an executive meeting "The executive will recommend that local members here approve the contract" in a vote to be taken during the next two weeks.

Conciliation had settled virtually every union demand more than a week ago but a rotating strike erupted when terms could not be met on a cost-of-living clause.

Such a rotating strike took hold of Belleville Thursday morning, threatening to tie up mail for 48 hours.

No sooner were the strike signs painted than the national union called off the strike, announcing the cost-of-living breakthrough and the order for the men to return to work.

The letter carriers' last contract expired Dec. 31.

Letter carriers now earn approximately $4.44 an hour.

Acceptance of the conciliator's report will mean an hourly increase of $1.70 an hour over a 30-month contract, paid in four stages.

Carriers will receive $205.60 a week retroactive to Jan. 1. A second raise, bringing wages up to $217.60 will take affect July 1. On Jan. 1, next year, the wage will be increased to $232.60 with the final raise of the contract coming the following July, bringing the weekly rate to $245.60.

The cost-of-living clause will cover only the last 16 months of the contract — providing an hourly increase of one cent for every .4 percent increase in the consumer price index. A cap has been placed on the clause which holds the cost-of-living increases to no more than 10 cents in any three month period.

Mr. Campbell said he did not fully understand the cost-of-living clause . . . only that "I'm glad the government finally realized we needed one".

Union locals across Canada will receive copies of the tentative agreement within the next week or so and will take a vote for ratification.

Dockers To Work On Monday

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec's striking longshoremen probably will not return to work until Monday, a spokesman for the Maritime Employers' Association (MEA) said Thursday night.

MEA President Arnold Masters agreed to a request by the Association (ILA) to allow workers to study during the weekend special legislation passed Thursday by the Senate, the MEA spokesman said.

The legislation orders back to work effective today, 2,200 longshoremen and 620 cargo checkers and repairmen, all represented by the ILA.

Marcel Jette, MEA executive secretary, said the employers' attitud was one of "total cooperation with the union."

Get $68 Plus Cost Of Living

OTTAWA (CP) — Striking letter carriers were to return to their jobs today on the orders of their national union executive after a tentative contract settlement was reached here Thursday.

The agreement came on the third day of widespread selective strikes across the country. Details were not disclosed but the settlement is based largely upon a conciliation report that proposed a total 86 a week pay increase.

The tentative agreement would affect 18,000 members of the Letter Carriers' Union who pick up and deliver mail. It must still be ratified by the membership.

Union leaders recommended the settlement to the membership and called for an end to all picketing and the 24-hour selective strikes which had hit cities across the country everyday this week except Wednesday.

The agreement provides for a cost-of-living clause to provide a measure of protection against inflation but the term of the settlement is longer than the two years provided for in the conciliation report prepared by L. O. Clarke of Ottawa, N.S.

The cost-of-living formula and duration of settlement were major issues in dispute in the final days of contract talks. The cost-of-living clause is the first ever negotiated between federal government and union officials. The only previous one in effect came through arbitration.

The ratification vote is expected to take two to three weeks and a union spokesman said details of the settlement would go out to members within a few days.

Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said he would be prepared to justify the size of the pay increase—about 38 per cent over two years in the conciliation report—when the details were made public.

As the settlement with the letter carriers was being announced, a dispute over post office use of casual labor flared up publicly again.

Three Die As Embassy Blasted

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Terrorists who held 12 persons hostage in the West German embassy for 12 hours dynamited the building in a futile attempt to escape after the Bonn government refused their demand for the release of 26 anarchists.

Police said there were three dead — the embassy's commercial and military attaches and one of the terrorists who killed himself.

The body of Heinz Hillegaart, the head of the embassy's commercial section, was found in the ruins of the building today. West German Ambassador Dietrich Stoecker said he was killed by the terrorists.

Two policemen and a hostage were in serious condition. Several others received minor injuries, including Stoecker, who was slightly burned.

Huong Seeks Peace Talks

SAIGON (AP) — President Tran Van Huong has initiated talks with North Vietnam on a negotiated peace settlement, a high-ranking government official said tonight.

The official said Huong is trying to send a minister of cabinet rank to Hanoi to get the Communist side's views.

He said the United States is also trying to get the talks going and has approved the call.

The cabinet minister tried to fly to Hanoi today but was not given immediate permission, apparently because authorities there had not received the required 24-hour notice. He is awaiting a reply from Hanoi. The United States held a plan up for two hours while awaiting permission.

It is the first time that South Vietnamese officials have made a direct approach for negotiations, indicating they now see that any chance of trying to defend Saigon militarily is hopeless.

In Washington, the senior Republican on the House of Representatives international relations committee, William Broomfield of Michigan, said there is "tacit understanding" the North Vietnamese will not attack Saigon until last Monday to permit evacuation of non-essential U.S. citizens.

Only 1,100 Americans In Saigon

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Communist-led troops now able to launch a massive attack on Saigon and close the city's airport, United States officials are trying to increase the evacuation of Americans and South Vietnamese to about 10,000 a day in a race against time.

Officials said the number of Americans in Vietnam would be reduced to 1,100 by today, down from 5,000 on April 1. The 1,100 total was said to be small enough to permit a one-day helicopter evacuation in any emergency.

A Senate-House of Representatives conference committee was expected to finish work today on a bill allowing President Ford to use troops, if necessary, and authorizing $327 million for the evacuation and humanitarian aid.

That compromise legislation was tentatively agreed to Thursday after differing bills were passed by the House and Senate. The final version could go to the Senate later today and to the House Tuesday.

In approving the use of troops to rescue Americans, the compromise bill also allows them to help evacuate Vietnamese if the number of troops and their deployment would not have to be altered.

With an estimated 14 divisions of North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops near Saigon, a Pentagon spokesman said Thursday the Communist-led forces might begin attacking the city "any minute."

Maj.-Gen. Wynant Sidle said U.S. officials had no idea of why the Communist-led troops have not taken advantage of their 3-1 numerical superiority over the South Vietnamese.

U.S. intelligence sources say North Vietnamese forces also are in a position to deny U.S. transport planes the use of Saigon's Tan Son Nhut airport whenever they choose.

In the face of such a development, President Ford would have to decide whether to send in helicopters and marines to carry out further evacuations, possibly from the U.S. embassy grounds in downtown Saigon.

Hydro Proposes 30 Pct. Rate Hike

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro submitted proposed 1976 rate changes Thursday to Energy Minister Dennis Timbrell that call for an average 29.7 per cent increase in wholesale rates to 353 municipal systems.

In the submission, Hydro chairman Robert B. Taylor said the effect on residential customers with a monthly bill close to the provincial average of $14.25 will range between $1 and $ a month.

Ontario Energy board hearings to examine the proposals are expected to begin early in June. The board will report to Mr. Timbrell by Sept. 1.

Mr. Timbrell said in a news release Thursday that the government is "vitally concerned over the substantial rate increases proposed." He said he will make a statement to the legislature on Monday.

Mr. Taylor said in the submission that the average industrial rate will be increased by 29.9 per cent.

He said the increases reflect rising fossil fuel costs and will provide additional revenue of $208 million from municipal utilities and $54 million from direct industrial customers.

The submission went on to say that "even with this addition, forecast revenues will fall short of forecast expenses by $96 million."

Mr. Taylor said at a news conference Thursday that Hydro expects a $62 million deficit this year and the $96 million deficit in 1976, despite the rate increases.

Negotiations Break Down

Health Board Nurses Seek Conciliation

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Contract negotiations between Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Board of Health and Local 31 of the Ontario Nurses' Association have broken down and the nurses have applied for conciliation, says Wilma Cassidy, president of Hastings and Prince Edward Nurses' Association.

She said Thursday the major issue is bringing the salaries of public health nurses to a par with those of hospital nurses.

"At present, nurses graduating from a two-year community college nursing course and nursing in a hospital have earned during the past nine months, salaries from $2,500-$2,800 more than those of public health nurses," said Mrs. Cassidy.

"These public health nurses have had at least four years of education in a nursing school, many have bachelor of science degrees in nursing as well as several years of nursing experience," she added.

Mrs. Cassidy explained, "In order to bring salaries of public health nurses to a par with hospital nurses, a notice was sent by the ministry of health to all boards of health on Aug. 12, 1974, stating that additional cash was available to establish pay patterns for registered nurses based on, but not exceeding, the amounts and time frame of the ONA settlement with hospital nurses . . . reached July 1, 1974.

"Several boards of health in the province have revised the salary schedule for nurses working in public health accordingly," she noted. "The 30 nurses of local 31 are hopeful that a similar settlement can be reached."

Since the health unit was formed in 1965, "the nurses have been among the lowest paid in any health unit in the province," Mrs. Cassidy said.

The nurses' last one-year contract expired Feb. 28. Talks have been going on since about mid-February. The health unit's nurses include public health nurses, registered nurses and registered nursing assistants.

The board's chief negotiator is Donald L. Black of Currie, Coopers and Lybrand Ltd., of Toronto, a management consultant firm. Larry Robbins of Toronto represents the nurses. He is employed by the ONA.

Freak April Snowstorm Cost $8,316 to Clean Up

TRENTON — Snow, snowstorms, plows turning up snow to block one's driveway. With spring now definitely in the air, such wintry thoughts are behind us.

Snow in any form seems to disrupt. School buses are cancelled. Workers arrive late. Appointments are missed.

For the Trenton works department, as for individuals, snow creates problems. Removal of snow from town roads costs money and can wreck, in a matter of hours, a budget planned for days.

As an example, says works commissioner Arie Hoorneweg, take the four-day storm that dumped about 12 inches of snow on the town April 1-4.

It was the worst storm in the 1974-75 winter season, he said Tuesday. The storm like this can cost you more than two or three small snos.

The town got four more inches of snow in those four days than it did in the entire month of March. It cost the town $8,316 to clean up the mess, over a fifth as much as it cost to clear town streets between January and March, 1975.

"If you get four storms like that a year, your budget can be shot," says Mr. Hoorneweg.

Luckily, the snowfall this year was not severe. "The last two years have been good," he says.

And luckily, the April storm hit during the working week, otherwise, weekend wage rates of up to double-time for town crews would have come into effect, increasing the cost of the storm to about $10,000.

As it was, says Mr. Hoorneweg, 376 regular man-hours and 289 overtime man-hours were put in. Men worked 16-hour shifts as the town kept its crews on Dundas and Front Sts. clearing snow.

So far this year, snow removal and related costs have meant a town expenditure of $49,226. That includes the freak April storm. From January to March, the town spent $40,920, down from the same period in 1974 when $46,300 was spent.

In 1974, the three months saw the major portion of last year's $69,000 snow removal budget disappear. As yet, it's not known what will shape up for this year since the 1975 current budget has not been struck by council.

Hospital Tightens Belt To Trim Rising Costs

TRENTON — Trenton Memorial Hospital board chairman Albert Ward expressed concern Thursday over the dramatic escalation of health care, costs which in 1974 increased 14.8 per cent over 1973 operating costs.

Higher costs, specifically in staff salaries and benefits in 1974, forced the hospital board to twice ask the provincial health ministry to increase its budget ceilings.

Mr. Ward, however, does not expect such a sharp increase this year.

After the hospital's annual meeting Thursday, he said supplementary money will not be requested from the province in 1975 "provided there are no changes in the basics that are used to establish the budget."

If major costs — cost of living increases and wage settlements — stay as projected for 1975, the hospital will be able to live within its 1974 actively approved 14.1-million budget, he said.

Last year the hospital spent $3.86-million, for which $2.4-million or 73 per cent went for salaries and staff benefits.

Provincial budget limitations made 1974 "the most difficult of any year" for the hospital to contain operating costs, he said.

The health ministry permitted only a 6.6-per-cent rise in 1974 over 1973's budget, said Mr. Ward: "A tall order indeed, with inflation at the time running over the nine percent-per-annum mark and later at around 13 per cent."

Cost escalations, he said, preclude any major expansion of existing services, staff increases, or addition of new services.

He predicted that 1975 capital expenditures will be stringently controlled because of the very limited funds now available." Money invested by the hospital has shrunk from $50,000 in January, 1974, to $5,000 at year's end.

Part of the investment capital went into the $125,000 revamping of radiological department equipment.

Trenton May Reduce Land Acquisitions

FRANKFORD — Trenton council is considering a slowdown in acquisition of land for the town's $1.5 - million greenbelt project in 1976 in the face of possible involvement in development plans by the Canada - Ontario - Trenton-Trent-Severn study committee.

An indication of Council's reconsideration of its expenditures came Thursday during a Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority advisory board meeting here.

Town clerk Anthony Sharp said "We feel we'd like to probably wait till we have discussion from the CORTS people, the advisory committee, before we go ahead and commit ourselves to further expenditures on this property." Mr. Sharp said the CORTS agreement is still young and its plans are not yet known. As a result, how it will affect Trenton's river banks is also unknown.

Any cut in town expenditures of property acquisitions would likely come next year.

Authority resources manager Bryan Boyce said Thursday he feels once the 1975 budget is approved, its program must be completed within the budget year. Otherwise, the authority would lose supplementary grants from the provincial government and be forced to increase levies to all 17 member municipalities the following year.

Service Shift Worries Hospital Directors

TRENTON — Trenton Memorial has received the assurance of the provincial health ministry that it can look after its own affairs, board chairman Albert Ward told the hospital annual meeting Thursday.

He was responding to a question from Trenton councillor George Crider. He asked if 1974 fears that the pediatric and obstetric wards might be moving to Belleville had been "put under the rug — or are we going to have it rear its ugly head again?"

The hospital board position move arose last year following release of a provincial commissioned report that recommended the two wards be moved to Belleville General Hospital. The health care study of Hastings County was written by Dr. Ian Gordon of Dalhousie University.

Mr. Ward said he did not anticipate any action from the study recommendations.

The hospital board position has always remained constant on the issue, he said. The board is opposed to any move of the wards to Belleville.

Library Board Named

MILFORD — A new board has been elected for the Ann Farwell Library in Milford.

Elections were held during a special meeting this week at Milford town hall.

Librarian and secretary is Ruth Ackerman, RR 1, Milford, chairman is Ann James, Milford, treasurer Flora Minaker, Milford and township council representative Clifford Walker of RR3, Picton.

Other board members include Yvonne Grimson, Joanne Kane, Sharlene Drury and Allen Fairley.

Estimates for an addition to the library are being obtained and the board plans to double floor space to accommodate the 2,000 new books offered through the Regional Library Association.

A new library sign is to be erected as part of the facelift for the building.

Library hours now extend from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. each Tuesday and from 1 to 5 p.m. on Saturdays.

If there is sufficient public interest, shorter library board said it will consider opening one other day each week.

Accreditation Rejected For Trenton Hospital

TRENTON — Trenton Memorial Hospital failed for the second consecutive year in 1974 to receive full accreditation by the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation.

The failure, said hospital board chairman Albert Ward, Thursday, was a source of disappointment to the board. Full accreditation, what he called the hospital's "badge of honor" escaped Trenton because the CCHA was dissatisfied with the medical staff on non-clinical issues.

Accreditation, still provisional for Trenton's hospital, was denied because the CCHA felt in-house evaluation by doctors of the work of their colleagues was not adequate, the hospital board was told Thursday.

Hospital administrator John Lupton said the public looks for a hospital fully accredited, as it also looks for a restaurant awarded five stars by the Michelin guide to good restaurants.

Another factor is also involved, he said. "In my opinion . . . recruitment of competent staff depends on it."

Before a hospital receives the CCHA's nod of approval, an in-depth analysis of all aspects of a hospital is studied — from food services to methods of keeping hospital medical records.

Lack of accreditation does not mean the hospital's care of patients is being criticized, Mr. Ward pointed out.

Cub, Scouts Canvass Trenton for Odd Jobs

TRENTON — Scouts and cubs in Trenton will be canvassing homes for a week starting Saturday, to find small jobs for pay.

The Trenton District Council, which represents about 320 boys, will launch the "Bob a Job" campaign to raise funds to send nine district scouts to the World Jamboree in Norway this summer.

Fifty per cent of all money raised will go to the Jamboree fund while the other half goes to the scout group to which the individual scout fund raiser belongs.

A district official suggests the boys be given jobs to suit their age. Each boy, from Beaver through to Venture, will wear his uniform when he canvasses Trenton homes for small jobs.

Each boy will also have a card for the homeowner to indicate the job and the payment given.

Homeowners who wanted a group of boys to do round-the-house chores can call 392-2083 to make arrangements.

Bancroft Suggested For Mineral Museum

By NAN WHITLAW
Staff Reporter

BANCROFT — The Bancroft and District Chamber of Commerce is convinced the North Hastings area is the perfect place for a museum of mineralogy and geology.

Ivor Macleod, president of the local chamber, said an appeal has been made to the Royal Ontario Museum (ROM) for the "establishment of a permanent geological subcomponent of the ROM in the Bancroft area."

Mr. Macleod bases his request on the fact the "Bancroft is the mineral Mecca of Canada and the popularity of rock collecting potential of the North Hastings area may be attested to by the fact that 25,000 tourists attended the Bancroft Rockhound Gembeere in 1974."

A number of requests have been made to the provincial government for action to protect and develop the mineral potential of the North Hastings area.

For the last three years, the Chamber has requested that the ministry of natural resources development maintain and freshen at least 20 mineral collecting sites for professional and amateur collectors.

At a recent meeting with representatives of the ministry, Mr. Macleod said he received the suggestion that "perhaps the best approach would be to have some person make application for a grant to carry out the work.

"What we really need," said Mr. Macleod, "is to have some action on the part of some agency of government."

The local Chamber president said "If we don't do something about the museum and nothing is done about the mineral sites, we'll just be writing the area off as a world renowned mineral collecting area."

The mineral potentials for the North Hastings area have been recognized by professional mineralogists for a number of years.

A group of Soviet geologists toured the area in 1970 and were able to gather a number of "museum specimens".

Dr. Donald Gorman of the mineralogy department of the University of Toronto has said North Hastings is "one of the most exciting places on the earth's crust".

Mr. Macleod indicates that the desire for the development of the area is "not only from the tourist point of view," but also as a "monument to preserve the natural heritage of the area and its records of the aeons of time."

Museum Backer

The president of the Bancroft and District Chamber of Commerce, Ivor Macleod, has requested that the Royal Ontario Museum establish a mineralogical and geological museum in the North Hastings area.

Police estimated damage to the vehicles at $2,500.

Dennis Raycroft of 217 East Bridge St. was charged after a padlock was smashed on a gate barring an entrance to the sand dunes.

He was apprehended by Bruce Stratton, an employee of the provincial ministry of natural resources at the Sandbanks park.

Security for Olympics

What price security at next year's Olympics?

The CBC reported recently they had gained access to hitherto unpublicized information on the extent of the security operation in Montreal.

It involves something like 5,000 troops and police aimed at covering every eventuality.

Was it a million dollars or more that was mentioned for the cost? In any event, the sentiment was expressed that hopefully, the men would not have to be called into action beyond keeping a weather eye on things.

The cost of course is worrying many Canadians. A reader has sent us a letter, together with a copy of The Westmount Examiner — a Montreal weekly — and he notes: "Remember when Jean Drapeau stated that holding the Olympic Games in Montreal would not cost the taxpayers "one red cent."

"And he added: "What a wonderful chance for Bud Drury to spend a half million in his own constituency."

Indeed, the editorial page of The Examiner contains a picture of Mr. Drury under the heading "Our MP Says" and an article by him . . . not on Olympic spending but a bread-and-butter piece on the Bail Reform Act.

On the other side of the page however is a report of an item from Mr. Drury's office. It says: "Tenders close next Wednesday for renovations to the old RCMP building on St. Catherine street. The federal government has called the tenders for construction of for security people involved with the 1976 summer Olympics. Expected cost of the renovations is about $500,000.

This may well cause embarrassment in the office of Mayor Drapeau, not to say anger among Canadians at large who feel they have been again led up the garden path by Ottawa regarding the spending of their tax dollars.

That aside, how much is enough in this matter of security? The lesson of Munich is one the authorities here are obviously taking seriously. They are right in taking the attitude that another Munich episode cannot be tolerated. If the security looks like "overkill," this is what may be necessary to avoid another tragedy. Besides, the security people need some place for accommodation and off-duty hours.

Deficient in Three Rs

In the wake of current educational events, it comes as little surprise that a 400-questionnaire survey by the Belleville and District Employment Committee reveals employers in the area feel students they hire are inadequate in such basics as spelling, mathematics, and English.

Criticism of a lack of emphasis in the school system of "the three Rs" has even prompted the recent meeting of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation to go on record supporting a "basic core" of compulsory subjects, as opposed to the free-wheeling option system that now exists.

What is most disturbing about the survey, which was studiously and painstakingly undertaken by Belleville industrial commissioner Fred Bemis in an effort to help BOTH employers and prospective employees, is that only 28 per cent of the employers polled responded.

Although it would be more time-consuming, we agree with the Quinte and District Labor Council's Doug Sword when he said personal interviews rather than mailed questionnaires might have yielded better response.

With education now accounting for half our municipal tax bills, we think we know how much federal and provincial government support, it hurts to hear local manufacturers saying things like "secondary school students lack understanding of industry."

If no more than 28 per cent of Quinte employers indicate some interest in the calibre of potential future employees, how can the remaining 72 per cent feel justified in complaining after the fact?

Lotteries Are Popular

Wintario.
Olympic Lottery.
Irish Sweepstakes.

Between these periodical chances to lose one's investment and — at this time of year — office hockey pools, the inability to say "no" can be expensive.

If you wonder why some ticket pushers seem so persistent, it is because many of them are on some sort of commission basis: a free ticket for every book sold, or a straight cash percentage of the total seller's take.

For example, the estimated 15,000 independent retailers that will participate in the new "Wintario" ticket sales each receives eight per cent commission.

Your friendly neighborhood gas station owner or grocer now gets a couple of thousand customers a week stands to make himself a tidy little income on the side, without having to do any more than provide a pen.

In any event, the success of lotteries, on the local, provincial, and national level, seems to indicate many people are free with their money at the same time as they complain about the rising cost of living.

Or maybe they live in hopes of winning a million just to keep pace with inflation!

Viewpoint

The Trentonian

It will take the perspective of history to judge events in southeast Asia. Communism is surely going to take by force what the United States tried to stop. Much money and many lives went into the long war there. Many things were done which revolted the human conscience. Unhappily, propagandists made the most of that, and the United States bore bitter criticism. Even now, there is a tendency to overlook the horrors perpetrated by the Communists, and to feel that their takeover is in some sense a gain for the people.

We would like to believe that. But experience of what Communism has done in other countries makes us doubt it. All that the unfortunate people in such countries seem to have had is one evil exchanged for another. The regimes they hard were no prizes. But what they have gained is the loss of all liberty.

It all seems so far away that we are able to brush it off, as we brushed off Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and others that fell to Communism.

But those who push this philosophy of total control of human destinies may take from their victories that the rest of us would rather not get involved as long as our own skins are safe, and piecemeal they will go on, until they have mastered most, and perhaps eventually, all of the world.

Don't deride the idea. The years since World War Two have apparently taught us nothing about the folly of appeasement, isolationism and non-involvement.

P. M.'s View of Recession, Immigration, and Foreign Policy

By JOHN D. HAEBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's view of recession and the next Commonwealth heads of government meeting, he revealed in Ottawa yesterday, the last such event having been in Ottawa in August, 1973.

He goes, having made some interesting statements on both domestic and foreign policy for Canada for the future as he sees them, in contexts which could more fairly associate these two policy areas than in the past.

On domestic developments, he has told us bell-ringingly, in a way unfamiliar to Canadians, will be ever let if the world recession and general economic downturn continue indefinitely at present rates.

(Canada's Gross National Product for example showed no noticeable increase at all in the first two months of 1975). I understand that to mean in real terms, since inflation has jumped somewhat since early January.

At the same time, he goes to a meeting of Commonwealth leaders mainly from Third World countries telling us we are going to be required to meet their needs as we have done since the 50s as a rich nation, but possibly in ways requiring more local control over what we give and how we give it.

But perhaps the area of still-to-be-determined public policy which will relate domestic and foreign policy more than any other issue of recent times, will be Canada's future attitude to ward immigration.

A recent poll taken by the CTV television network for their excellent 90-minute weekly public affairs program supplied depressing statistics about a Canadian desire to withdraw from an imaginative immigration policies.

The old, and still unsubstantiated fears about blacks having a larger role than whites in our growing cities rain, appeared to be behind some of the negative judgments made by the people polled.

But the general trend of the CTV survey indicated a desire to keep non-white immigration at a minimum or preferably cut it off altogether.

These kinds of negative public response, if translated into electoral action or demands on members of Parliament, suggest the possibility of Canada as a future, northern hemispheric Switzerland, closing its doors to legitimate new citizens from the Third World nations.

It is a very complex issue, not to mean that Canada is facing Canadians in the area of environmental, social and fiscal decisions or control of sea bed resources.

Perhaps Mr. Trudeau is trying us to be more open about the hazards ahead for a largely complacent Canadian society if we close our eyes, hearts and decision-making capacities to the real human and social problems which beset most of our world.

What we should do by compartions to determine both within the bureaucracy of government and in the public arena in what way our historic multilateral relationships must be shifted to meet different world

Computer-fraud Is a New Facet of the Crime Scene

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

If you've ever bridled at a bank teller who seemed to be taking extraordinary precautions when you simply want to cash a cheque, there's a reason for it.

The amount of fraud in Canada exceeds $1 billion a year. With a sum like that at stake, the banks are constantly stepping up their security measures.

The lose criminal has just about replaced the old-time organized gangs of bank robbers, according to Michael Ballard, director of security for the Canadian Bankers Association.

In a bank holdup, the average loss is less than $1,500—but the total over the course of a year amounts to $2 million across Canada.

The banks' biggest losses, however, are through fraud and forgery, said Mr. Ballard—a former Mounted Police fraud-squad detective—at a recent conference on security sponsored by the CBA.

Another conference speaker, Commissioner Maurice Nadeau of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, pointed out that technological progress has created novel opportunities for sophisticated crime.

"The computer and its ancillary equipment have become vulnerable," the top RCMP official said. "Appropriate measures are necessary to meet the growing need for reliable security of computer-based systems.

"The banks, as users of such systems, face a particularly difficult challenge."

One reason for the rise in sophisticated bank fraud was noted by L. R. Brown, manager of the Montreal data centre of the Toronto Dominion Bank.

Mr. Brown contended that some managements are taking unnecessary chances by over-centralizing their computer operations. Such firms could be destroyed by fire, vandalism or other dangers.

Alastair Paterson, senior systems engineer with Computer Business Machines, Canada Ltd., said the first precaution to be taken against computer-based fraud is to ensure that a dishonest employee could not work alone, but instead would have to conspire with other employees to pull off a crime.

"If the employee has to split the take with two others, the crime becomes less profitable," Mr. Paterson observed.

While the police urged greater vigilance and bankers called for more direct management, another conference speaker concentrated on the role of law.

Toronto lawyer D. G. Cooper suggested that some legal concepts might be changed, to take computer crime into account. "For example, the concept of property might have to be extended to cover bits of the contents of a computer programs—although it's possible that "judicial imagination" might see a place for existing legal definitions.

To counter the wave of fraud, the CBA's Michael Ballard said that his association and other financial-industry groups have increased their programs aimed at educating employees.

The 10 chartered banks in Canada employ 200 security officers, part of whose job is to maintain fast and close liaison with police authorities.

But as Canada's top policeman, RCMP Commissioner Nadeau pointed out computer crime remains one of the most difficult to detect.

He said that of 48 computer crimes uncovered in the United States during a given period, he recalled, all but two were detected by sheer accident.

The Rights of Married Women

By DON O'HEARN

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — This year, unless an election gets in the way, the government should be doing something about the rights of married women in Ontario.

Even those who are not impressed by women's lib (and I know I shouldn't be prejudiced I am) must admit that married women have not been granted equality in the law.

Without granting that the old concept that the family as the basic unit of society is outdated in the 1970s, wives (official or common-law) have not been given practical recognition.

If because they work all day, but because it is in the home (and even if it is in business) they have been given no legal recognition of this and the contribution they make.

And legally when it has come to divorce, separation or even desertion, the husband has been Big Chief and he will be the squaw.

Last fall the Davis government began to recognize this by introducing a bill, the Family Law Reform Act, which would have corrected some of the extreme hypocrisies in the existing law.

For one thing it would have given formal recognition to the contribution a wife had made to a business her husband (or the family) had built up.

The bill, however, had practically nothing to say about property rights. And it died on the order paper.

Since then Attorney-General John Clement has said he will be bringing in a new bill at this session, and presumably, it will be much broader.

Most interesting is that there has been a debate since then on a private members bill, in which representatives of all sides of the house expressed opinions and all three parties favored a new and stronger position for wives.

One proposal in this debate was that there should be premarriage agreements between couples.

James Renwick of the NDP even cited a model agreement from the United Kingdom in which both parties agree to be almost entirely on their own in what they want to do and even went so far as to say that they would share the house-keeping.

It is doubtful that the government would go as far as this agreement suggests.

But almost certainly it will go further this time and let into property rights.

And providing it does, the only logical step is for it to propose a law which would provide for equality of rights.

And today it should be able to do this without fear of political repercussions.

Tommy Mascaro, manager of the Capitol Theatre, was the guest of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures at that company's "Ticket-Selling Workshop" a one-day meeting of leading theatre men at the Statler Hotel, Buffalo, N.Y. on Monday April 18. The meeting was called primarily to convey to theatre owners and managers, ideas for attracting greater patronage at their box-offices as it is the belief of the motion picture industry's best advertising and publicity men that people are becoming increasingly aware of the efforts being made in Hollywood to introduce better attractions by use of the many new screen techniques. Mr. Mascaro said, on his return, that there is every reason to expect that even more fine pictures will be shown in the coming season.

At a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Belleville Agricultural Society it was decided to revive the poultry exhibit at the Belleville Fair this coming autumn. A generous prize list has been arranged for this feature. Further inducement to horse owners and breeders is seen in the augmented prize list for this year. The show will be held from September 17 through September 20.

Buyers will be coming from far north of Bancroft, Kingston, Cobourg, and most areas of Prince Edward County. Belleville businessmen have made special efforts to make this event the greatest ever staged in Belleville.

Economic Restraint Missing

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA The former Finance Minister John Turner can keep his job as the building federal government wage-and-salary freeze. But he has chances of serving that anti-inflation measure he has been cooking up these many months.

But the chances are in the Turner kitchen, and there is the smell of something burning.

What could ruin his recipe for national government restraint is the example the government gives to public service and even Parliament's setting.

Everyone is supposed to curb desire and demand—everyone, that is, except the feds themselves.

First the government, never spending as much as the current $28 billion plus.

Then Parliament with its perks increase all backdated to the last election for a MP's bill of better than $4,000 for each MP is an "outrageous" payment.

And finally the most frustrating disillusion of all — from where John Turner stands, the last straw, that 5 percent of the more than a million workers negotiating contracts this year are public servants.

So, they want theirs, the federal payroll.

Their ends are more than enough.

And from past strike action, legal and illegal, they're the militants.

Like the postal workers.

The rest of the country may be worrying about the slowdown of the economy — zero growth this year. Finally confesses John Turner, after not much better next year — but public service workers are "all right Jack."

Dismissal is next to impossible for almost many years. Job security. Jobs have many avenues of appeal, too many for the private sector, between those on the "big-and-slip" Parliament Hill payroll and the harsh economic realities of the outside world.

Then there are the automatic yearly pay increases, a set $1,000 a year, deserved and earned or not.

Finally, icing the security and pay cake in the public service is the inventiveness of the nation's finest-by-far pension plan.

A federal public servant starts at ahead of his opposite number in private business or industry on Day One of the job.

Secretaries, messengers, the juniors of the big bureaucracy, are off and running perhaps as much as an annual $1,500 to $2,000 ahead of their counterparts who toil for the federal payroll.

Then there are those "flexible hours" — come and go on a working schedule of your choice — generous holidays, 18 days leave that can be "banked" from year to year, "re-instate leave," and low job pressures.

Then walk down the corridor of any federal building in the capital. Look at the faces there and see them taking their ease.

— the fact that, in fact, just chat, read the papers, or even sleep is not a crime. It is believe it — among their lazy-spark revived chaps.

Finance Minister Turner? What consensus?

Ontario Science Centre Head Plans to Change Every Hall

TORONTO (CP) — To one of the friends John Tuzo Wilson was known as "the benign cyclone of science."

For the last six months Dr. Wilson has been director-general of the Ontario Science Centre, the so-called push-but-not museum that is the Canada government's pride and joy.

No cyclones, benign or not, have as yet hit the centre so far; But Dr. Wilson isn't sitting on his hands either.

"There will be changes in practically every hall, in every corner" of the 250-million centre, he says. For the moment, however, he won't go into details.

"We should wait until the chickens hatch."

Dr. Wilson, 66, is the first scientist to head the centre and fourth director-general since the institution came into being nine years ago.

As conceived by its architect, Raymond Moriyama, the centre would be a place of "wonder . . . an emotional experience with intellectual satisfaction."

The Moriyama vision was realized, and, better still, it was a great popular success.

Last year the centre attracted 1.8 million visitors, many of them school children and older students, who have been given an insight into the technology that is shaping the world.

When the Ontario government has an important announcement to make, or wants a place to play host to an important personage—the Queen Mother last summer, for example—the Science Centre usually gets the nod.

Sometimes described as the "please touch museum," the centre's emphasis has been involvement of the visitor in its exhibits, whether they be simulated docking procedures of space craft in orbit, or computer problems, which work only when an visitor operates the equipment.

Dr. Wilson, as anyone who knows anything about him will attest, is not one to let the museum rest on its laurels.

Despite his age, he exposes himself to a punishing schedule that includes lecturing, attending symposia in far-flung places, writing scientific papers and books that reflect his expertise in geology and geophysics and working long, hard days at the centre, which sometimes begin as early as 6:30 a.m.

He took the $35,000-a-year job after serving a seven-year stint as principal of University of Toronto's Erindale College.

Dr. Wilson is one Canadian scientist with a truly international reputation, which has at his core a gritty non-conformity.

In 1963 Dr. Wilson, taking up an idea that had long been discarded by his peers, wrote a paper supporting the continental drift theory. This suggests that the original land masses on the surface of the globe have been on the move for millions of years, splitting, breaking up and colliding—and that today's continental features are themselves temporary positions in a geologic kaleidoscope.

Today, most geologists accept the Wilson theory and this has given rise to a massive body of written material in a field which, in Dr. Wilson's words, had reached a "dead end" a few years back.

Can similar revolutions be expected at the Ontario Science Centre?

Probably not. Dr. Wilson says that at the centre "we have a good thing going."

But that does not mean he is wholly satisfied.

He wants exhibits that will show the evils of ecological damage. He is worried about the centre's "age gap"—the fact that it is enormously popular with young people and has programs in the history of science that attract the elderly. But lesser efforts, statistically, has been shown by the middle-aged and the young marrieds.

Model Helicopter May Be Rescue Unit

TOKYO (AP) — A radio-controlled model helicopter like those sold in hobby shops may become a valuable tool in helping to save people trapped in burning multi-story buildings, say Tokyo fire department researchers.

They are experimenting with a five-pound helicopter model to carry something like a strong fishing line to victims trapped in a building who cannot escape down regular fire ladders.

The victims would use the thin line to pull up a rope ladder or some other lifeline on which they could be saved, said Matsufumi Kato, head of one of the divisions of the Tokyo Scientific Fire-Fighting Laboratories.

"Of course we have real helicopters and fire stations with tall ladders, but because of the conditions of Japan's housing we cannot use this equipment all of the time," Kato said in an interview.

"Since this is a tiny helicopter, its stability is not too high. But the advantage is that it is only an inexpensive model and we can use it for many risky tasks in narrow spaces.

"If we can help save one life it is cheap enough and that is the basic assumption on which we are developing this helicopter."

Work began on the project last summer and the metropolitan fire department hopes to have the helicopter operational within two years. The main problem seems to be learning how to fly the model, which has controls roughly like those on a real helicopter.

Researchers are experimenting with helicopters that look like those a hobbyist might buy. But the proposed rescue craft probably would be somewhat larger and stripped of all decorative fuselage to allow it to lift more.

The experimental helicopter is powered by an eight-tenths-horsepower motor and will fly about 15 minutes on a full tank of fuel. Two of the craft's four radio channels control the main rotor, the third is for the tail rotor and the fourth adjusts engine speed.

It can carry more than one pound and officials believe a helicopter can reach at least 100 feet from the burning building. The tallest fire department ladders only reach the 19th floor.

There is not much hope of people using ladders or ropes to escape from ultra-tall buildings, Kato said.

The model helicopter is intended primarily for rescue from smaller buildings located beside the tallest ones in crowded urban conditions.

Bowery Was Once Stuyvesant's Farm

NEW YORK (Reuter) — For many New Yorkers, the Bowery means sidewalks strewn with splinters of cheap wine bottles and grimy drunks collapsed in doorways of decrepit buildings.

It is a street where motorists who stop for a red light are likely to draw drunks staggering over to wipe windshields with dirty rags, hoping for an instalment on the next drink.

On the sidewalk, lone disheveled figures weave aimlessly over dirty cement, pushed by only the instinct to keep moving. Others cluster in the cold on corners and in doorways to gulp slugs of cheap wine.

For many, the Bowery is the underbelly of New York society.

With this view of skid row decay it is difficult to imagine the Bowery's bucolic and even elegant past.

In the 1600s, New York was mostly small sharks in what now is known as the Wall Street financial district. Uptown, farmland spread over a countryside and the director-general of New York City, Peter Stuyvesant, owned a farm on what now is 13th Street. The country lane leading to his land was known as the way to the Bouwerie, or farm.

During the American Revolution the road, by now known as the Bowery, defined elegance with its luxurious townhouses and fashionable shops but by the 1800s, the Bowery had begun its steady descent from opulence to hotels, run-down hotels and their inhabitants—the first of the city's transient derelicts.

Today the road in downtown, Manhattan called the Bowery runs for 15 blocks. It starts at Chatham Square in Chinatown and heads north across Canal Street to Cooper Square, where it becomes Third Avenue and a main route to the fashionable bars and restaurants of Manhattan's Upper East Side.

On East Houston Street where a smart shop or country house might once have stood, there is Trader Nick's where a faded sign on a rickety building declares: "We buy and sell anything of value."

On the pavement in front is a sagging rack of used clothing. Inside the tiny cubicle makeshift bins are stuffed with piles of used shoes and everything is dwarfed by dangling garments of musty clothes hanging from everywhere.

Walking up the Bowery there is Joey's Junk Shop, Everready Coffee Urn Repair Company and Tip-Top Equipment, Inc. There also are the bars with such names as Sunshine, Old Dover and Majestic and Top-houses like the Palace Hotel, White House and Keston Hotel.

Oil Output Drops

REGINA (CP) — "Statistics tell the story," says Bill Spicer, Saskatchewan manager of the Canadian Petroleum Association.

Oil production in Saskatchewan averaged 171,300 barrels a day during the first three months of 1975, down from 205,400 barrels in 1974, 230,000 in 1973, 240,700 in 1972 and 246,000 in 1971.

The decline in oil production was purely geological up to 1973, as the most serious sedimentary basin has been drying up.

Since Bill 42, or the Oil and Gas Conservation, Stabilization and Development Act was introduced in December, 1973, in the Saskatchewan legislature, Mr. Spicer said the decline has been due to political decisions.

He said as a result of Bill 42, the industry's income decreased by 11 per cent in 1974, while the government's take increased by 583 per cent.

The physical production capacity of Saskatchewan's oil fields now is estimated by the department of mineral resources at 227,000 barrels a day.

But in January, February and March this year, nominations filed with the department totalled 183,878, 172,738 and 156,848 barrels a day respectively, or 80 per cent, 76 per cent and 69 per cent of all field capacity, for a first-quarter average of 171,154 barrels a day or seven per cent of capacity.

Why, in a time of energy shortage, is oil production down in Saskatchewan?

Arne Nielsen, president of Mobil Oil Canada Ltd. of Calgary, a major operator in Saskatchewan, has this to say:

"Rapidly increasing government takes from all revenues have placed the production industry in a position at loss, break-even, or at best, marginal financial return, depending on the province in which the activity is located.

"While the petroleum-producing industry is having its difficulties in Alberta and British Columbia, and on federal lands in the frontier areas, the most serious problem is in Saskatchewan, where there is little incentive to produce oil, and even less incentive to make expenditures for exploration and to continue development of known oil fields."

The lack of incentives to produce is one problem. Another problem, Mr. Spicer said, is that about half of Saskatchewan's oil is exported to the United States, where a market exists for heavy medium gravity crudes which constitute two-thirds of Saskatchewan's production.

Ottawa's decision to reduce exports is having an impact on Saskatchewan production, more serious than it is having on Alberta, as the better-quality, lighter crudes of Alberta are easier to market and readily usable by refineries in Canada.

And some Saskatchewan crudes, especially some medium-gravity crude produced in the Swift Current area—are becoming uncompetitive on the export market, Mr. Spicer said. As a result, U.S. demand for Saskatchewan crudes is currently taken up by Mexican crude and Arabs increase their price for oil.

West European Parliament Elections May Be in 1978

BRUSSELS (AP) — Plans are being made for the first international elections in European history, probably in 1978, to choose a West European Parliament.

It will be an important step toward the long-sought goal of a United States of Europe, although there will still be a long way to go.

Since the Second World War there have been many bodies that looked like international legislatures—the Council of Europe, the Assembly of the West European Union, the North Atlantic Assembly. But they have no real powers and their members were not elected by popular vote.

The European Assembly, which recently changed its name to the European Parliament, acquired some actual authority and has laid down guidelines for its own direct election. It has become the potential legislative arm of the European Common Market.

Elections were to have been held in the early 1960s, but Charles de Gaulle was in power in France and he was against strengthening supranational institutions. Some other European leaders were not much more enthusiastic.

When Valery Giscard d'Estaing became president of France last year, he came out cautiously for direct election of the European Parliament by 1980. Other West European leaders went along, although Prime Minister Harold Wilson refused to commit Britain until he holds a vote at home on whether to stay in the Common Market.

The parliament itself, in a little-noted resolution approved at a meeting in Luxembourg in January by a vote of 107 to 2, decided that the first direct election should be held no later than the first Sunday in May, 1978.

It wants all nine countries to take part in choosing a single house of 355 members, allocated roughly in accordance with each country's size. West Germany would have 71 seats, Britain 67, Italy 66, France 65, the Netherlands 27, Belgium 23, Denmark 17, Ireland 13, and Luxembourg 6.

Even More on Canada's Trade Ever More on Canada's Trade

HAVANA. — I went to Cuba with the trade mission of Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Alastair Gillespie with the firm impression we were going to preserve the growing Cuba-Canada trade and aid connection before Castro's moderation of the once all-embracing political and trade association with the nearby United States.

It looks as though I was wrong. Canadian industries and suppliers of technology to Cuba's needy Marxist economy, whose communiques here were considerably extended during the Gillespie visit, were assured by the cabinet ministers they met that Canada would be needed more not less during the upcoming Five Year Plan, (1975-1980).

The Cubans have one year in which to express their intent of using the $100 millions in new credits offered by the Canadian Government's Export Credit Corporation. They are sure to do so because of Canada's assured role in the Five Year Plan.

This role will be channeled through a Cuba-Canada "joint commission" an amalgam of the socialist bloc's "mixed commission" and the Canadian ministerial meetings of the kind we established with Mexico in 1970 and the U.S.S.R. in 1971. This was agreed to during a most unusual meeting between Mr. Gillespie and Dr. Carlos Rafael Rodriguez, Vice Prime Minister of Cuba and one of the leading Marxist economists of modern times. It was unusual because he agreed the Canadian press could attend and even take part in it.

Mr. Gillespie invited Dr. Rodriguez to visit Canada for the first meeting of the proposed Cuba-Canada joint commission on trade and industrial development later this year, an invitation he warmly accepted.

The affable and goateed Dr. Rodriguez spoke in return of his gratitude for Canadian loyalty to Cuba through difficult years (a reference to the fact we continued to do business with Cuba during the American blockade which still exists after 14 years).

"Canada was one of the few countries which took a firm stand in favor of freedom of commerce," he told us. "While others discussed blockade, this position based on principles of international obligations we shall not forget."

The depth and scope of our present technological commitment to Cuba became clearer during our visit as the press, along with the 50 businessmen and Mr. Gillespie's aides, held meetings with several of Castro's cabinet ministers and individual business executives in state enterprises.

That scope of products and services already but steadily offered to Cuba in growing amounts during the 60s and 70s justified perhaps Mr. Gillespie's estimate of about $400 millions annually in business with Cuba by the 1980s. Last year's Canadian exports to Cuba of $142.4 millions was a record amount and well over the 1972 figure of about $100 millions.

From a few Canadian firms, notably Semex Canada Limited, Guelph, Ontario, Canadian skills, in this case veterinary science, have helped re-fashion an industry in Cuba to meet its new needs.

The Canadian Holstein-Friesian strain, mixed with the indigenous Cuban Cebu breed, has produced a new kind of cattle which can survive the predatory Cuban tick and the heat, and give an adequate supply of the milk which Castro has promised children will have in their diet.

The frozen semen strains developed by this Ontario firm have rejuvenated a Cuban cattle industry which was unwisely destroyed at the beginning of the revolution in a gesture to wipe out the huge, American-owned cattle ranches. Castro could not continue to do this and still provide children impoverished under the old regime, the milk promised to them by the new.

The span of existing and future Canadian exports and technical aid involvement in Cuba is substantial, covering the range of the 70 per cent of goods and services from the United States from which Cuba was cut off at the beginning of the 60s by the U.S. blockade.

Members of the Gillespie mission also had private meetings in Havana and the provinces with state specialists in power development, seed potato imports, end-uses for bagasse, the residual short fibres produced in the million of tons each year from sugar grinding, and more Canadian locomotives for the Cuban State Railways.

In the meantime, French and West German agreements along the line of the joint commissions planned with the Canadians, as well as their generous credit deals in the hundreds of millions of dollars, wait to be signed after Mr. Gillespie's departure.

In all this bustle to modernize the nation, Cuba's top technocrats show a bargaining skill and a sense of entrepreneurship, since the managerial preserve of the old millionaires, which foreign industrialists admire and are willing to work with. Selling goods and services to them in a time of record high inflation is hard work, since the Cubans do not wish to "import" our inflation in the goods they buy and so shun open-ended contracts and because "inflation" is not officially part of a socialist economy. We were told that food prices are the same as they were in 1960, the first full year of instituting the Marxist economy in Cuba.

Fidel's top managerial elite knew what they want from the West and presumably have made a quiet deal with the still dominant Russians in seeking technology.

It's all taking place partly because Castro's economy has $1 billion in extra sugar earnings to spend, a result of last year's bumper world sugar prices and partly because Canadian industrialists who mean at home about "creeping socialism" in Canada's economy, find they can do business just fine with Cuba's Marxist planners.

It's an anamoly in our foreign trade pattern which could make Cuba our largest trading partner in Latin America.

It might even see Prime Minister Trudeau's "third option" for trade diversification work better in Fidel Castro's Havana than in the rich and disinterested trading centres of the European Common Market with whom he tried to establish his mysterious "contractual link" in early March of this year.

Sand Islands May End Oil Drilling Problem

BRIGHTON, England (CP) — Artificial islands made of sand may be a cheap and simple solution to problems of drilling for oil in deep waters. The idea was put forward in a paper read at the Oceanology International Conference by Brian Dowse of a firm of consulting engineers.

Offshore structures now are made of concrete or steel and cost as much as £100 million ($200 million). But, Dowse said, there is a readily available construction material already in the sea—sand. At first sight, it seemed enormous volumes would be needed to build an island to come up above the waves at 300 feet.

The answer was to use a watertight membrane to contain the sand, making it possible to build a sand tower with nearly vertical sides, supported by hydrostatic pressure and with a concrete drilling platform on top.

A typical production platform of this kind in 500 feet of water would take only 70 million cubic feet of sand. It could be placed in the membrane and drain[illegible] in three months. This was well within the normal fire-month period of good weather in the North Sea.

The concrete platform would be floated to the site with the membrane attached underneath, folded up like a concertina. The membrane would then be anchored to the bottom and filled with water.

Sand filling and pumping out the water would go on simultaneously and when the membrane was almost full, the platform would be floated up higher out of the water.

Finally, sand filling would be completed, the deck anchored to it and a second membrane attached. There would probably be a need for occasional water pumping, Dowse said, because no membrane would be perfect.

Model testing of the idea, said Dowse, has been going on at five-foot-high sand structures was being made up.

Sell That Ant To Mr. Bobkin

TORONTO (CP)—Don't squash that ant-sell it.

Arnold Bobkin sells ant farms to children, businessmen and teachers and, as president of Canadian Merchandiers, is always ready to buy ants in mint condition.

He said he needs between 10,000 and 15,000 ants a week and is willing to pay half a cent each for them.

Mr. Bobkin said he sold about 500,000 ants last year and recently advertised for "ant diggers." Most of his ants are supplied by three or four persons.

"Having an ant farm is like having your own construction project to watch," he said eyeing the two farms beside his desk.

Inside the plexiglass walls, his ants rush about digging tunnels, building food storerooms and performing other duties.

"Christmas just about wiped out our stock of kits and ants-well, we're looking at one for more."

The kits include two sheets of plexiglass and a frame which form a half-inch-wide house for the colony. Also included in the kit are sand, a magnifying glass, an Ant Watcher's Society membership card and a certificate that each member can use to order a fresh supply of 15 ants.

University Seeking Old Photographs

HALIFAX (CP) — Dr. Charle Armour is on a photographic treasure hunt for Dalhousie University.

Dr. Armour, archivist of the university, is appealing to Dalhousie alumni not to throw out those old, yellowed class and team photos that may turn up in spring cleaning of the attic and basement.

Such pictures are relics of the university's past and Dr. Armour would like to add them to the considerable collection that gives a pictorial history of the institution.

Among those already on hand are early football photos, pictures of faculty, students and graduates of 1869-70, the law class of 1906 and an autographed photo of the Duke of York, during a visit in 1913.

The duke later became King George VI.

Thar's Gold In Lottery Operation

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition members of the legislature said Thursday the real winners of Ontario's lottery will be official distributors of the tickets.

Richard Smith (L—Nipissing) told the legislature one distributor in Northern Ontario might make $5,500 every two weeks because of the ticket distribution method he is using.

Mr. Smith said J. P. LaBelle, lottery agent for the North Bay, Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie areas, would receive a seven-per-cent commission on the 12,000 $1 tickets given to him to distribute in the area.

He said, Mr. LaBelle was to hire five salesmen to help in distribution but instead handled it himself, giving the bulk—more than 40,000 tickets—to retailers in Sudbury.

Mr. Smith said North Bay was to receive 9,000 tickets but got only 1,750. He said that only 750 tickets went to Sault Ste. Marie out of the 15,000 which were to be distributed here.

He said outside the legislature the lottery officials were aware of the distribution situation and had sent an additional 7,500 tickets to the North Bay area.

Albert Roy (L—Ottawa East) told the legislature that he objects to the distributor in his area, ern Messier, a Quebec resident who he said might receive about $100,000 a year from distribution of tickets.

He said Mr. Messier also is a distributor of Olympic lottery tickets with a network of distribution already set up.

Mr. Roy said the distributor also receives 45 cents for every Olympic Lottery ticket sold.

Davis Offers Pledge Fees Won't Increase

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Premier William Davis offered to put into writing Thursday a pledge to high school students that university tuition fees will not increase next September.

Speaking to an assembly of 300 high school students, Mr. Davis termed "totally false" the contents of a newspaper advertisement criticizing the government's approach to post-secondary education.

The ad, bearing the headline Bill Davis Doesn't Want Your Child To Go To University, suggests that the ministry of colleges and universities plans to double tuition fees and after student loan programs to place a greater financial load on students.

It was published in Toronto newspapers Wednesday and Thursday and was paid for by the Students Administrative Council at the University of Toronto.

50-cent Gas Boost Would Just Be Start

OTTAWA (CP) — A price increase of 50 or 60 cents would be just the start of what the United States can expect to pay for Canadian natural gas in future years, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday.

Mr. Macdonald, leaving a federal cabinet meeting that discussed export gas prices, said further increases are planned over the next few years.

But the minister said the cabinet had made "no final decision" on the new price level, which the National Energy Board says should go to $1.50 or $1.60 from a current price of $1 a thousand cubic feet.

New Laws Hampering Business Planning

TORONTO (CP) — A "virtual forest" of new laws and legislation is interfering with ability of Canadian business to plan effectively for the future, a spokesman for The Conference Board in Canada said Thursday.

J. R. Levesque, director of management practices, said there must be closer co-operation between business and government if both are to achieve the desired results for the Canadian economy.

In the last few years, government had moved into such areas as foreign ownership, consumer protection, concentration of economic power and taxation reforms. But "where an attempt has been made to establish co-operative mechanisms, results have been less than outstanding . . ."

Mr. Levesque was on a panel at a conference, sponsored by the board, on corporate planning in the late 1970s. The board includes more than 500 representatives from business, labor and government.

Gordon Osbaldeston, secretary for the federal treasury board said government planning requires constant adaptation and the critical problem is proper co-ordination.

He said that while industry has a single objective of receiving an adequate return on its investment, government faces a multitude of objectives, some of which are often conflicting.

Quinte Women

Cindy Kaye, LCBO Clerk

Cindy Kaye

Weekend shoppers in the Liquor Control Board store have noticed a radical change there — for the last few weeks there's been a young woman behind the counter.

"I'm the first in Belleville, and I'm kind of proud of that," says Cindy Kaye with a smile.

One of the Northern Electric assembly line workers laid off this winter, Cindy is taking an accelerated accounting course through Manpower at Loyalist College. She's working part-time at the liquor store, and considering it as a full-time job when she graduates a year from now.

Cindy, who has a year's experience as a cashier in A & P and Food City, got the job after the manager asked her one day, when she was in the store cashing a cheque, whether she'd like to work there.

"I said okay right away, since I'd already thought about applying for a position there," she says.

When the store becomes a self-service operation, there will be three female cashiers, so that other young women will soon be hired too, Cindy says.

After one day on the job, however, Cindy got promoted to the position of clerk, which means that she makes much more per hour than she would in the female cashier classification.

"I help bring the cases up, fill the bins with bottles, and keep them dusted," Cindy says of her job. "It's easy to learn where everything goes.

"I'll be getting to know office procedures too. I want to learn as much as I can, since I'd like to work my way up in the Liquor Control Board."

Happily, Cindy has encountered no resistance to her occupying a formerly male-only job.

"My parents think it's great," says Cindy, who graduated from Quinte Secondary School in 1971. "My friends teased me a little at first, but now they just think as I do, that it's just a job.

"With one rude exception last week, all the customers' comments have been really positive. I think women — especially are glad to see me behind the counter.

"The guys here are tremendous. They treat me like a daughter or like a friend.

"It's like any store work," she concludes. "Except on holiday weekends, when it's so busy that it's almost dizzying."

Ann Landers'

Identify Old Photos Now!

Dear Ann Landers: I've learned a lot from your column. Now it's my turn to teach somebody something. It's a lesson that comes out of my own experience.

My sister and brother and I are in our mid-forties and passed away last week. We agreed to get together last night at Mama's house, go through her possessions and divide every thing.

We came across a large box of wonderful photographs and snapshots. Some go back 75 years. Mama undoubtedly got many of these pictures from her mother and grandmother. The people are so attractive and wonderful looking, but we have no idea who they are.

What a shame that someone didn't take the time and trouble to jot down on the back of each picture the names and a few notes about the people. Even the city would be a clue. What a pity! All these beautiful faces centers and no one will ever know their names, where they came from or anthing about them.

Please print this letter and tell your readers it would take only an hour or so to go through the family's old pictures and identify the people. What a favor you will be doing for those who one day will want to know — Mystified.

Dear Mistyy: Thank you for the excellent suggestion. I think I'll do it tonight!

Dear Ann Landers: Am I crazy? If so, please tell me. There's a woman living in a world home. We ate our meals together and talked to each other at the table. There was no "cocktail hour."

When I married I had the nutty idea that my marriage would like my parents. But I was wrong. My husband's family cocktailed it up every night and he insists on doing the same, even though I don't drink. If the kids are kept waiting an hour, so what? Daddy has to "unwind" with three or four martinis.

When I look around I must admit my husband doesn't drink any more than his brothers and sisters, or most of our friends. Whenever we go to a party, people drink like hoses as if they're in a contest to see who can pass out first, vomit the most, or feel lousiest the next day.

Is getting bombed really fun? should teach my children that they don't need to cope with problems, just get stinko and forget about them. Is a person who doesn't drink considered freaky?

Is there ANY occasion where an adult can order tonic juice (these days and not be ridiculed or pestered to "have a REAL DRINK"? K I repeat my first question: Am I crazy? — Odd Ball

Dear Ball: No, you aren't crazy. And chances are a lot of those boozers aren't crazy either. They're just insecure, troubled people who can't face their own inadequacies and anxieties, so they try to numb over themselves against the pain of living.

Unfortunately, the more they drink the less able they are to cope. Bladder will, they really do hate themselves because they wish they could order a tomato juice and feel as well and look as good as you.

Hang in there, honey, and don't despair. Of all bad, your children have ONE model they can pattern their lives after.

Dear Ann Landers: I read a phrase in the crazy lady who wrote, "C'mon, Ann, what would the wedding night be like if both were virgins?" Her point was that a man should be experienced or the nuptial night would be a disaster. She's wrong.

I was 20 when I married and Jim was 21. We were both virgins. I admit I was a little scared at first, but a scene of humor can make all the difference in the world. I'm sorry we didn't have a recording machine under the bed. We kidded each other made jokes about our clumsiness and laughed until the tears rolled down our cheeks. It was one of the most hilarious evenings of our lives.

Laughter can be a great tension-breaker and that's the way it worked for us. Actually nothing much happened that night but it was just as well. We were both exhausted from the wedding and reception. He proved to me, "Tomorrow night will be different." I replied, still laughing, "it had better be or I'm going home to mother."

Now, 20 years later, we are extremely happy and have a wonderful sex life. People who care about each other don't need experience. Just a lot of love and patience will do—Just Ask Us.

Dear Just: Thank you for sharing an intimate experience. You are so right about laughter. It can be an escape valve that prevents many a catastrophe. You' letter was a perfect example. Jim sounds like a lovely doll.

Dear Ann Landers: This letter might not be appropriate when material, but I'm writing anyway. Maybe it will give the average citizen a clue as to why certain issues are voted against, even though they are in the best interest of the public.

A badly-needed one-cent sales tax was rejected by the electoral in our community last week. A woman told me, "My baby was mistreated by the coach and I decided not to vote for anything that might help the school system."

I taught for six-foot, one-inch "baby" when he was in junior high. He was the meanest kid I ever had in all my years of teaching. Isn't this ridiculous?—Tired, Louisiana

Dear Tired: Of course it's ridiculous—but people vote their prejudices and short-term self-interests. The only way we'll ever overcome such ignorance

Dear Ann Landers: My cousin has a 19-year-old daughter who is very much overweight. The relationship between the mother and child is not good. Unfortunately, the mother is a natural

The Pencil Skirt Returns

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP)—The new look is straight and rolled up to mid-calf in cotton, duck and denim fabrics," said Mrs. Kanda.

Mrs. Morgan said the secret of co-ordination and economy is to stay with a color range.

"Choose the best colors in good taste," she said. "The safest way is to build on earth tones with beige, green, blue and grey rather than definite colors. This way, any accessories will go with the outfit.

"If on a budget, a woman is better to choose black over brown. Black was out of fashion for about 10 years, but has become popular again this year."

Mrs Morgan said that once the new outfit is purchased, it is wise to carry through on jewelry hair and accessories in order to create the total look. As for footwear, she suggests that with slight changes each season, a shopper purchase one pair of shoes per season.

"Don't buy pants," said Mrs. Kanda. "Rather invest money in dresses and skirts. Pants are still worn for sportswear but women are discovering how now they look slimmer in a skirt."

Doris Clark

Lend a Helping Hand To Ease Your Sorrow

Dear Doris: We too lost our dearly beloved daughter — just two months ago.

Is there anything I could read (besides the Bible) which would ease the sorrow just a little?

Gratefully, Dear Gratefully: Losing a loved one is the kind of grief you don't get over in a day or two, no matter how strong your faith that you will see your daughter again.

If you try to carry on just as if nothing had happened, and swallow that lump in your throat too much, your emotional disturbance will show itself in some other way — and perhaps in some way that is not good for you.

You can find some excellent inspirational books in your library, and I am listing one or two in my private reply to you.

The thing which helps greatly is to lend a hand to someone else who is in need of help. If you have never tried volunteer work I would suggest you go to the volunteer bureau or planning agency in your own city and offer to help. Social workers are always in need of willing volunteers and wouldn't get nearly as much done if they didn't have them.

Dear Doris: I belong to a dating club. The first date is a blind date. After that it may be a couple or more dates, or, as in some cases, no more. What would you call the right or proper way to dress — casual or a sports coat (blazer) with a shirt and tie? Example — dinner and a movie.

Is it proper or right to give a girl a gift (or flowers) after the first date? If so, what would be a suitable one?

Pete, Dear Pete: Flatter her — dress up for her! This is no time for ragged jeans, messy hair — or any of the other so-called symbols of the Teenage Fashion.

A restaurant and then a movie? Blazer, shirt and tie would probably be best.

If you send her posies or candies after that first date, she'll know she has made a hit. Don't do it unless you mean it.

Confidential to Foster Aunt: When a girl of 15 gets pregnant, there will be some suffering about it, whatever she does. Adoption is often the best solution.

For one thing, she is hardly mature enough to raise a child. For another, she needs those carefree years to finish her education and to choose her life work. Before starting a family, Thirdly, the baby she will have to part with will go into the welcoming arms of adoptive parents.

If she keeps her baby, she faces a hostile and critical world. If she lets it go she may wonder, at various times in her life, where that baby is now. Perhaps she will look at children who might be the age of her own and ask herself, "Could that be him?" or "Does she look like that now?"

A kindly and understanding social worker can help her through this difficult time and desperately difficult decision.

Just Perfect For The Cottage

Buddy Electric had some great news when I called this week. They told me about the KALOR portable electric furnace, which is perfect for cottage or recreation room storage. This unit, which looks like a bookcase, looks up like a dryer and functions on one circuit. There isn't anything complicated about it, and it saves space. Buddy Electric's Consumer Division at 291 Coleman St. is the exclusive dealer for the Kalor portable electric furnace in the area. And if it's air-conditioning you're thinking of, Buddy can help you there with their selection of Westinghouse air conditioners. There's certainly a lot to recommend to Buddy Electric than just their pretty windows, isn't there?

A Cameron Show

Artist Donnah Cameron will be featured in a two week exhibition at the Corby Library starting May 5. Her exhibition will be concurrent with that of Emilly Carr which will be featured in the main gallery of the library. Donnah will be showing about 15 paintings. She has also been very busy preparing for the Trenton show in aid of the Canadian Arthritic Society and has done a number of pen and ink sketches of Trenton points of interest. But you can still have your very own Cameron showing. All you have to do is tl visit very own Cameron showing. All you have to do is to visit time during the week or weekend. As long as the car is there, so is the artist.

A Good Cause

Once more, Murray Aikinson of Murray's Food Market on Front St. has donated a generous amount of money to a pet worthy causes. In this case, the cause — and it certainly is worthy — is that of the National Ballet of Canada. The local chapter of the organization is sponsoring a show at Tobes' County Gardens May 9. And Murray is urging you to go and support the ballet and the Tobes' Gardens in our area. We are getting a contribution to our environment from the National Ballet and we can use the money in the world could not repay. But if you want this work to continue, take Murray's advice and lend a hand with your presence at the dance. Tickets are available at Kelly's Drug Store and at Pape's Steak House.

A Gibbs and Son Sale

I deliberately called the above item what I did, because there's a difference between Gibbs and Son Sales and any old sale on vacuum cleaners. Gibbs and Son don't just sell vacuum cleaners, they sell vacuum cleaning. And so they don't want to deal in faulty products. Now, when it comes to established names in vacuum cleaners, Hoover is right up there. So Gibbs and Son, 37 Albion St., are selling upright Hoover vacuum cleaners, "brand sparkling new", as Michael Gibbs says, for only $94.50. These are two-speed deluxe models which are convertible and have a light as well. If it's a new vacuum you want from a reputable dealer, then Hoover is the name and Gibbs and Son is the place.

New At The West Wind

Jean Smith tells me she has 100 per cent cotton safari suits new in at West Wind Boutique at The West Wind Motel on Hwy. 7 at Actinolite. You can get a set of jacket and shirt, or jacket and slacks. Jean also has a new line of evening wear of which she is very proud. And you'll be proud to be seen in any of them too. This is also the season of the rainyest and if it's fashion and wearability in rainwear that you wish, then Burberry coats from England are for you. Jean says the colors, as well as the fabric and style are pretty exciting too. Remember, that you can visit Jean at the West Wind every day from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Sundays. It will be a worthwhile visit. I can assure you.

Showers and Energy

I heard a great commercial this week from the Ontario Hydro about the merit of taking showers as opposed to baths, because showers require less water, and hence you save energy for heating water. If you've adopted that tenant at your house, you could improve on it a bit by having an Aqualine Water Refiner too. Then, those showers would always be rain-water soft, as well as economical and energy-saving. With an Aqualine Water Refiner from Moira-Schusler, you can also save more money, because you don't have to buy water-softening agents or conditioners, or even hair conditioners. Oil stamp and Aqualine water will take care of everything. Take the showers. And if they have Aqualine Water in them, no one will object, you can be sure.

What A Choice!

The great thing about deciding that you're going to visit The Four Seasons for a lunch, is that you have three different choices of what kind of a lunch you'll have and where you'll have it. There is the casual heartiness of a hot beef or pastrami sandwich, eaten in the comfort of the Terrace Lounge; there is the wide range of individual choice available at the hot and cold buffet of the Bay Buffet and then there is the elegance of the Terrace Dining Room. Now, that's a pretty good choice, wouldn't you agree? But there is an overwhelming principle to all: the standards of the Four Seasons itself. Could you expect anything less?

Complete And Comprehensive

There are two words we often hear or read in connection with any product or company providing a service. These are also words that find application when used to describe the service of Trenton Optical, 54 Bridge St. E. Trenton Optical are opticians: that means they dispense glasses. But Trenton Optical can also arrange an appointment for you with an eye specialist who will test your eyes competently. Then, you visit Trenton Optical with your prescription and investigate the wide range of glasses frames, choose one and you're off to the races — and you're wearing the right glasses for the race. You don't need an appointment for such comprehensive and complete service either.

More People Needed

ServiceMaster is really serious about expanding its housekeeping services. And to do this, ServiceMaster needs reliable and industrious people who are interested in receiving ample remuneration for the effort expended. If you are such a person, don't hesitate to call Mr. Teed at the Service-Master number of 967-1672. On the other hand if you are a busy person who requires the services of such a person to help you maintain an efficient household, then you should note that ServiceMaster number also and dial it too. I really don't see how anyone can lose, in this operation.

It Shows Now

Without the complimentry blessings of the winter white of the snow, that home of yours which is in need of painting certainly shows it, doesn't it? And the fact that you need to paint it is more aggravating when you know you will have to do it again and again. Well, you needn't do it again and again. All you need do is to call Highland Construction at 962-1184. They will install that wonder substance known as vinyl siding and you won't have to worry about the exterior of your home for the next thirty years or so. Vinyl is weather-resistant, wear-resistant, and child-resistant. Why not get that job done once and for all? And if you want to look at what you're getting, just visit Highland Construction's Home Improvement Centre at 257 North Front St.

Holiday Plans

If you don't own a car, or if the car you do own is not trustworthy for holiday travel, then here's a name that can help you get that motoring holiday safely and efficiently . . . Or maybe your holiday is going to include a quiet time at your cottage, but in order to make that time comfortable, you need a truck to get your 'comforts of cottage' where they will do the most good. Holiday can help you there too. One phone call or visit to Holiday Car and Truck Rentals may mean the difference between a vacation that works and one that doesn't. And who wants to wait until next year? Call Holiday at 962-9114.

Dogs Now Up for Adoption

The 66 crossbred terriers-beagles delivered to the Ontario Humane Society's Quinte Animal Shelter April 1, after having been seized from the Cambridge, Ont., residence of Mrs. Marion Trusler, are now available for adoption.

Word was received at the Belleville shelter April 21 from Toronto-based society Chief Inspector Don Hepworth that the dogs could be sold for expenses incurred in their seizure, transport and subsequent care. They have been said, Selling price is $10-$15.

"Since the owner didn't want to claim them, or wasn't able to provide adequate care and wasn't prepared to pay our expenses, the dogs are now the property of the Ontario Humane Society," Quinte shelter manager Harry Brown said.

Mrs. Trussler made a brief visit to the shelter April 21, made no comment and departed, Mr. Brown said.

"All of the 66 dogs we received are alive and well," Mr. Brown said. "We put them in special pens and gave them a special diet and they're in good shape now."

Mr. Brown stressed the Quinte shelter's role in this situation was strictly to house and feed the dogs. "We have the facilities and we look after them to the best of our ability — that's all," he said.

Rustlers Sought

COLBORNE — Modern-day cattle rustlers made off with at one-and-a-half-year-old Holstein steer valued at $5,000 late Wednesday from a field near this village located about 20 miles east of Trenton.

Ontario Provincial Police at Brighton, who did not release the information until today, said the theft of the cattle, owned by Peter Cheesta of RR4, Colborne, occurred at about 10 p.m. during a power blackout in the area.

Board Launches Study On Education Views

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

The Hastings County Board of Education is launching an 18-month study on how county employers view education and what, if any, the contributions private business can make to education.

"The project is designed to research and tabulate resources in the community and then make this information available to educators," explained Dave Smith, co-ordinator of community education with the board.

The program, which is being funded by a ministry of education grant for community studies, is expected to be completed by the fall of 1976. The bulk of the interviews are being conducted by a begrimed assose assistant Mary Shipton.

"During the initial interviews I'm getting a good response from employers," said Mrs. Shipton, who hopes to meet managers from all segments of business in Hastings County. The study is expected to include manufacturers, business and services as well as skilled occupations.

"We also hope to compile a list of avocational resources such as people in the community who are adept in certain hobbies," said Mrs. Shipton. The basis of the information will be obtained through personal interviews.

Mrs. Shipton said the interviews are also designed to obtain the feelings of employers about the quality of education and what they think education should be doing for the graduates.

"An essential part of this exercise will be to determine the kinds of input employers want from the local education programs," said Mr. Smith, who has been with the board since 1970. Employers will also be asked if they want to participate in a co-operative program with the schools. Many secondary schools now offer field work experience for students.

Mr. Smith said program developed through the belief that there is a great amount of unknown resources in the community which schools could be utilizing. "We just need a way of organizing them in a way useful to the schools," he added.

Last year the ministry of education offered about $200,000 for research grants in the area of community resources. The Hastings Board of Education was granted $8,000 this year with an option to apply for further grants next year.

"Because of the long period of time involved in this study we hope to have interim reports as the study progresses," said Mrs. Shipton. It is hoped the final report from the study can be used in various areas of education.

Flight Filled

All 200 seats on the special charter flight of Belleviliant to Lahr, West Germany, have now been booked.

The two-week trip leaves CFB Trenton by Air Canada jet June 1.

Titled the CJBQ Belleville-Lahr Friendship flight it was designed to step up contact between residents of both communities. Lahr headquarters of Canada's NATO contingent is Belleville's twin city.

But communication to this time has been confined to official and exchanges between local government and professionals and student programs.

The city's three travel agencies formed a co-operative booking agency for the flight.

Completion of booking was announced Tuesday by Frank Murray, travel agency manager, who initiated the project.

Rising Costs Force Hike In PUC Hydro, Water Rates

By JIM SMELLE
Staff Reporter

Belleville residential water rates will be increased by 10 per cent effective July 1. Hydro rates for residential use are expected to increase 18.7 per cent pending approval by Ontario Hydro.

This was brought up during a Belleville Utilities Commission meeting held Thursday to discuss their budget and rates.

Neil Britton, manager of the city's utilities commission, said the basic rate on a minimum bill would be increased from 3.75 to $4 a month.

For example, a customer consuming 750 kilowatt hours of energy a two-month hydro bill will be increased from $23.44 to $28.50.

For general service, taking in industrial and commercial power use, the average increase is 15.5 per cent.

Mr. Britton said such factors as an increase in the cost of power, an overall general inflation and wage negotiations contributed to an increase in tutilities.

Area History Specialty of Local Publisher

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Nick Mika is preparing another publication.

That's not exactly anything new.

He already counts 126 different titles under his company publishing banner.

But what is significant is the apparent acceptance of the role his small Belleville-based enterprise has been winning Canada-wide.

One gauge: Currently Mika Publishing has not one, but four books, ready for the presses.

It's indicative, believes Mr. Mika, of the success of his initial inspiration — a unique publishing formula that gives a vocational touch to what also now is a flourishing business enterprise.

He has deliberately cast himself in the role of a small independent publisher to market books big, corporative operations wouldn't consider sound business.

Mr. Mika aims for the local market with books on local events written by local people. In the main, they are heavy on history.

He also republishes rare Canadian books, now long out o. print, therefore costly to buy in the original.

His distribution — from a small premises on Stanley and Station streets — is increasingly national. The localities he selects for his histories and reprints are as far-ranging as the availability of material.

The overall result is to put Canadiana back in print and make it available to those interested.

And demand has been consistent, even if slighty by big business standards.

But the Mika operation is geared to small-volume publication, meeting demand as it comes — and also what Mr. Mika believes is a need in Canada.

For instance: A woman submitted a history of Wooler, the hamlet northwest of Trenton. Mika Publishing had 700 initial copies printed. It sold out in a few weeks and a second issue had to be ordered.

Then there are the reprints of the old county atlases — crammed with local information and popular if costly, feature of 19th century homesteads.

The Hastings County atlas reprint cost a little over at 1,000 copies. Now it's in its fourth issue, says Mr. Mika.

These may not be dramatic business totals, but it meets his objectives.

Such an approach sometimes has aroused doubts among fellow publishers, says Mr. Mika. But not now.

"Many people are hungry to know what their ancestors did, all about the localities they came from and their family history."

It also gives authors an outlet denied them by major publishing houses who must market on a national scale.

"By publishing a small amount of books on small localities you can make a living. We're fairly prosperous," he says.

His publishing endeavors date to his native Germany where he was a journalist. In 1948, as an immigrant he arrived in Belleville, and worked as ch orderly in the Hastings County Home for the Aged. Later came a job in a bagel factory.

Then in 1960 Mika Pucblishing was launched — as an industrial silk-screening operation in the basement of the Mika home, with his wife Helma as partner.

The operation still works that way, although there's no more silkscreening and the books are contracted to local printers.

For many of his publications Mr. Mika does the research in newspaper files, government archives, university libraries.

Helma does the writing.

Mr. Mika admits his is not the only operation engaged in recollecting Canada in print but we're concentrating on local history. And we're encouraged people to ask about their local backgrounds."

Bookish Business

Nick Mika has hit a successful formula for encouraging — and preserving — Canadianism in publishing. His Belleville-based business concentrates mainly on local histories by local people.

Manpower Advantage No Good to Marlies

TORONTO (CP) — A short-handed goal by Dale McCourt tied with five seconds remaining Thursday gave Hamilton Fincups a 3-2 win over Toronto Marlboros in the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A finals.

It was the first win for the Fincups in the eight-point final that now stands at 4-2.

After a scoreless first period, the Fincups took a 2-0 lead on a pair of goals by Rick Selling in the second period.

The Marlboros tied the game in the third on goals by Mike Kaszycki and Trevor Johnston before McCourt's winner.

Toronto's powerplay was not only ineffective but it allowed Hamilton to score twice short-handed, including the game as the Fincups drew nine of 11 penalties assessed.

Mike Clarke played an outstanding game in Hamilton nets as the Marlboros outshot the Fincups 35-29. Gary Carr minded Toronto nets before a crowd of 2,221.

The clubs meet again Friday in Hamilton.

Guelph Team Bounces Right Back in Front

OTTAWA (CP) — Gord Duncan scored three goals Thursday night as Guelph Biltmores regained their one-game lead over Smiths Falls Bears in a 7-2 Centennial Cup eastern junior hockey final.

The powerful Biltmores stormed ahead 2-0 in the first period and led 4-0 before Dave Dixie finally beat goalie Jim Brown in the second.

The period ended with the Biltmores up 5-1 and Duncan scored his second goal, to start the third period, before Randy Pearce beat Brown a second time.

The other Biltmore scorers were Gerry Gregory, with two goals, Jim Joy and Mitch Gilroy.

The fourth game of the series will be played tonight at the Sportsplex in nearby Kanata where a standing-room-only crowd of about 2,200 watched Thursday's game.

Brown was tested 41 times in the Guelph nets while Fraser Greenwood handled 42 shots in the Smiths Falls goal.

There were only 14 minor penalties called in the relatively quiet game, 10 of them in Guelph.

Winners of the best-of-seven series goes west for the national junior championship.

Another 5-win Day For Canada's Hawley

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Canadian jockey Sandy Hawley scored five victories in nine races Thursday at Hollywood Park, the second time he's managed the feat in the two weeks since the track started its spring-summer thoroughbred meeting.

The 26-year-old rider from Mississauga, Ont., started off in the second for a $31,40 daily double, bringing in $17.80 longshot Silky Decaliba in the first race and 56 winner Cee's Fair in the second for a $31.40 daily double payoff.

Then Hawley scored two more wins in a row, aboard favorites this time, when he captured the sixth on $3.40 winner Will Love and the seventh with New Scamp for $2.60.

He finished the afternoon with an $18.40 longshot victory in the ninth when Prest Lairch eased out Expressly Yours at the finish.

The triumphs gave him 24 victories in 11 racing days, putting him nine wins in front of Bill Shoemaker in the track standings.

Could Match 1942 Feat

Islanders Square Series 3-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

New York Islanders have surprised a lot of people by coming back from a 3-0 games deficit to tie their Stanley Cup quarter-final series against Pittsburgh Penguins.

The Penguins had been the favorite in the National Hockey League best-of-seven series after winning the first three games but they began to lose that edge after two Islander victories.

Pittsburgh lost the edge completely Thursday night when the Islanders scored a 4-1 victory to tie the series 3-3.

Despite this outcome, there was nothing in either coach's post-game comments to indicate that either club might have an advantage going into the final game.

Coach Al Arbour said his Islanders, despite the win, showed carelessness in a scoreless first period when they had 16 shots and there were also lapses in the second period "but otherwise they played well enough to win."

And Pittsburgh coach Marc Boileau said:

"I don't think we took advantage of the opportunities we had tonight. We had some good opportunities in the first and second periods and we just didn't take advantage of them."

The winner of Saturday night's deciding game in Pittsburgh will advance to the semi-final against the defending Stanley Cup champion Philadelphia Flyers. That series opens Tuesday in Philadelphia.

The other semi-final starts Sunday in Buffalo where Montreal Canadiens go against the Sabres. Sunday's game will be televised on the CBC national network starting at 3:30 p.m. EDT.

Walton Saints' Sparkplug

QUEBEC (CP) — If Quebec Nordiques hope to stop Minnesota Fighting Saints they will have to neutralize Mike Walton.

The Saints winger scored two goals, including the game winner Thursday night, to give the Saints a 5-3 victory and a 1-1 tie in their World Hockey Association best-of-seven series against the Nordiques.

"Walton struck like a cobra tonight, the way only he can," Minnesota coach Harry Neale said.

Goaltender John Garrett added: "As Walton goes, so do the Saints."

Trailing 2-0 after the first period, the Saints ambushed Quebec with four goals in the second period.

George Morrison on a powerplay effort, Walton, Bob Smith and Walton again beat Nordiques goaltender Richard Brodeur who faced 20 shots in the period.

Mike Antonovich added an insurance goal early in the third period to Minnesota's lead. Marc Tardif with two and Allan Globensky scored for the Nordiques.

With his two goals and an assist on Morrison's effort, Walton lifted his total to 18 goals and 16 assists against Quebec during regular-season and playoff games.

Coach Neale was beaming with confidence after his team's win.

"We knew we had to play tougher tonight. That's the way you have to play them," Neale said.

"But if they think we've got tough tonight, wait until they see us in Minnesota. Always."

Both teams left immediately after the game for St. Paul, Minn., where the series resumes Saturday and Sunday night.

Neale praised Brodeur, who kicked aside 42 of 47 shots. Garrett faced only 26 shots in the Minnesota net.

"Brodeur was just great," Neale said. "If it wasn't for him, we would have buried them early."

Elsewhere in the WHA, San Diego Mariners and Houston Aeros start their best-of-seven semi-final series in San Diego tonight.

Houston, which had the better season record, would normally have the first two games on its home ice but could not get the necessary dates at its own arena. Thus, the first two games are in San Diego, the next three in Houston, the sixth game, if necessary, in San Diego and the seventh in Houston.

Foreman Looking Ahead to Ali

TORONTO (CP) — George Foreman talked Thursday about the five years he would fight Saturday, and mused about his future. But the past and Muhammad Ali was still on his mind.

"Guys are always saying they'd like to get into the ring with George Foreman, Joe Frazier or Muhammad Ali," said Foreman, following a workout.

"Well, Saturday they're going to get the chance.

"But the former heavyweight champion said he was not taking his five opponents, each scheduled to fight twenty rounds with him, lightly.

"These are dreamers and you just can't stand around against dreamers," said Foreman, referring to Ali, Frazier, Jimmy Ellis, Jimmy Johnson, Jerry Judge, Boone Kirkman and Charlie Polite. "They'll be trying to impress somebody."

Foreman's scheduled 15 rounds against the five, billed as a boxing demonstration, are to be televised live on ABC's Wide World of Sports, and begins at 3:30 p.m., EST.

He will be Foreman's first public showing since he lost the title on an eighth-round knockout to Ali last Oct. 30 in Zaire.

Foreman said:

"All is a low-down, good-for-nothing loudmouth, and the next time I fight him I'm going to knock him out. I'm going to knock him out with a punch he'll never forget. I'm gonna wind up and knock him out."

Evert in a Breeze

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (CP) — Top-seeded Chris Evert of the United States breezed past Francoise Durr of France 6-3, 6-0 Thursday to advance to the semi-finals of $150,000 women's tennis tournament.

Joining Mrs Evert in today's semi-finals were Evert Bowrey of Australia, Martina Navratilova of Czechoslovakia and Olga Morozova of the Soviet Union.

Miss Goolagong, the fifth seed, had to come from behind to defeat fourth-seeded Virginia Wade of Britain 4-6, 6-0, 6-2. She will meet Miss Evert Bowrey, who has beaten twice on clay, the surface being used here, in the semi-finals.

Miss Navratilova, the 18-year-old leftfanded sensation of the women's tennis circuit this year and seeded second in this tournament, overpowered Julie Heldman of Houston and London 6-2, 6-2. Her opponent will be the sixth seed, Miss Morozova who eliminated Marcie Lois of San Francisco 6-4, 6-1.

Olympics Sign Key Players

With the creation of the Quinte Hornets, a team com- prised of Greeks from the Bay of Quinte area to play in the Bay of Quinte Soccer Associa- tion and the Premier Soccer League, and Balo-Canadians, a Bay of Quinte Soccer Asso- ciation team comprised of lo- cal Italian players, the Belle- ville Olympics have found themselves a little than com- pared to last year.

Nevertheless, coach Manuel Montes has signed several key players from last season's team.

Goalkeeper Gary Donovan, last year's playing-coach Bob Watson, leading scorer Dusan Zdravko, Charlie Nesterovski, Kevin Kirby and Ernie Brown are all back to play for the Olympics. A newcomer to the team is Tony Conceivot, a member of the Kingston Italo- Canadians in 1974.

A few changes have been made in the executive direc- torship of the Olympics. For personal and health reasons, president John Watson and vice-president Dick Edwards have been forced to resign.

Bob Watson has been elect- ed the post of president for the remainder of the year.

Marathon Entry

Best Time Ever For Area Runner

When David Yaeger first moved to the Quinte area at age 11 in 1964, little did he know he would one day be running in the Boston Mara- thon. At that time he wasn't even involved with track and field, let alone long distance running.

After a couple of years at Prince Edward Collegiate, in Picton, Yaeger was lured into long distance running by the track coach of the secondary school, Peter Meeit.

David was 15 then. A year later, in 1969, his family mov- ed away from the Quinte area, but he took with him a green- ing interest in running — por- ticularly long distance run- ning.

Last July, his parents mov- ed back to the area and set- tled at RR 2 Ameliasburgh.

Meanwhile, Yaeger completed his third Boston Marathon. He finished 72th in the field of 2,400 with a time of 2:36:35. That ranked him sixth among Canadian runners competing in the 26-mile event.

"It was the best time I ever ran in a marathon," said Yaeger, "things have really come together for me in the last year or so."

Now 22, he runs during the school year as a member of the University of Guelph Track team.

Along with running well in marathons, he also did very well while competing in the Ontario Universities' 1,500 me- ters. In it, he has a time of 3:48.07 (equivalent to a 4:07 mile) and placed third in the province.

Dave's plans don't include any serious commitments to running, although he does take the sport seriously.

He runs a couple of hours a day, with the Gryphons (Guelph) and during the sum- mer he runs with the Toronto Olympic Club.

For now, he just hopes to get a job. He has just com- pleted four years of university and holds a Bachelor of Sci- ence degree in engineering.

"I'd like to go back and get my Masters," said Yaeger, "but I can use the experience and the money that a job will give me right now."

First for Wilbur

Johnson's Blast Bails Wood Out

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Deron Johnson lost one—and finally won one for Wilbur Wood.

Wood, the unlucky Chicago White Sox ace, appeared on the way to his fifth consecutive loss Thursday when Johnson pulled him out with a two-run homer in the ninth.

"I was guessing fastball, but it looked like a slider," Johnson said of his blast off reliever Tom Bruno that gave the White Sox a 4-3 win over Minnesota Twins in an American League baseball game.

The homer capped a four-run rally and provided Wood with his first win of the season after four losses. At the same time it denied Minnesota's Bert Blyleven his third triumph.

"That's what I like about our guys this year," grinned Chuck Tanner, the Chicago manager. "I'll bet everyone in the park, except our guys, thought they were dead going into the ninth."

Blyleven, one of the best pitchers in the American League, had what appeared to be a death-grip on the White Sox, entering the ninth with a 3-1 lead.

But then Carlos May hit a home run off the right-handed and Ken Henderson followed with a single. When Lee Richard knocked in Henderson with a single to cut the Minnesota lead to 3-2, Blyleven was finished.

In the other American League games, Oakland A's nipped Kansas City Royals 3-2 and Texas Rangers blanked California Angels 5-0.

The win was a relief to Wood, the White Sox' perennial 20-game winner, but he knew it would come sooner or later.

"I threw as well as I ever have," Wood said. "You can't worry about losing four straight games. All I can do is pitch to the best of my ability."

Bill North singled to start a two-out Oakland rally in the seventh and scored on Reggie Jackson's base hit to give the A's their win over Kansas City.

Roy Howell's three-run double in the sixth inning broke up a pitching duel between Texas' Jackie Brown and California's Nolan Ryan and helped the Rangers beat the Angels.

Von Joshua

Giant Delivers Against Old Foe

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two years ago, Ken Forsch broke Von Joshua's hand with a pitch.

Thursday night, Joshua broke Forsch's heart with a hit.

Joshua, whose career was once interrupted by a Forsch delivery, got a chance to pay him back partially with a game-winning hit Thursday night that led San Francisco Giants to a 6-5 win over Houston Astros.

"The game-winning hit was nice, but even bigger was the fact that I beat Ken Forsch," said Joshua after knocking in Derrell Thomas with a single.

"Forsch broke my hand two years ago. I was with the Dodgers then, and I got hurt at Los Angeles.

"It was in April and I was hitting .340 at the time and pitcooning and finally getting to show what I can do. Then I got hit by Forsch on the wrist. Things were never the same after that.

"I never did get a chance to play when I came back off the injured list and I finally asked to be traded."

In other National League baseball games Thursday, Los Angeles Dodgers beat San Diego Padres 11-4, Cincinnati Reds defeated Atlanta Braves 11-3 and Chicago Cubs beat Philadelphia Phillies 4-1.

The Giants started their winning rally off Forsch with Steve Ontiveros' double. Thomas ran for Ontiveros and two outs later, raced home with the go-ahead run on Joshua's base hit. Atlanta tied the game 5-5 in the eighth inning when Cliff Johnson walked with the bases loaded on four pitches from reliever Gary Lavelle.

In the seventh, Joshua drew a bases-loaded walk off Wayne Granger to provide the Giants with a temporary one-run lead. Preceding the walk were a single by Chris Speier, a sacrifice bunt by Ontiveros which Granger fumbled for an error and a hit batsman.

Ken McMullen climaxed a six-run comeback in the sixth inning with a grand-slam homer as Los Angeles defeated San Diego, Losing 5-4, the Dodgers tied the game off Dave Freisleben on a run-scoring single by Dave Lopes. Reliever Jimmy Priesla later gave up a bases-loaded walk to Ron Cey—the Dodgers' second run of the inning before McMullen, batting for Willie Crawford, cracked a bases-loaded homer off Dave Tomlin.

Tony Perez doubled and scored the go-ahead run in the sixth inning and then hit a two-run single in a four-run seventh as Cincinnati routed Atlanta. Perez and Johnny Bench each knocked in three runs for the winners.

Bill Madlock hit two of Chicago's five doubles and drove across two runs to back Steve Stone's eight-hitter, leading the Cubs over the Phillies.

Barry Attacked

Some Reward!

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rick Barry had just scored 31 points, led Golden State Warriors to a 105-95 victory over Seattle in the deciding game of their semi-final series, and was walking off the court when he was attacked by a fan.

"I was leaving the floor and someone was kicking me and hitting me from behind," said Barry. "I turned around and it was a woman. I couldn't believe it. I mean, I really couldn't believe it."

Barry was also doused with beer after the National Basketball Association game.

Both Barry and Boston's Jo Jo White had to break out of playoff doldrums to send their teams on to the conference finals.

Barry's 31 points lifted the Warriors to a 4-2 triumph in their Western Conference semi-final set. Golden State now faces Chicago for the West title.

While scored 29 points, 17 in a crucial third-period outburst that led Boston past Houston Rockets, 128-115. The Celtics claimed that Eastern Conference best-of-seven semi-final series.

The Celtics will face the winner of the Buffalo-Washington series. The Braves and Bullets, tied 2-2, continues tonight at Landover, Md.

In the American Basketball Association, Thursday's only game saw Indiana Pacers Denver 118-111 to take a 2-1 lead in that best-of-seven Western Division final.

CHAMP LEADS

CANBERRA (Reuter) — Defending champion Ray Reardon of Wales and Eddie Charlton of Australia took commanding leads in their semi-final matches in the world professional snooker championship Thursday. In Canberra, Reardon held a 9-3 lead over Alex Higgins of Ireland. Charlton finished Thursday's competition with a 10-2 margin over another Irishman, Dennis Taylor.

Connors Looking To Turn Tables

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The value of Saturday's challenge tennis match between Jimmy Connors of the United States and John Newcombe of Australia has gone past the $1-million mark, the promoter said Thursday.

Bill Riordan, who manages Connors and also promotes the match at Caesars Palace, said: "The winner could get $500,000 and the loser close to $300,000. Foreign television revenues have pushed this match past $1 million."

Originally, Caesars Palace put $250,000 on a winner-take-all basis and CBS television added an estimated $300,000.

Connors, the 22-year-old left-hander, has not beaten Newcombe in three previous meetings.

"He Nastase beat me five straight times before I beat him. Connors told a news conference. "If its my time to win, its my time to win, but I don't go through a Ouiji board."

The match is considered virtually even.

Connors took a verbal swipe at his Aussie foe when asked what special problems the 36 year-old presents.

"Questioning calls," Connors said. "It seems every time we play, he questions line calls and there are discussions.

"Maybe that won't happen here because we have Cue Lanna as umpire and he's sat in the chair in Forest Hills and has been around the world.

"I'm just going to play the game. Whatever Newcombe does is fine and whatever I do, I hope he says is fine too."

Connors ranks No. 1 in the world and Newcombe No. 2, but the latter continued his mastery over the young opponent last Jan. 1 in the Australian Open.

Ryan's Fancy Well Received

HALIFAX (CP) — "You're a dear woman, you know that? Take your husband and kids and come on backstage after the show tonight."

Dennis Ryan chuckled, cradling the telephone receiver on his shoulder, tugged at his full beard and chatted easily about people and places they could have known in his native Tipperary.

After watching Ryan's Fancy perform in a lounge or a concert hall it seems natural to call the boys over for a brew or phone them at the hotel and tell them how much you enjoyed their music.

It happens all the time. Anywhere in Canada people from Ireland or, more often, displaced Maritimers will sit together during a concert and clap to the beat of a Newfoundland jig or sing along to a Cape Breton Lullaby.

They landed in Inuvik last year and found a Newfoundlander waiting on the tarmac. He had taken a day off work just to meet them and later gave up to their hotel room carrying a few bottles.

This morning it was a woman from Ireland, living in Halifax, who called Ryan to say hello.

Ryan, dressed in jeans and Dalhousie University T-shirt was having breakfast in his hotel room after a Friday night concert. In the next room Dermit O'Reilly and Fergus O'Byrne, the other members of the Irish, were sleeping off last night's ales.

Their performances still project the images of three lusty Irishmen out for a good time, but after four years at the club and fraternity house circuit and more recently at television they are more serious about their careers, their material is more diverse and the presentation increasingly polished.

Their aim is to keep it straight and simple, even on their weekly television show with Ryan's close friend Tommy Makem.

The show, which can be seen almost anywhere in Canada with the exception of Quebec, originates with CHCH in Hamilton, on the shores of the Irish-Canadian club there.

"There are no tricks at all," said Ryan. "It's just done with a live audience. We do one rehearsal and that's it.

"We couldn't do the Irish Rover roots because they're into heavy production. Film, the whole thing. We couldn't imitate them so we had to go back to the basic form. I think there's room for both."

The three spent a few years in Toronto playing with various groups and doing odd jobs and eventually got together with Sullivan's Gypsies.

Personalities clashed in the five-member group and Dennis, Dermit and Fergus decided to strike out for Newfoundland, attend university and play some clubs for grocery money and tuition.

Dennis recalled coming east in a rickety Volkswagen building with luggage and instruments and stopping at the Black Knight Lounge in Halifax.

That started a relationship with Halifax that ensures a full house anytime they're in town.

Dennis's plans to study medicine at Memorial University were dropped in favor of an arts degree in folklore for which he still has a semester to go. Also deferred were Dermit's plans to study anthropology and Fergus's ambition to take special education and work with slow learners.

"The group snowballed," said Ryan. "We couldn't get away from it."

Their strong Irish roots — they are all from the Republic, Dennis from Newport in Tipperary and Dermit and Fergus from Dublin—are the mainstay of their music but in recent years it has sometimes been a bad place to be.

"Sometimes you go on stage and you hear the news about people getting killed and you're half ashamed and embarrassed," said Ryan.

"The Irish people have always had a great sense of life and entertainment and you have a good time. Now people ask: 'How can you be doing that when you're killing each other?'"

Their music has changed as a result.

The rebel songs have given way to Maritime music, some original material written by Dermit and Irish-English Celtic music.

"We can't rip off as many rebel songs as we did. Some of them are really beautiful songs; they've got poetry and melody. Still, there's another side to Celtic music that we've all forgotten, the love songs and the sea songs."

Dogging It

Sampson, a St. Bernard, is one of those dogs who prefers riding over walking — particularly when it comes to riding on his master's motorcycle. Sampson's master Larry Edwards uses the motorcycle while running errands around a walking horse training stable in Sasser, Ga., and the 2½-year-old St. Bernard gets his kicks as a passenger. Variety Key to Tony Curtis

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With the arrival of his 20th birthday, Tony Curtis announces his ambition: to become a Renaissance Man.

Not a small aim for the former Bernard Schwartz, whose education was gained at the Bronx' Seward Park high school, in the U.S. Navy and the commissary at Universal studio.

But the chutzpah of Tony Curtis helped make him an international star. Who can say he won't become the da Vinci of Beverly Bel Air?

"I have been painting for some time, and I also create boxes and assemblages. I'm now into lithography and etching, and I work at UCLA with an art professor who allows me to use the university's equipment.

"I'm an expert swimmer as well as horse rider, and I've won prizes with my horses.

"I'm now writing a book, about a guy who goes into the navy, then comes to Hollywood as a stunt man. My agent is Irving Lazar."

Among Lazar's other clients: Truman Capote and Richard Nixon.

Curtis' nerve has to be admired. It has carried him through Hollywood stardom psychoanalysis, two marriages, fiscal disasters and career pitfalls.

After a series of mishaps, he figures his career has turned upward. He is proud of his work in the gangster movie Lepke, soon to be released by Warner Brothers.

Last month he appeared on NBC in a two-hour movie, McCoy, which is deemed likely for a mini-series in the fall.

Curtis' career was brilliantly managed by MCA chieftain Lew Wasserman, with the result that Curtis was granted percentages of such films as The Defiant Ones, Some Like It Hot, The Vikings and Taras Bulba.

"And I always got a percentage of the gross," the actor added.

"None of that business of waiting for the films to show a profit. There's too much funny bookkeeping going on."

When Wasserman and MCA quit the agency business to take over Universal Pictures, Curtis' career began to show signs of weakness.

"I was blithely tripping along the avenue, thinking that everything was just perfect. But then I started to examine the bills, and I began asking questions of my lawyers and business people.

"I went through the books and I found incredible discrepancies. That's when I got rid of everyone that was advising me and took over my own finances."

Curtis underwent an acrimonious divorce from German actress Christine Kaufmann and won custody of their two daughters. He also went through a heated battle with his first wife, Janet Leigh, and he now has custody of their daughter, Kelly, a college student.

With two young sons by his third wife, former model Leslie Allen, Curtis has large responsibilities.

"But I can handle them," assured the erstwhile Renaissance Man. "I'm in better shape than live ever been—mentally, physically and professionally."

Former Ballerina Trying Hand at Broadway Career

NEW YORK (AP) — Dancer, little ballet, dancer—too may become an actress bright.

"I think it's because the training provides such tough discipline," says Maria Karnilova, noting that some of Broadway's best roles this season have gone to former disciples of terpsichore.

Miss Karnilova, former prima ballerina of the Metropolitan Opera, is starring in Neil Simon's comedy God's Favorite.

Then there is Deborah Kerr, who began her career as a star-eyed novitiate of the Sadler's Wells (now Royal) Ballet, in high matronly fettle for Edward Albee's drama Seascape.

Also on hand are Oscar winner Ellen Burstyn, making her Broadway debut in Same Time, Next Year, and Ann Reinking, enacting Joan of Arc for the musical Good Time Charley, her first dramatic chance.

Going from points and taps to emating is a well established theatrical practice, especially for women. Among prior converts to stage or screen acting are Carol Burnett, Shirley MacLaine, June Havoc, Sono Osato, Vera Zorina, Carol Channing, Lena Horne, Ethel Merman and Gwen Verdon.

Going from, however, has there been quite such a Broadway display.

"There was once a kind of stigma about a dancer getting a different theatre job," said Miss Karnilova. "That isn't so any more." There's even advantage in role-seeking.

"Those very difficult exercises enhance ability to express emotions and to perform naturally.

"I never have to think of movement or expression when I'm creating a part. On the other hand, I notice a lot of actors have to spend a great deal of time on 'business'—finding a natural, realistic movement for their body to go with lines."

She said that long hours of drill develop patience and enhance ability to keep on in a role. "It never troubles me to repeat a part over and over."

Miss Karnilova played Tevye's wife for four years in Fiddler on the Roof. Other Broadway roles have been in Gypsy, Bravo, Giovanni and Zorba. She has her eye on eventually doing Shakespeare.

The 54-year-old actress promotes the blending of dance by organizing free backstage classes whenever possible. The cast of her current show isn't big enough for that, but she said Bette Midler, who subsequently parlayed a flair for wacky exhibitionism into a box-office success, was in the pool during the Fiddler era.

"I had to put her out of class four or five times when we began because she started to fool around and come in late. Eventually she found out I was serious and settled down."

Miss Karpilova permitted herself a smile. "Of course," she adds, "I didn't teach her everything she knows."

Ms. Amalya Kearse is a successful lawyer. She also is a very expert bridge player who has just completed a book called, "Bridge Conventions Complete." It attempts to do a complete job and it is spread mighty thin in doing this.

Furthermore, most of these conventions don't belong in a column. One that does is the Lightner slam double.

It was invented 40 years ago by Theodore Lightner, one of the all-time great players. The Lightner slam double says, "Partner, make some unusual lead against the slam our opponents have just bid."

Here is a hand from her book that illustrates this convention at work. East assumes from the bidding that his partner holds some trick somewhere and that if he can get a diamond lead the slam will be set.

His double asks for an unusual lead. West thinks a while. He reasons that if East wanted a heart lead he would have doubled five hearts to ask for it. It is unlikely the suit is clubs because West himself is short in that. Therefore East is likely to be void of diamonds.

West dutifully opens a diamond. East ruffs and West's queen of trumps is left to defeat the well-bid slam.

The bidding has been: 25

West	North	East	South

Pass	1 ♥	Pass	2 ♠

What do you do now?

A — Either pass or bid five diamonds. It all depends on your partnership understandings.

TODAY'S QUESTION
You decide to bid five diamonds. Your partner bids five spades. What do you do now?

Drink One Cause Of Pancreatitis

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 25 years old and have been hospitalized recently for an attack of pancreatitis. It was probably never really heard of this. Please explain some of the problems concerning this. Why does it seem to take your breath away?

It seems when you breathe it's like a knife jabbing at you. Once one gets this, does one have it the rest of one's life?—K. M.

I'll have to begin with a brief anatomy lesson.

The pancreas, the gland involved here, is located in the mid-upper abdomen, behind the stomach. It has a duct through which digestive enzymes (juices) pass into the small bowel. The ducts of the bile system (including the gall bladder) and those of the pancreas empty the small bowel very close together in fact.

Pancreatitis is, as the name implies, inflammation of the pancreas. There are many causes, but the chief ones are gall bladder disease and alcoholic excess. Alcohol stimulates stomach secretions, which in turn increase the flow of pancreatic juices. The chief symptoms of pancreatitis are those you probably know well—sudden abdominal pain, nausea, vomiting and diarrhea.

Your shortness of breath during your attack was probably related to a spasm of the diaphragm. Fluid can also develop in the lower lungs with pancreatitis, adding to the discomfort you describe.

As you are probably aware, the pancreas has another, most important role in body function, (e.g. Its so-called islet cells manufacture insulin, without which the body cannot metabolize sugar. So diabetes may follow any disorder of pancreatitis, especially if the inflammation-producing islet cells are damaged.

Treatment for pancreatitis consists of absolute bed rest, drainage of the stomach to remove its juices, the limiting of food and drink, and medication to relieve pain.

When an attack has subsided, a study of the gall bladder system is necessary to determine whether this organ was the source of the pancreas by fection. If so, removal is necessary to prevent future infection.

There is a condition known as chronic pancreatitis, a condition which is precipitated by alcohol or large meals. In such cases, abstention and more judiciously sized meals is the answer.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: All after the nails of my right and left big toes started to grow in sideways into the adjacent toes. I trim the nails, but they grow back again crooked. I am careful about my shoes. How can I get the nails to grow straight again?—Mrs. a. k.

This sounds like "ingrown nails." The nails of the great toes, especially, become thickened with age, and a deformity such as yours is a natural result. Not much you can do about it really, but try to keep it under control.

You say you are careful about your shoes, but most cases of toenail deformity I've seen are traceable to ill-fitting shoes. Many women, and more recently men (with the new men's styles), have preconceived ideas about what being careful in shoe buying means.

Narrow toes may be esthetically pleasing to the eye, but they can play the very devil with toenails.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Will you explain the significance in having sugar in the urine, but not in the blood?—A. I. R.

The specific condition you describe is called glycosuria. It means that simultaneously with high blood sugar, we are dealing with diabetes, a glucose problem. However, when blood sugar goes up in the urine without high levels in the blood, the condition is called renal glycosuria. This means the kidneys are allowing sugar (glucose) to pass too easily through their filtering networks.

It can be just a temporary condition, though, occurring sometimes with normally functioning kidneys and attributable to a temporary disorder. Follow-up urine and blood tests are required to determine whether the person is in the beginning stages of diabetes—another possibility.

Simple Tools Prove Best In Poor Lands

VANCOUVER (CP) — A University of British Columbia professor says developing countries need simple tools and not more sophisticated ones.

William Pownie, head of the department of food sciences, said farmers in Bangladesh with one-acre farms prefer hand-reared tractors and can't afford the fuel to run them.

But, he said a student audience, a small, hand-operated rice thresher can mean a big increase in productivity.

Mr. Pownie cited as an example of appropriate technology a rice threshing machine being distributed in Bangladesh by the Canadian Hunger Foundation.

Traditionally, cattle are used to trample grain. The thresher, a bushel-sized cage with rotating paddles inside to break the husks off the kernels, is much more efficient.

Mr. Pownie said another example of appropriate technology is a hand-powered water pump used to irrigate drought-stricken areas on the fringe of the Sahara in Nigeria.

The hot sun warms water; which in turn warms bubbles of gas, which expands and drives the pump, he said. The device was simple, cost nothing to run and could pump about 35,000 gallons of water a day.

Appropriate technology might be something another tribe or country had been using for hundreds of years, such as a primitive wooden cultivator.

CP News Roundup

Married People Happiest

CHICAGO (AP) — The institution of marriage is alive, well and thriving in the United States, says a University of Michigan psychologist.

"We find that married Americans are far happier and more satisfied with their lives than singles are, in spite of national ramblings and grumblings about the tired institution of matrimony," Dr. Angus Campbell writes in the May issue of Psychology Today.

He and two colleagues, Philip Converse and William Rodgers, recently surveyed 2,164 adults across the U.S.

The advent of children following marriage "is a mixed experience," Campbell says. "The patter of little feet aggravates as well as delights."

"Americans of both sexes seem to be a contented crowd, in a spite of their many problems," Campbell adds.

"Fewer than 10 per cent described their lives in sour terms — boring, miserable, lonely, empty, useless—and more than half think their lives are worthwhile, full, hopful, interesting, and other happy positives."

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is looking at refinitions on septic tanks to see whether changes should be made to encourage more housing, Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson said Thursday.

OTTAWA (CP) — Letters have been sent to 1,700 South Vietnamese families "indicating our willingness to accept them if they are able to get out of South Vietnam," Immigration Minister Robert Andras said Thursday.

However, he told Claude Wagner (PC—St. Hyacinthe in the Commons that the South Vietnam government will not grant exit visas to persons between 17 and 43 years old.

Tests Sought

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis, Ontario NDP leader, asked Health Minister Frank Miller Thursday if the ministry would be willing to test "every single chemical substance" that will be used at the Petrosar Ltd. project near Sarnia, Ont.

Mr. Lewis told the legislature that a chemical to be used in production "frightens me" because it has been proven to cause cancer.

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) The trial of a high school teacher charged with contributing to juvenile delinquency was adjourned Thursday until May 29 after the defence lawyer introduced a motion to allow news coverage. Richard Proulx, on trial in family—court, was charged Magdi M. Provincial Judge Larry Dekoning will rule May 15—on the motion.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE with Major Hoople

He Suspects Con Game Finds Boss Is Operator

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — The secretary-manager of the District Chamber of Commerce here has turned out to be the only victim of a suspected confidence game.

Mr. DeVuono issued a caution Wednesday about an unauthorized survey in which telephone callers claiming to represent the chamber were asking householders to disclose their summer holiday intentions.

Mr. DeVuono, fearing that someone had found a novel method of learning where and when a home would be vacant, cautioned the public that the chamber was not making a survey and that they should not reply to the questions.

But Wednesday he reportedly retracted his warning.

The telephone calls were part of a small private project that was to lead to a full-scale survey on the travelling habits of North Bay residents," he said.

It was being undertaken by Mr. DeVuono's employers, the directors of the North Bay and District Chamber of Commerce.

Tourist Revenue Up

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's 1974 tourist revenue passed the $2 billion level for the first time, Claude Bennett, minister of industry and tourism, announced Thursday.

He told the legislature that money spent by tourists increased by almost 19 per cent over 1973.

Taxes Transferred

WINNIPEG (CP) — An innovative revenue sharing scheme to ease the burden on municipal taxpayers was unveiled Thursday by Manitoba's NDP government in a record $1 billion budget.

The plan involves the direct transfer of a portion of provincial income tax revenues to local governments along with increased property tax credits for families and relief for the resources industry.

PCs Stall Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Convinced that Energy Minister Donald Macdonald is "pretty bloody obstinate," Progressive Conservative Harvie Andre said Thursday night his party is prepared to stall the contentious petroleum administration bill.

The bill, introduced Oct. 25 and now under tortuous clause-by-clause scrutiny in the Commons, basically would give Ottawa the power to set crude oil and natural gas prices if an agreement could not be reached with the producing provinces.

Hit Snag

TORONTO (CP) — The public accounts committee of the legislature has run into snags in an effort to look into firms delinquent in payments of gasoline and motor vehicle fuel taxes.

Pat Reid, committee chairman, said Thursday that the secrecy provisions of tax returns might prevent the provincial auditor from making public the information requested by the committee earlier this week.

The disclosure that Quinn Enterprises, a Welland, Ont., firm, owed $200,000 in back taxes prompted the committee's request.

Bill Assailed

OTTAWA (CP) — If a bill designed to protect the environment from contaminants is passed in its present form it will represent a "burning injustice to industry," says the executive director of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association (CMA).

"If that's the way Parliament wants to write the law, then I and all chemical producers should go to bed with it and quit producing," K. H. Rapsey said Thursday.

RCMP Head Clears MPs in SIU Study

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP has cleared nine Liberal members of Parliament of allegations of bribery and corruption in connection with campaign funds received last year from the Seafarers' International Union (SIU).

The 37-page RCMP report was boiled into a nine-page document tabled Thursday night by Solicitor-General Warren Allmand in a surprise move at the Commons justice and legal affairs committee.

"This is a very narrow report," said Pat Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley), whose questions focused on the scope of the investigation.

He asked RCMP Commissioner Maurice Nadon how far proper behavior, "Improper relationships" between Liberal members and the SIU had gone.

Had there been close social relationships?

Commissioner Nadon said there was no evidence of improper behavior. "Improper conduct" was defined as a gift for favors received.

The investigation was started last Nov. 25 at the request of Mr. Allmand after Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democrat member of the Ontario legislature, alleged that federal politicians accepted SIU bribes.

The bribes were said to have been made to get government to ignore requests for an investigation of acts of violence within the SIU.

Mr. Allmand, who took one of the campaign contributions, said he believed he and others received them because they supported a report on shipping which the SIU favors. The report recommended changes in the coastal trade which would have been favorable to Canadian members of the union.

The RCMP report lists 18 donations for the 1974 campaign totalling $4,911.13, about $100 above the amount declared by politicians. Nine of the 18 donations went to Liberal MPs, five to Conservatives, and four to New Democrats—most of them from port ridings.

Perrin Beatty (PC—Dufferin-Grey - Wellington (Waterloo) was questioned Mr. Allmand's involvement in taking a donation from the SIU, investigated in the 1968 for violence that led to the deportation of union leader Hal Banks.

Mr. Allmand said he had asked the same questions but in the heat of a campaign, it sometimes was hard to know where funds came from.

None of the contributions accepted exceeded $200.

PM Refuses To List Gifts

OTTAWA (CP) — Citing protocol and "ordinary good manners," Prime Minister Trudeau has refused to list publicly the gifts exchanged during his European trip last month.

The refusal was contained in a written reply, signed by Mr. Trudeau and tabled Thursday in the Commons. It was in answer to Tom Cossitt (PC—Leeds) who had asked the source, value and description of gifts exchanged during the 16-day tour of five capitals.

Two Firms Locating Here

New Industries Surprise to City

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Two new industries will be locating in Belleville within the year, it was learned Friday.

The firms each received major funding from the Eastern Ontario Development Corporation for capital costs of locating in Belleville.

Tru Glass Ltd., the larger of the two companies, received $705,000 from the development corporation and will be situated on approximately six acres of land in the city's north west industrial park. The firm will employ from 35 to 50 local workers in the manufacture of glass products for the transportation industry.

The second loan totalling $487,000, was made to Robin Hood Multifoods ltd.

The plant will produce fro sen egg products and will employ about 15 people.

Two Trenton companies also received major funding.

Morton Parker Ltd., manufacturer of silver plated hollow ware will receive approximately $300,000 for equipment purchase and plant expansion and renovation.

Trenton Machine Tool will receive $45,000 for equipment purchase. The firm produces tool, jig and die equipment.

The announcements of these loans took city industrial commissioner Fred Bemis by surprise Friday.

He told The Intelligencer neither the commission nor city council was aware of the Robin Hood Multifoods Belleville project

"We only just ordered the land survey last week," said Mr. Bemis. "We haven't even completed the terms of the land sale," to be later approved by council, he said.

Mr. Bemis said the firm wi ll locate in the city's north east industrial park.

Leftists Slaughter 11 In Mexico City Holdup

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A dozen leftist guerrillas led by a "dark and pretty" woman machine-gunned at least 11 persons to death in a bank holdup that got them $12,000, police and witnesses said.

Eight policemen were shot to death Friday during a wild chase by 30 police cars and two helicopters across the city. Two suspects were captured, one of them wounded.

Police said the others killed included two passersby and a bank teller. Two others were wounded.

Police Chief Daniel Gutierrez Santos told reporters the two captives said they were members of the Red Brigade of the 23rd of September Communist League, a guerrilla band advocating violent revolution.

The young bandits—eight men and four women—attacked the Banco de Comercio branch shortly after it opened for business.

Witnesses said some of the robbers fired machine-guns and pistols as they ran inside, while others remained outside firing at police cars.

The bandits demanded money from a teller and then shot him in the stomach, fatally wounding him.

"A woman appeared to be the chief," said Rodolfo Martinez, a bank officer. "She was dark and pretty with a very strong voice."

Other witnesses said she was the one who emptied the cash drawers.

Outside the bank a witness said some of the bandits "stuck their guns in the windows of a patrol car and fired a lot of shots at the policemen inside."

Another burst of fire killed an architect getting into his car.

Police said the bandits used three getaway cars, including a commandeered taxi, and blazed away with their machine-guns, hitting policemen and pedestrians.

One policeman was killed and another wounded five miles from the bank. The machine-gun fire hit a helicopter but it landed safely.

Two bandits abandoned a getaway car and stormed into a house, shooting the owner in the face. He was in critical condition.

Police found an abandoned getaway car with two time bombs, a hand grenade and revolutionary pamphlets calling for anti-government demonstrations May 1.

The 23rd of September Communist League, named for a shootout between guerrillas and soldiers a few years ago, has claimed responsibility for a few bank robberies Dec. 19 in which six policemen died.

Getting the Good News

High school students got good news unexpectedly at a seminar with Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, Friday when they wondered aloud about Opportunities For Youth grants — for which they had applied. After the meeting, Mr. Ellis phoned Ottawa and discovered projects had just been approved for (from left) Nancy Bruneau, 17, Barb MacQuarrie, 17, both of Belleville Collegiate, and Nancy Foster, 17, Centennial Secondary School. Canadian Aid Thwarted

Chicken-livered Diplomacy Blamed

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition critics of weak-kneed diplomacy and calls for renewed action to help South Vietnamese refugees bombarded a regretful, but apparently resigned, government Friday.

Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp called the plight of stranded refugees "extremely difficult and tragic." Immigration Minister Robert Andras said Canada has done all it can to get people out of Saigon.

Mr. Andras told reporters that if the situation changes, perhaps further attempts can be made to get some refugees approved for immigration to Canada out of South Vietnam.

But neither he nor Mr. Sharp, acting prime minister, held out much hope as Conservative MPs blasted the government for closing its Saigon embassy.

James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) said outside the House the move reflects "the chicken-livered diplomacy" conducted when Mr. Sharp was external affairs minister and continued by his successor, Allan MacEachen, now on a trip to Africa.

Mr. Andras said in the Commons that South Vietnam has refused exit visas that prospective immigrants need to get past roadblocks on routes to Saigon airport.

"We put pressure on for the last four or five weeks, but we were unable to get exit visas for adults between 17 and 45," he told reporters. Asked why staff did not remain to process refugees, he said that "the South Vietnamese government insisted quite forcibly that we cease and desist."

Heath Macquarrie (PC—Hillsborough) said Canadian concern "should transcend the administrative red tape of a collapsing regime."

He said in the House that many Vietnamese who told Wednesday to return the next day to have their visas processed, returned Thursday only to find the embassy closed.

"I understand that's not correct," Mr. Andras said later.

"I do not believe the Canadian government has been callous in any way," Mr. Sharp said to a chorus of Conservative jeers.

About 14,000 Vietnamese are eligible, through established family ties or the nomination of Canadians, to come to this country. But most of those could not be reached in Vietnam by Canadian officials.

Mr. Andras said letters were sent to family heads informing them that they and their immediate families would be welcome here, but there is little more that can be done.

Virtually the only hope for getting an armed forces aircraft into Saigon for refugees was in the event of a lull in fighting.

Mr. Macquarrie told reporters that Canadian officials should have remained in Saigon to keep a close eye on the situation because "the regime may become more amenable to letting people go."

Only the American, French and Japanese embassies remained open in Saigon Friday. Mr. Sharp said the Canadian embassy was closed after "consultation with other friendly governments."

Canada Left

OTTAWA (CP) — John Diefenbaker bounded back from a two-month illness Friday with a vintage performance in which he managed to couple a scorching blast at the government with a tribute to the Salvation Army.

He concentrated his fire on Vietnam where, he said, "rivers of thousands will face extermination."

"And those who will be first will be those who believed there would be a stand taken by Canada!"

"Canada left . . . your country, my country. All over Asia Canada will be pointed at with critical fingers. Where was Canada?"

In 1972, Barry Swadron, the borough's lawyer, said the decision probably will be appealed.

Moderate Left Wins in Portugal

LISBON (AP) — Portugal's moderate left won the first election since last April's revolution with a landslide victory today over the Communist party.

Led by the Socialists, the three moderate parties won 70 per cent of the votes cast on Friday for members of a constitutional assembly.

The Communist front, a dominant force in the nation since the military overthrew the old rightist regime, was a poor third with about 13 per cent of the vote.

With tallies from 80 per cent of the precincts, the Socialists, the Central Popular Democrats and the Center social Democrats had 125 assembly seats to the Communist front's 38.

But it was not known if the outcome would influence the thinking of the military leaders.

Decision Is Left to New President

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese National Assembly decided after 10 hours of debate today that President Tran Van Huong will have to decide for himself whether to resign to allow formation of a government acceptable to the Communist side for peace negotiations.

A compromise resolution was passed after negotiations over Huong's proposal to either appoint neutralist Gen. Duong Van (Big) Minh to the presidency or for the assembly to give him full powers to appoint a "government of negotiation."

Avoiding a decision, the assembly approved a two-point resolution that gave full support to the president's peace efforts and at the same time said he could if necessary, choose a man to replace him in achieving peace.

As the assembly debated, the military command reported shelling attacks south and west of the capital but no major fighting.

Accreditation Assured For Belleville General

Two main objectives aimed at during 1974 were not successful while a third one was achieved, says the annual report of the Belleville General Hospital Board of Governors.

Submitted during the board's annual meeting Friday, the report says the successful objective was realized "when the hospital was inspected by the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation. The hospital received accreditation status for a further three-year period."

"Not so successful were the objectives for establishing an educational relationship with Queen's University nor that or solving the perennial parking problem," the report notes. "Negotiations in both connections have a long history and will continue in 1975."

CN Display Robbed

City police are investigating the theft of several pieces of large, heavy, display equipment from the floor of a display room in a section of the Quinte Hotel being used by Canadian National Railway for instructional purposes.

Deputy-Chief Harold Reid said today CN course coordinator John Linfield reported at 11:15 a.m., Friday the disappearance of a sump pump, a brush cutter, a pavement cutter, a railway tie-puller, a chain saw and two other items identified only by a number on a bill of sale, all owned by Stihl Chainsaw Canada Ltd. of Lewis Ont.

Mr. Reid said a CNR class finished Thursday at 10:30 p.m. and it was reported all doors were locked. However, police found no evidence of forced entry through doors or windows.

He said the pavement cutter and chainsaw have been recovered but no arrests have been made. Those two items are worth about $500. Value of the missing items is about $2,100.

Students Graduate

Graduation exercises for pupils of the Apostolic Missionary Institute in Picton will be held Saturday, April 26 at 7 p.m. at the Picton United Pentecostal Church. Guest speaker will be Rev. Stanley Chambers, general superintendent of the United Pentecostal Church International, St. Louis, Missouri.

The report also points out the board's task in meeting the community's needs "has been extremely difficult with the severe financial constraints imposed by the provincial government."

It relates a section of the 1973 report which stated, "the problems of the hospital that lie just ahead are three fold: financial, space for the ever-increasing workload and the lack of nursing home beds."

The report says this position continued to worsen last year adds the study undertaken by Gordon A. Priesnitz Enterprises Inc. which confirmed there were serious shortages especially in the diagnostic departments.

"An objective for 1975 will be to persuade the provincial government to accept this fact and moreover the viewpoint of the board relative to the need for nursing home beds," states the report.

Teaching Program Stressed

Belleville General Hospital can be in the vanguard of medical instruction in conjunction with the Queen's University Medical School if hospital officials do not stay from a proposed residency program, says Dr. A.G. Allen, president of the BGH medical staff.

In his report submitted to the BGH board of governors' annual meeting Friday, Dr. Allen notes continued exploration of a formal teaching relationship with the Queen's medical school.

If accepted the two institutions will enter into a partnership in the program to be named the Belleville General Hospital Residency Program.

"If we are successful, we can be in the vanguard of this teaching movement because of our unique facilities and large number of competent staff," Dr. Allen said.

"This type of program is complimentary to so many others which have started, or are about to start, in the city," he says. "I urge you to be imaginative, bold and courageous in our teaching role."

He paraphrases a quotation of Magr. J.P. Sullivan: "Service is a creative expression of self and adds to the enjoyment of life. It gives a feeling of being needed and is rewarding."

Dr. Allen points out, "this should become a reality while we think of our patients, our hospital, our staff and our service to the community."

Sour Colostrum Good

"Sour colostrum provides dairy farmers with an economical alternative to milk replacers," says G. S. Hooper of the Ivestock production branch, Ontario College of Agricultural Technology. "But if the souring is uncontrolled, it may become too acid to be palatable." When first collected, colostrum is quite palatable, but is likely to develop undesirable characteristics when held at barn temperatures.

To find a way of preserving it in a palatable condition for up to four weeks, O. R. Irvine of the Dairy Section of the College has been adding various lactic cultures to fresh colostrum and evaluating the fermentation for calf rearing purposes. Adding a lactic culture is somewhat like an ensiling process in that it converts some of the lactose to lactic acid but does not affect the protein.

To date, three types of cultures have been used. Colostrum allowed to ferment naturally has also been used for comparison. The type of culture which worked best was one used in the making of Cheddar cheese and cultured buttermilk.

Education Week Deserves Support

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — The best things in life may be free but the public appears to remain perennially suspicious of something for nothing.

It's Education Week and schools throughout Prince Edward County this year planned open house and numerous special presentations.

At Queen Elizabeth School in Picton the corridors were empty on Monday morning with no curious public arriving to visit the classrooms.

Certainly, many parents did show interest in the school before the week ended but how many planned impromptu trips to the classrooms before the mid-week parents' night?

With so many varied activities under way in this and other schools in the county it is regrettable that more community residents do not turn out to support Education Week.

Education Week advertises a public open house, not restricted just to parents of the pupils enrolled in the various schools.

It represents an excellent opportunity for unmarried graduates and senior citizens to visit the schools as well as parents of the pupils.

Alvin Hill, principal of Queen Elizabeth School stressed the elementary school is a public building that welcomes visitors not just for Education Week but for the remaining weeks of the school year.

The open area teaching system introduced at Queen Elizabeth School several years ago has sparked controversy on occasion.

Some parents have suggested it may be too distracting for the youngster who has difficulty in concentrating on his subject.

Education Week offered Prince Edward County residents the ideal opportunity to observe this system first hand.

There is no other fair way for the public to assess this progressive teaching method.

Schools are not the only public institutions neglected by community residents. After the Prince Edward County Museum's first year of operation the guest book showed very few local persons had toured the building in comparison with tourists.

This county has five museums, each one different but it is probable but only a small per centage of community residents has visited even one of them.

Tourists cash in on county heritage and enjoy the displays Prince Edward's public is too busy or too indifferent to view.

Chairman of the Prince Edward board of education Douglas Caley stated prior to Education Week that public input is one of the most difficult things for trustees to obtain.

The public should co-operate by visiting the schools for first hand observation of how they are run.

Similarly, the county's vacationing public sh ould stop and view the local sights first and support Prince Edward museums and parks.

Education Week 1975 is over, but the museum season is just beginning.

Trenton Bureau

Overpass Appeal Poor Move

By AL EARAS
Staff Reporter

No, Trenton council hasn't got its signals crossed. It has simply chosen to take hold of a resounding and resonding and crystal clear clang of the bell from the provincial government.

No, gentlemen, says the province, you will not get our permission to borrow over a million dollars in 1975. Your capital works budget is cut by about half.

Any attempt you make to revive the Sidney St. subway will not be looked upon favorably, though you can come to Toronto to argue and try to convince us otherwise.

Sure, Simple Simon, come meet the pie-man, but don't expect a bigger slice.

But council wants that pie. This week, councillors voted to give Trenton's mayor the okay to drive the long journey to the Ontario Municipal Board to argue for reinstatement of the $320,000 Sidney St. subway reconstruction project.

It appears council is not listening carefully to the province. It seems odd. It's not as if the OMB's message was subtle, clouded by words and no action.

Instead, the province has written its message on the largest wall it could find. It said the council requested its capital project financing by $437,200. It slapped on $230,215 ceiling on 1975 town borrowing.

Surely, the OMB is unlikely to follow such a dramatic indication of its feelings with concessions. It axed the Sidney St. subway, and the Trenton greenbelt, and the ball park plans. That's no mean measure of its displeasure.

Isn't the decision of the OMB a signal to town council that it is overspending, something several council members have been trying to drill into their colleagues? And isn't any appeal, and any trip to Toronto, futile? It seems so.

It seems that council has failed to consider the implications, the possible hardships, it may be creating for many people with a big increase in the mill rate needed to pay capital debts. An informed source says opposition to the large capital budget has surfaced among council's own staff.

Was no heed paid to that opposition, that lack of support?

Why did not the majority in council see that that capital budget and the resultant increase in the mill rate would hurt Trenton residents, already hurt by layoffs in town plants and lack of jobs in the area?

Why didn't council accept the responsibility, as the OMB apparently did, for the welfare of Trenton citizens?

It is a disturbing thought. Perhaps council is caught up in its own ambitions for town improvement. The ambitions are unquestionably worthy of expression, but only in a time of guaranteed continuing prosperity. And that cannot be predicted as just over the horizon.

Ventilation Vital

A British company has come to the aid of vegetable growers, processors and distributors, faced with the problem of avoiding damage to their stored crops because of incorrect air ventilation, with this portable device which accurately measures the air flow from stored vegetables, grain and similar products. Manufactured by Cables and Plastics, Yorkshire, England, it is shown in use at Britain's Potato Marketing Board's experimental station in the English midlands.

Too Many Eggs

Gardening Column

Variety of Shrubs Improves Looks

Four-year-old Shellagh Dwyer and her five-year-old brother Shawn of Sydney Forks, know little of the "Birds and the Bees" but these two birds are making too many eggs and have caused a national egg crisis in Canada. Eggs are selling in Sydney for over 90-cents a doz.

By ROSS HAWTHORNE

One of the enjoyments of this column lies in reader's enquiries. All are answered, mostly by letter, since they involve a subject of specific rather than general interest. But every so often, a letter comes along such as the one from Mrs. James Malbon of R.R. 1, Belleville, that deserves general discussion.

Mrs. Malbon wants to know what types of shrubs would be most suitable for her location. She has a little over an acre of land, wide open to the wind, and she wants a variety of color.

The problem in reviewing Mrs. Malbon's question is a dual one. Firstly, the limited length of this column and the almost unlimited scope of possible answers. But let's try any way.

First of all, Mrs. Malbon, never plant shrubs singly, but rather in groups of three or five, otherwise the color effect will be spotty.

Secondly, don't confine shrubs to property lines or foundations but use them as well to form wind-protected pockets in various locations where you might like to sit on a summer's day.

Thirdly, remember you can plant shrubs, two or three deep, staggered in height from tall to short.

Not knowing your property, what you've tryiug to create and how big an area you're trying to cover, prevents me from suggesting a personal landscape plan. All I can do is provide you with a list of my favorites and why I like them.

Lilac — A great windbreak and lots of flowers in June. Maximum height — about 25 feet.

Golden Elder Golden foliage, spreading, good privacy screen. White panicles of flowers in June followed by wine and pie-making berries in August. Maximum height and width — about 10 feet.

Beauty Bush — Absolutely loaded with yellow-pink-white flowers in May. Maximum height about eight feet.

Winged Euonymus — Does nothing all summer, but in the fall its leaves turn a brilliant scarlet rose that is truly striking. Unusual winged bark looks great against the snow.

Weigela — Hordes of tubular flowers in June or July in white, pink, red or dark red. Maximum height about six feet.

Potentilla — A shorty that goes well in front of other shrubs. White or buttercup yellow flowers most of the summer and fall. Fine, feathery foliage. Maximum height two to four feet.

Butterfly Bush — Bears spectacular spikes of flowers in pink, red, blue or purple from July till frost that attracts humming birds and hawk moths in droves. Needs to be cut to the ground every fall and mounded. Maximum height three to five feet in a single season.

Flowering Quince — One to two-inch flowers in white or pink in early summer and yellowish-green jelly-making fruit in the fall. Maximum height three to eight feet, depending on the type.

Scotch Broom — Purple or green leaves. Flowers on mature plants look like puffs of smoke. Twisted gnarled branches. Maximum height — 15 feet.

Sea Buckthorn — Especially good in poor soil. A rambling, thorny shrub that bears great quantities of bright orange berries that last throughout eight eight to twelve feet.

Mock Tree of China — Spectacular rosettes of pink flowers cover the branches in May before the leaves. Maximum height about four feet.

Lemoine Mock Orange — Flowers where the orange blossom fragrance of the white flowers can be appreciated for at least two weeks in early summer. Maximum height four to nine feet, depending on which type you buy.

All of the above are hardy in this area with the exception of the Butterfly Bush. But if you plant it in an area with a southern exposure and south wind protection it's well worth the effort.

Mr. Wells and the Media

Education Minister Wells indicated at the opening of Education Week in Belleville that he is unhappy with criticisms from the media. He says most of it is "not valid . . . that it deals with generalities and vague impressions . . . hearsay evidence at best, as opposed to objective information and assessment."

The minister suggests parents visit the schools this week and form their own opinions "rather than depend on criticisms from the media."

We agree that education has come a long way in Ontario and the Hastings county Education 75 tabloid reflects the progress that has been made in this area. It reflects too the interest and enthusiasm of students such as the Marmora trio who attend Nicholson Catholic Collegiate — Carol Shannon, Lori March and Kate O'Connor — and whose four-verse poem on "Learning is what life is all about" has attracted wide interest.

Still, we do not believe that media criticism is misdirected, inappropriate, or inept — as Mr. Wells seems to suggest.

To take one contemporary theme — the need for a return to basics, to the Three Rs — this has been merely to state what many people recognize: that many of our young people are deficient in this area, and that it is reflected in the words of people in university and in business who come in contact with the new crop of graduates.

Is the media to blame also if it points out, again reflecting letters to this newspaper of late, that many of our young people are having difficulty finding jobs?

As one young woman pointed out in a letter recently, she has been trying to find work since December, but without success. She wrote: "I'm always met with the usual: 'Sorry, you have no experience. . . We aren't taking any applications . . . "We'll give you a call etc."

Often the call never comes. Sometimes too, there is no answer to a written application.

If the media exists only to be put down by ministers of the government and others, then it suggests the criticism is having more effect than is acknowledged.

As we have said, nobody is perfect, but a function of the Press, as one element of the media, is to point out shortcomings where it believes they exist, in the hope they may be remedied, and to reflect public opinion. If those who are criticized believe they are wrong in it, or if they believe the media should just fold its tents and go away, then an essential facet of our free democratic system would be lost.

Globe Man's Assertion

Gerald McAuliffe is, by his own admission, a newspaperman of some accomplishment.

Speaking to a special Education Week assembly at Moira Secondary School, the 36-year-old Globe and Mail reporter credited himself with being personally responsible for eight royal commissions in his journalism career.

In proud fashion, Mr. McAuliffe also took delight in telling his listeners of some 11 libel suits now pending against him.

Not only did Mr. McAuliffe go into some detail about his own credentials, he matter-of-factly suggested that the Globe and Mail "is the only opposition of the government in Ontario."

The latter is a particularly interesting comment, considering that the Globe and Mail's editorial page consistently supports provincial and federal Progressive Conservative election campaigns.)

As if blowing his own horn were not enough, Mr. McAuliffe found time to say that "the press in Canada is hopelessly incompetent in the area of investigative reporting." We assume that remark excluded the Globe and Mail.

More specifically, and to provide some local content to his address, Mr. McAuliffe added: "the paper in this town has abdicated its journalistic duty."

Unfortunately, the remark was allowed to stand as a generality, with no examples cited, and one was left to wonder if Mr. McAuliffe even knows the name of "the paper in this town," or indeed, the name of "this town."

That sort of unsubstantiated comment is what is known as bad reporting.

A Sign of the Times

Echoing "Future Shock" author Alvin Toffler, Soviet physician Dr. Iran Khorol says that millions today are suffering from chronic mental strain.

Calling it "brain overloading," in a report released by UNESCO, Dr. Khorol claims evidence "that the finest mental apparatus on earth, the human brain, has been brought to the brink of ruin.

The member of the august Soviet Academy of Sciences gives this indication of the intellectual pressures of our day: "The brain of a man living in the 20th century has daily to store and deal with a quantity of information that a previous generation would have taken a lifetime to consume."

Dr. Khorol sees the toll exacted by an ever-extended psyche in the rise of problems associated with mental stress and in suicides, and he has a fascinating plan to restore the balance. It takes the form of a worldwide campaign to "save" the brain.

Among other things, he believes brain hygiene should be taught in schools and special diets developed for intellectual workers.

50 mph on The Old Picton Road

One of the Quinte area's most tranquil and pleasant rural routes is County Road 28 — more familiarly known as the Old Picton Road.

Unfortunately this route for long has been an unofficial speed track for drivers of cars and trucks as well.

For children this has been a distinct hazard, as it has been for any adult who happens to enjoy an old-fashioned walk in the country.

It is a situation though which is now changing for the better, thanks to action by the County. Recognizing the danger, it has erected 50 mph signs at either end of this route running in a rough semi-circle off Highway 14.

This is an encouraging move, and it should effect a marked improvement in the traffic situation as it affects people living along the route.

Viewpoint

The Christian Science Monitor

A broader concern is that the current furor over the CIA will totally discredit he agency. It is now fashionable to publicize the CIA's uglier sides and questionable judgments — usually made with presidential approval — but it should not be forgotten that the CIA has successes to its credit also. The nation needs a strong intelligence community — and it would be a disservice to the U.S. not to keep a balanced perspective on the CIA as current investigations of the organization go forward.

Charles' Visit Asserts Ottawa's Arctic Sovereignty

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

The current visit of Prince Charles to the high Arctic is meeting another royal romp, or a personal indulgence by the heir to the throne. It has admittedly genuine anthropological interests.

It is clearly and definably, though no one will say so in protocol-conscious Ottawa, another example of "showing the flag" in our Arctic, the Canadian maple leaf flag that is, not the Union Jack.

The 1971 visit of Queen Elizabeth to another part of the high Arctic, the western portion, had the same intent.

If I recall correctly, some newsman at that point—perhaps the Globe and Mail, noting the aging editor of Toronto Sun such an admission from either the Queen's entourage or senior Ottawa functionaries with her northern party.

If this seems a curious and unnecessary exercise, surely everyone by now accepts the entire Arctic as Canadian.

Officially the Northwest Passage waters are in dispute international route, according to the U.S. state department.

And this U.S. position was reaffirmed in the suspicious year 1970 after the prime minister introduced both Bill C-202 in Parliament, followed by Bill C-203, the former to become The Arctic Waters Pollution Prevention Bill, the latter extension of Canadian jurisdiction of waters from the historic three-mile limit to the controversial 12-mile zone.

The first act, placed 100-mile wide "sanitation zones" around our Arctic islands (whose ownership is not in dispute).

The second not only advances Canada's territorial waters, but in effect closes off any near-future use portions of the Northwest Passage which are 12 miles wide at least.

In addition, on April 7, 1970, the day before these two bills were introduced in Parliament, the government informed the secretary-general of United Nations it would act unilaterally in "any rights claimed or exercised by Canada" in respect of conservation, management or exploitation of the living resources of the sea, pollution and continental issues and so forth.

The reason high-level, royal visits of the Queen herself and the son and heir to the throne are emphasized, I think, is because the Queen is the Queen in Canada and that our country, alone in the hemisphere, remains constitutionally a monarchy.

The Commonwealth heads of government conference about to open in Kingston, Jamaica, includes nations as different as Jamaica, the host country, and Nigeria, Africa's largest and most populous state, even General Idi Amin's military Uganda.

All of them are constitutionally monarchies within the British Commonwealth which is the juridical reason why the unstable Ugandan leader can ask the British to invite him to London, or suggest to her he be given a leading role in Commonwealth affairs.

By comparison, defining even more our identity as an Canadian, we belong to a Commonwealth relative to our Arctic sovereignty, which about one third of total Canadian territory, by asking the Queen and her family to visit it is sound and rational.

This is especially true as our big American neighbor is about to celebrate the 200th anniversary of rejecting the same British monarchy altogether.

Is Ottawa Shifting Blame With Commission Probe of Big Business

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

When the federal government appoints a royal commission, it means business.

Pierre Trudeau chose the seventh anniversary of his accession to prime-ministerial power—a power that has become much more concentrated since 1968—to launch an inquiry into the concentration of corporate power in Canada.

It is significantly, the first royal commission to be set up in these seven years—a period that has seen Canada's inflation go almost out of control, its economy prospering only at a complete stop and its unemployment rate soar.

Why, then, should the government go to the extraordinary lengths of appointing a royal commission to find out whether corporate power is concentrated?

Partly because of politicians' almost inherent tendency to shift the blame to business, even if only by implication, whenever the economy gets into trouble.

And partly because business abused and is frustrated, by its Pavlovian response to what it considers provocations from Ottawa, and its frequent failure to foresee public response to its actions.

For its part, the Trudeau government seems to believe that the economic system is inherently unstable. It will go on functioning no matter how much the politicians and bureaucrats may alienate those Canadians who spend long years at arduous study, then work hard and take big risks in the expectation of reasonable rewards.

They may, perhaps, see corporate power as a rival to government power. It follows, in that view, that corporations must be carefully restricted and kept under constant surveillance.

Business, for its part, sometimes forgets that there is such a thing as a legitimate public interest in its activities.

Corporate management understandably, perhaps, that it is ultimately responsable to itself, but (it too often forgets) not to itself alone.

There are still some captains of industry who cling to the romantic fiction of a laissez-faire market system in which private companies operate privately.

The power and influence of business have a broad impact in the public sphere—but so, too, do the powers and influence of organized labor and free-spending politicians.

What seems to have triggered the Trudeau government's decision to establish its first royal commission is the current $150-million offer by Power Corp. of Montreal Ltd. to acquire Argus Corp.

Ostensibly, each is a closed-end investment fund, with a portfolio of securities in a blind pool instead of some of Canada's most important operating companies.

The key man in the proposed merger is Paul G. Desmarais the 48-year-old chairman and chief executive officer of Power Corp.

His business career started 25 years ago in Sudbury, when he took over a near-bankrupt bus line.

Since then, by working long and hard, taking risks and pyramiding one acquisition on top of another, he has extended his influence to a large Montreal daily newspaper, a huge forest-products company, a glass manufacturer and a host of other companies.

Mr. Desmarais has never been noted as an executive who goes out of his way to court public opinion, nor to provide the public with much more information than the law requires.

The royal commission of inquiry may thus provide some answers to public questions not only about corporate power but also about Power Corporation.

Whither the Aid Programs?

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Your editorial "Help for the Needy" — April 19 — will give comfort and support to those whose "charity begins at home and mostly ends there it begins."

No doubt there are many people in Canada, including the groups you mention, who need help. However, I seriously doubt that the 'starvation' any of them are said to face is the slow, awful privation leading to the painful death or life-long disability which is documented in other parts of the world.

If anyone knows of Canadian cases of real hardship, it surely the citizen's responsibility to see that help is given — either through the government concerned, or failing that the many active charitable organizations, or even through private generosity. Sometimes people do not realize the help available to them — the government avail-able to low income pensioners, for instance.

I find it very difficult to believe many major stories one hears about Canadians starving, or living on dog food, etc., and even more difficult to believe that any Canadian actually know of such cases allow them to continue.

I am not aware of the figures on Canada's contribution to the world food program, but it might interest you that 95 per cent of all the money raised annually in Canada by voluntary agencies stays right here in Canada.

Isn't it about time the 'Have' people realized that the 20th century progress has made the whole world our home — and that the 'Have' nations are in dire need of help, these 'Have Not' countries, particularly, in time rot the fabric of the whole structure?

You are quite right — the public should have answers to questions on the use of public funds — and in this country we are still able to express our opinions to our own government, to have answers. Perhaps a growing majority will back our governments in sharing part of our high standards of living with less fortunate people in other parts of our world home.

DIANA SETTLE

Editor's note: Canadian International Development Agency appropriations for 1975-76, according to a statement by External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen earlier this month, amount to $712 million. The minister added that the World Food Program next year will displace the International Development Association as the largest recipient of multilateral funds.

Store Hours Draw Comment

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

I am writing in reference to the controversial issue of uniform store hours.

The Downtown Merchants Association executive, who represent the downtown merchants are automatically members by virtue of operating a business in the downtown sector and not by solicited membership, which we have raised the issue of uniform store hours and our arguments seem to be propositioning City Hall to respond completely the operations of the downtown businesses.

At present, licenses are issued by City Hall, subject to the applicant having been approved by various parties and having received, read and understood, a copy of the City by-laws which currently regulate the days and times which a business may operate within.

In my opinion, it is one thing to set guidelines under which a business may operate, but is entirely a different matter to 'enforce' what days and times business may operate.

Should this 'group' be successful in attaining their desires, we as individuals, as a community, and as a nation will have given up a large part of our individual freedom and control of our lives to an enterprise.

On the other hand, if this group is concerned 'only' with the uniformity of the present regulations, I would suggest (here: downtown merchants can remain open only two nights per week and until 'six' other week nights as opposed to businesses outside the city 'proper' who can remain open every week night until 'nine') then I concur with the idea and proposal that indeed the hours should be uniform throughout the city, the privilege being conferred upon those outside of a certain boundary.

Once again though, I would emphatically state that any guidelines established to the present regulations should be set only as guidelines and that the businesses should ultimately have the right to choose what days or times they will open within these guidelines.

THOS. M. WILLIAMS,

Ottawa Fans Inflation

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

As Canada's parliamentarians vote to put the brake on the inflationary pay raise the public should be prepared for other groups to follow their leadership.

How our elected representatives can justify any call for restraint to anybody else is difficult to understand. They have given the lead and must expect others to follow.

I am at a loss to understand how, with the country's economy in the state it is, any of these people, government or opposition, can be entitled to a raise.

The situation in the country today is a direct result of the failure of the system we subscribe to, or, more particularly, the inability of our elected representatives to control it. It's no good either, for opposition members to claim they could do better. Most of us know damned well they could not.

So we are stuck with a group of men and women who set their own pay scales while making pointed comments about others who ask for more, and who, as our representatives show daily that their inability or direct or control the forces that ravage our country.

These men and women who so cavalierly vote themselves such a hefty chunk of our money are not worth it — the record stands as evidence of this.

Finally, our local member, Mr. Jack Ellis, has not been so vocal this session, but he can it be that he and his party have no answer either?

WILLIAM C. HOCKLEY,

OHS Backed

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

As a taxpayer I was pleased with City Council's choice to retain the Ontario Humane Society. They cannot please everyone, but they do good work.

In my way of thinking they have done a remarkable job in caring for our animals. As a member of the O.H.S., I appreciate their kindness to our neglected and unwanted animals.

I would rather see the city spend the money repairing our city streets and side-walks than building a new dog pound, unless it is about better than 30 years ago.

Israelis Seized Mosque Key Providing Foes with Symbol

JERUSALEM (AP) A key to one of the gates of the holiest Moslem shrine in Jerusalem has become a symbol of the Palestinian fight for self-rule.

"They took the key. The Israelis took it by force, and we our will," says Shir Sa Dedin Alami, muftí, or religious judge, of East Jerusalem and spiritual mentor of Al Aqsa Mosque.

The key opens a gate leading from the courtyard of Al Aqsa to the Western Wailing Wall of the Jews.

To prevent clashes between Jewish and Moslem worshippers, the Israelis took custody of the key after they captured the mosque—third holiest in Islam—and all East Jerusalem in the 1967 Mideast war.

"We realize this is a very sensitive issue and we try to be fair about it," said a spokesman for the police, who have custody of the key.

Alami conceded that the Arabs control the other six gates to the mosque and that Moslems have no trouble getting to the mosque to pray. But the seventh gate has become a token of Jewish domination of Jerusalem's Arabs.

"We live in a prison," he said. My family has lived in Jerusalem for 600 years. The Israelis have no right to rule me."

This winter 200 worshippers stormed out of the mosque after Friday prayers waving Palestinian flags and chanting "Palestine! Palestine!" Israeli troops fired over their heads to disperse them and arrested 30 demonstrators.

The demonstration was not the first Palestine violence at the mosque.

In 1951, Palestinian nationalists assassinated Jordan's King Abdullah on the steps of Al Aqsa. Abdullah's young grandson, now King Hussein, was at his side.

"Once a Moslem lives in a land governed by Moslems, it is forbidden for him ever to live under non-Moslem government," said Alami in an interview, implying a Moslem duty to oppose Jewish rule in Arab Jerusalem.

Five years ago, some Palestinian leaders rallied for a holy war against the Israelis after a Christian Australian, later described as psychopathic and believing himself king of Jerusalem, set the mosque on fire, badly damaging half of it. Only a show of strength by Israeli troops prevented another riot.

Restoration of the mosque still is going on and has cost nearly $200,000 so far.

"The Israelis offered to help with the restoration but we refused," said Ibrahim Dagaq, chief engineer.

"The officials of Al Aqsa refuse to have anything to do with us," said Shlomo Nawi of the Israeli ministry of religion. "We give assistance to Moslems in the rest of Israel. But the Moslems of East Jerusalem refuse to deal with us."

Another source of Moslem indignation is an Israeli archeological excavation on a slope below the mosque. The Arabs once charged that the excavation threatened to topple Al Aqsa. Moslem officials now concede there is no physical danger to the building but contend the digs alter the historical character of the area.

Hassan Tamaboch, head of East Jerusalem's Supreme Moslem Council, said the Israelis are not capricious or repressive. "They have been helpful with the restoration when they were asked and they did not use the key to the gate to lock us out of the mosque," he said.

"But that is not the point. It is our mosque. They do not ask permission to dig and they do not ask permission to enter. We have protested and we continue to protest these trespasses.

"But there is nothing we can do. They have the power."

Add Life to Your Years

By Dr. Gordon C. Smyth

Methuselah probably "existed" longer and did less than any other person. He was highly competent at breathing, eating, and sleeping. He gained complete mastery of the operation-able art of doing nothing.

Methuselah's name appears several times in the Bible, but in each instance it is simply a matter of historical reference. The classic reference to this man is Genesis 5:27. He added years, many years, to his life, but emphatically failed to add life to his years.

The long, lean, empty existence of Methuselah presents a challenge to every thinking person. Each of us may well ask himself, "Am I adding years to my life, or life to my years?" This is no mere academic question.

Nobody should belittle or discredit long years — if they are wisely and usefully spent. Modern medical science suggests that babies now being born may live 100 years or more. To become a recipient of many years is good if those many years are effectively spent.

Habits should be cultivated in youth that will provide satisfaction in old age. My father enjoyed his service club and church well into his eighties. When he went to a Lodge, he enjoyed doing things for companions less able than he. The last cheque that he wrote was to honor a pledge to the missionary cause. The signature was feeble, but not the spirit. He added life to his years.

Of course, what counts is quality rather than quantity. The bereaved often need to remind themselves of this point. Some couples pack more happiness into the time span of 25 years than others for whom golden wedding anniversaries can be arranged.

Moreover, I would remind individuals who grow cynical when somebody whom they admire is taken by death that Jesus of Arc went at 18, Martin Luther King, Jr., at 39 and Jesus at 33.

Our Lord spoke for all such persons when, as the shadow of Calvary lengthened, He prayed, God in prayer, "I glorified thee on earth, having accomplished the work which thou gavest me to do."

On the other hand, Lord Byron said: "It is not anything that I have done that haunts me but it is what I might have been." So must it be with men and women who fail to add life to their years.

THE CHURCH OF CHRIST WELCOMES YOU

U.S. Cars Still Seen in Cuba Despite 14-year-old Blockade

By JOHN D. HARRION
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

HAVANA — We are standing at the entrance of the famous and still elegant Hotel National, waiting for our own transport, watching everyone else's going by.

Cuba's mixed spread of foreign cars says more about her economic and political isolation and her own ways of breaking it, than much of the political discussion you can generate.

A few years ago here, the lingering American models of the late 50s, sputtering and spewing smoke along city and country roads, the ones which had been cannabilized when they stopped, were the stark symbols of genuine technological and economic isolation.

What could indicate the end of the American dream in any country to which, it had been exported, than the end of access to the American cash.

Well, in spite of the now 14 year-old American blockade of Cuba, American cars survive in the hundreds. Oldsmobiles and Chevvies not seen in Canada since the early 60s. Even a 1957 Thunderbird stormed past us, somehow. It had survived the long drought when parts and equipment could only be taken from other aging U.S. car models in Cuba.

A plain, brown car pulls up in front of us, carrying newsmen waiting to go to interviews, giving cause to believe the Swedes have reached Cuba selling Volvos to make up for the declining U.S. cars. It's no Volvo, but a Volga, a Soviet car used as a taxi, perhaps taking a Cuban family home, perhaps from lunch with friends in the hotel.

But the real Cuban coup, political as well as economic, is the deal with Argentina to import 40,000 cars chiefly from the branch plants of U.S. car companies in that country, plus Argentine-made Fiats were also included in the massive sale.

Cuba will take about $250 millions from her banned sugar sales earnings of $3 billions in 1974 to pay for the cars, 18,000 of which will be used as taxis in Havana until state priorities permit funds to be allocated and foreign technology sought for a badly-needed subway.

The Argentine car deal did more to technically break Washington's prohibitive Trading With The Enemy Act, passed originally against Communist China and applied also against Cuba after Castro nationalized U.S. industry in 1960, than the efforts of U.S. branch plants in Canada to break it.

The newly-elected regime of the late Argentine President and former dictator Juan Domingo Peron, virtually ordered the large U.S. auto branch plants in that country to fill the big Cuban order, or be nationalized. The lagging Argentine car industry needed the big Cuban order and Peron's political movement had always been sympathetic to Castroism as another national political ideology in Latin America determined to live outside the powerful American economic orbit.

Also included in the deal were Argentine-built Fiats to join the Russian ones already here, manufactured deep in the Soviet Union at Fiat's huge Togliatti car plant (named after the late Italian Communist Party leader) on the Volga River.

This apparently beetle mix of road transport, first Russian cars to replace the ousted American car industry of the early and mid-60s, then the present and growing mixture of European, British and Canadian cars has permitted Castro's revolution to keep its wheels turning.

Canada's major transport input is not yet visible, the new U.S.-built diesel locomotives coming from the factory of MLW Worthington Limited in Montreal, (also a U.S.-owned branch plant), about 20 of them still to be built.

The British transport role is conspicuous in the 500 or more buses called curiously "guaguas" in Havana (a word brought over by 18th century immigrants from the Canary Islands who remembered their island's jitney buses). They arrived in the late 60s, on one of the largest sales to Cuba outside the Communist bloc up to that time.

They came from the Leyland Company, a British transport and engineering corporation which is now broke, but which placed much hope in the Cuban style, Third World business a few years ago.

Therefore city transport in Havana is much better than when the revolution first began. Most of the urban Cubans line up patiently for transport (and everywhere in Cuba queues are the rule for food, clothing, restaurant seats), will get on the bus when it comes along.

In spite of so much new road transport, (country roads are filled with heavily-burdened Chinese and Russian-built trucks looking like remnants of the 30s), the streets are empty compared to the traffic pace and hassle of pre-revolutionary Cuba.

The sweeping Malecon Drive which still winds in its glory around the downtown Havana waterfront, can be crossed without danger to life and limb. But the fewer cars using it, Russian, ex-Yankee, Argentine, Italian, even the ubiquitous Mercedes Benz from a state ministry, (though most are belong to state agencies of one kind or another) carves at you just as they used to do.

On rural roads, the Soviet jeeps, (looking exactly like the sturdy Willys original models of the late 40s), lie in wait to stop speeding buses and cars. And yes, you can get a speeding ticket in Cuba.

Our drive from Havana to the glorious beach of Varadero almost got one. And it's a scary experience since the police are part of the omni-present PNR (Policia Nacional Revolucionaria, the National Revolutionary Police, who can keep track of Cubans on any given occasion, speeding surely being one of the least of them.

But then, it's different from the old days when the cops went out with quotas from precinct captains.

Fishing Industry Outlook Is Gloomy

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The Fisheries Association of Newfoundland and Labrador says little or no improvement in fish markets can be expected this year.

In a recent brief to the government, the association also suggested that rearrangement of marketing procedures will do materially improve the net return to inshore fish-boat operators.

The brief said the province "can expect a long-term reduction in the overall market for fish blocks" and prices for blocks cannot be expected to reach levels recorded in 1973.

Fish blocks are created through a production method in which fish is packed in a block to make it further processed more efficient and easier. For instance, fish sticks are made from such blocks, permitting fish processors to maintain a standard size.

Statistics have shown an increasing preference by consumers for fillets in natural form and fewer sales of pre-cooked and breaded items. Demand for cod block had been seriously lowered by Alaskan pollock and other cheaper varieties.

Canadian fish producers are largely dependent on the United States market because there are few opportunities for bio.. sales overseas.

The association said that while the U.S. economy struggles through a depressed period, the fishery cannot expect much relief this year or even next.

Through carelessness, indifference or downright ignorance of a "farmer-oriented government" at Ottawa and a "hurry-your-boat policy" at home with no surveillance, no restrictions, no limit and no law, "our rich fish stocks declined under the pressure and now are greatly depleted.

"It will take years of hardship, privation, suffering, regulations, restrictions, research, ability and planning and millions of dollars to rebuild and nurture the fishery."

About 13,000 men are at present engaged in the inshore fishery off Newfoundland's coasts and another 8,000 to 10,000 depend on it for a living. The inshore fishery accounts for 40 per cent of the volume and 60 per cent of the value of the total fishery.

The association has called on the provincial government to make Ottawa aware of the "political and economic need" for financial assistance until the resources in the inshore fishery is again viable and the fish... are assured an adequate income.

Lower Prices For These Foods

Changes in food prices — both up and down recently — are so disturbing that it takes a remarkable memory to know where you stand today compared with the situation a year ago.

The Purchasing Management Association of Canada, Eastern Ontario District, has compared food prices since last year and their figures supply an interesting portrait of what's happening in the food marketplace.

Last year, for example, at one Belleville supermarket, you would have paid 16 cents for a can of soup; today you will pay 23 cents. Baby powder was $2.05, it's now $2.35. Salted biscuits were 39 cents; now the price is 79 cents. Chicken legs are a mere four cents a pound higher. The big shocker in price increases is, of course, milk. Last year it cost $1.02 per quart; today it costs a year the price is $1.55.

But not all the news is bad. Potatoes are down to an incredible 34 cents for 10 pounds from $1.29. Cream cheese is down to 78 cents from $1.39. Boneless round steak is $1.56; last year it was $1.68. Extra large eggs cost 78 cents per dozen compared with 92 cents last year.

The total cost this April, compared with last, is actually down 56 cents. ($0.56 compared with $10.12.)

Agriculture Canada's ornamentals research service has developed a preservative which stops cut roses from bending their heads and dying while still in the bud.

The preservative, called Flower Care, is included in bouquets of flowers sold by Flowers Canada members. Flowers Canada is an association of flower growers and sellers which received the use of the formula from the government.

The stuff is supposed to lengthen the life of snapdragon and carnation bouquets as well as roses. It is made of an agent which inhibits the growth of microorganisms which "plug up the pipes" of cut flowers, super to feed the plant and a Vitamin C derivative which helps keep the flower healthy and growing.

A fresh cut rose kept in Flower Care solution should last 10 days, twice as long as its usual life span in water.

The first week in May is Child Safety Week. It's a good time to think about cars and bicycles and cars and playing. It's also a good time to screw up your courage and say things to people you've been wanting to say for a long time. There's a road I travel every day, for example, which is constantly used as a playground by three very small tykes and their assorted dogs and tricycles and bikes.

I have an idea they're brothers and sister; I also have an idea nobody is watching them. I know they're not watching for cars. Because I travel the road every day, I'm on the look-out. Other motorists are not necessarily aware or careful drivers.

For a long time I've wanted to stop in the car and call out where they live and ask their mother or father or babysitter to please keep them off the street. That's the kind of poking into other people's business we're all inept at, however, and so far, I haven't, managed to screw up enough courage yet.

Are they your kids?

What School Kids Think About Belleville and the World

Recently, John Colson, a grade seven teacher at St. Michael's Academy, asked his English students to write letters to the editor as an English composition.

Sixteen of the letters arrived at The Intelligencer the other day and we thought it was interesting to see what these young students had to say about Belleville and the rest of the world. Their topics were varied: from ecology to abortion, Vietnamese children to the Arena. As for their opinions, you can judge for yourself by what they write.

I do not like the idea of the Vietnamese children and parents coming over because they are getting new parents but our Canadian kid need parents too. I feel sorry for Canada because something will go wrong.

Bill McFarland

The rising costs of food is just impossible to live with. Why do they think they can continue on with sports, instead of saving a lot of money (o help the poor. They can still play sports but they should stop contests and lotteries. Many prices go up in food because they are being taken. Supervision would cost a lot, but help a lot more.

Sue Moher.

I go downtown almost every week. I am ashamed to be seen in a city like that. Downtown Front St. is like going into the slums. It makes an awful first impression on out-of-town visitors. I wouldn't blame them if they turned back.

Mary Wiseman

I am complaining about the bus system now. The last thing that I want to worry about is missing the bus because I don't have the correct change and missing an important meeting. The least thing the bus drivers could do if they want more money is take a little time to give us the correct change.

Doug Wilson.

Big companies get too much of a profit. They raise their prices at free will. It bothers me, because we have to suffer while they are having so much money. They don't have to because they have too much money already. We have to pay for the stuff and that makes us cause more inflation.

Larry Mulin

I would like to say a few things on the food world. If we gave some of the money to other countries instead of spending most of it on trips to the moon and stuff some people wouldn't be starving. I like the idea of sending space ships to the moon but isn't one trip enough?

Ann Millington

I like to remind you about the buildings in Belleville (especially downtown). They are very big and long and there is a fire. Three buildings are burned instead of one. So stop selling them and keep big desks and do something about it.

Cline Dobce.

The Belleville Arena is a fire trap! It's too old and if it is ever crowded and a fire breaks out, there will be such a panic, that everyone will be killed. There should be more exits and only a certain number of people should be allowed in at one time. It's really crummy and if it was up to me, I'd build a new arena.

Larry Drabot

The prices of candy etc., have gone up too much. One day for example a chocolate bar was 10 cents the next day it was 20 cents. Even sports equipment has gone up because of little things, and gradually everything will go sky high. If prices don't go down people will starve and it will probably start a big conflict in our society. So I think prices should go down before they get too out of hand.

Tim Green.

I think that it is mean that people are complaining about people letting their dogs loose. But if it cards the let loose they shouldn't have dogs. They should be kept out in the country where they can be free just like people.

Tracie Reid.

I am writing a poem because of the pollution in Canada. All over Canada pollution has been caused by people. The price of food and canned drinks etc., have gone up so much I think soft drink companies, food companies should have a deposit for the item they're selling. Just think of all pop cans being out off the roads, highways, parks and people's yards. Maybe pollution can be stopped and people could live better in a clean world.

Caroline Feeney.

The downtown area is a mess. It's sometimes because of the pigeons. Once I stepped out of a building and I got it right on the head kerplop. They are a messy bird and you feel like an over-dose milkshake. Where I live all we get is garbage pickup. The grader comes through hardly at all. So I think they should at least keep the roads in good shape. When you're coming down the road I live on, you would swear you were on the moon because of all the pot-holes. I really think something should be done about the streets of Belleville and the roads outside Belleville.

Kathy Hogan

I think Belleville is spending their money on the wrong things. The one main thing they should spend their money on is the roads all over Belleville. The roads all over Belleville make the pleasure of driving turn into a nerve-wrecking experience. These roads are full of pot-holes and bumps. After you drive on Bridge Street you feel like a milkshake. So instead of spending your money on something else they should start fixing the roads up right away.

Doug Austin.

I think abortion is very wrong. Women don't have the right to take a baby's life. If the woman doesn't want the baby she should put it up for adoption. Then that way nobody gets harmed.

Steve Jesse.

I have something to say about nature being destroyed, plants, grass and trees being torn out of the ground and roads being ripped and destroying grass and plants. There are small animals being killed for pleasure or sport. Little animals as squirrels, chipmunks, rabbits, snakes etc. The way I think we can stop this horrible thing is watch for them when you are driving the car so you don't wound them or kill them; watch where you are aiming your gun. Example, if you have your gun aimed at an animal that is extinct look for one you want that has perished in the past years. I hope hunters or anyone else will take this advice and help nature. Thank you.

Monica Short.

MARMORA WI

At a recent meeting of the Marmora Women's Institute, the members passed a resolution to be sent to the government, objecting to the degrading use of women in television advertising.

The resolution was made in reaction to a letter to the editor of The Intelligencer from Debbie Squires, in which she expressed her concern about the quality of commercials, and asked to hear about other women's views.

THE GOLDEN STRINGS
By Tree Davidson

Tree Davidson, so wrelired after a lengthy term as Mayor of East York, has written this book of comment and opinion on the contributions that many senior citizens are continuing to make to the life of Canada.

The Canadian professor she has chosen come from all walks of life and history personally to Miss Davidson. She has studied the strengths — physical, mental, or spiritual — which keep some people going for an extra fifteen or twenty years after they have "retired."

Miss Davidson includes Mme. Vanier, Cardinal Leger, Senator Croll, and Dr. McClure as some of the men and women who have given a lifetime of dedication to relieving human suffering and want.

Others whose words and works have impressed her are A.Y. Jackson, Hugh McLellan, Chief Dan George, Mme. Therese F Casgrain, Sir Nathan Phillips. As she writes about them as she sees them and their significant contribution to the Canadian scene, one is based on monetary returns but given wholeheartedly to meet the needs of others.

This book is available at the Corby Library.

United Church Women Meet

"As women of the church we must take our place in society" said Jessie MacLeod in speaking to the Bay of Quinte U.C.W. Conference held recently in Renfrew.

Of the 182 women gathered for the Conference about one quarter held positions at elders or were on the board of stewards of their respective churches. Fifty percent of the membership of any church is usually women.

It is interesting to note that when the W.M.S. was first organized, we read of one minister who only permitted his women to organize and conduct a missionary society on condition that an elder be always present at all meetings to see that the women conduct themselves in a seemly fashion. Who could tell what these women might be tempted to do if left to their own devices?

In 1922 women were allowed as elders, and in 1936 the first woman was ordained in the United Church of Canada. In the past two or three years more women than ever are preparing for the ministry.

In conclusion, Miss MacLeod stressed "that women do not have to lose their femininity to obtain success, whether it be at home, in the business world or in the Church."

The 13th annual meeting began with a pre-convene meeting. Following a delicious lunch, welcome was extended by Freda Machin, president of Renfrew Presbyterial and Jessie Stewart.

The 1974 minutes and reports of committees were read, as well as the financial report; the proposed 1975 budget, the nursery fund, stewardship, supply projects; of the nominating committee saw Jean Wheltam, Kingston re-elected as president for 1975.

A panel introduced by Gertrude Curtis and composed of some of the Conference field staff and resource people from the National Division of Mission, presented resource material and discussed how the Nation Division of Mission could serve the locals.

A skit presented by six ladies brought back many memories as they reviewed the work of the W.M.S. the W.A. and finally the U.C.W. during the 50 years since church union.

Jessie MacLeod was the guest speaker on Tuesday evening and on Wednesday morning Rev. Fritz Schmidt conducted a retreat and discussion groups on Family Life.

Francis Hare was in charge of evening vespers: Rev. George Richardson installed the new slate of officers.

Doris Clark

Housewives' Declaration

Dear Doris: Having worked in Switzerland with handicapped children, I was thrilled to read in your column the story of Mrs. Walmsley, the loving foster mother of more than 200 babies. Have you more such examples of women using their warmth, skill, labor and heart to care for those in need, and so showing what French women are at work producing fulfilled lives not only for themselves but for many others?

Two farmers' wives in Great Britain "worked out" the "Housewives' Declaration", (which follows). Thousands have taken up these ideas, in many European countries as well. Housewives are the greatest union in the world. How they decide to live can bring the changes in society that are so badly needed. Do you think Canadian housewives will enlist themselves as well?

HOUSEWIVES DECLARATION.

WE ARE GRATEFUL that most of us in Britain have enough to eat and to keep us warm and to those whose work makes this possible.

WE WILL TACKLE today's difficulties as a challenge and not depress others with our grumbling.

WE WILL CARE about the standard of living and true happiness of our neighbors around the world. Have we the right to get richer every year when so many are hungry?

WE ACCEPT that food will cost more everywhere. We are ready to spend less on luxuries. We will shop from need and off from greed.

WE WILL REFUSE to let the heart and bitterness of entrenched attitudes of the past sharpen our future.

WE WILL MAKE new friends, including people of different backgrounds and races, to seek out and keep agreements with old friends.

WE WILL THINK for ourselves about what is right and be ready to stand firm and speak out for it.

WE WILL TAKE ON the building of a different world for our children and grandchildren. We know this cannot begin without a change of basic human nature which needs the power of God. We will start with change in ourselves and in our homes.

E.W.

Dear E.W.: It is refreshing to think of housewives banding together in a "Union" to pledge to do their bery best in their job — which is an important one.

It is not easy for our modern career-mother to raise a family while at the same time earning a share of the money that feeds them, yet the old saying still holds that "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world".

An agency in the business of caring for children could supply you with stories like Mrs. Walmsley's. But of course we know that the heart is for the babe's own mother to supply the loving care so needed.

Any comments about the Housewives' Declaration?

'Sexist' Ad Upsets MP

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal MP Ursula Appolloni, upset by an advertisement carried Thursday in Toronto that she had sought action in the Commons to prevent publication of what she called sexist, anti-feminine and distasteful material.

But aspect from receiving sympathy she made little headway and conceded later that nothing legal can be done.

The advertisement was placed by Zero Population Growth and argued that Canada Mr. is threatened with overpopulation by an influx of immigrants.

The advertisement includes a picture of a pregnant young girl in blue jeans beside the caption: "If Canada were a girl, she'd be in trouble."

Mrs. Appolloni, who was born in England and lived in Italy for 11 years before moving to Canada in 1956, saw the advertisement while browsing through the newspaper during a morning meeting of the Commons immigration committee.

"As a woman and an immigrant, I find it extremely offensive," she said, later accusing the newspaper of "prostituting itself for money."

She carried her complaint to parliament after meeting that Health Minister Marc Lalonde has taken no action to prevent publication of such material.

He said he had not seen the advertisement but Immigration Minister Robert Andras said he would discuss the matter with Mrs. Lalonde and Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet.

The advertisement says there soon will be too many people in Canada because of high birth rates in other countries.

It suggests a maximum Canadian population of about 20 million and says immigration should be cut to about 100,000 people annually from the current rate of "250,000 and rising."

"I'm seething," Mrs. Appolloni told reporters. "There are other ways of putting points across, for example when a motherhood wrong?"

'Women Must Be Heard'

LONDON (Reuter) — Two leading female politicians, Britain's Margaret Thatcher and Francoise Giroud of France, advised international womanhood Thursday to "be heard and maintain positions of power."

Mrs. Thatcher, leader of Britain's opposition Conservative party, and Mrs. Giroud, France's minister for women's affairs, both told a conference here that women should bring into traditional male strongholds in politics and industry.

"The widespread access to power of women would have a profound effect on international relations," Mrs. Giroud said.

"The defence and peace of the world is perhaps even more important to women (than men) because it affects their whole family life," Mrs. Thatcher said.

She told the conference, attended Women and Power and organized by London Women Conservatives as a contribution to the United Nations-sponsored International Women's Year, that it is as crucial for women, as for the nation, that they take part in all aspects of political life.

"It is clear that women mean to be heard today, but alongside men, not in order to drown them," Mrs. Giroud said. "There are two sexes so we must have two voices."

Ann Landers

Emotional Problems Cause Wild Weight Fluctuation

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a girl, 16 years old, who is 5'3". Two years ago I went on a crash diet and lost 25 pounds. My lowest weight was 74 pounds. I was told I looked like I was going to drop dead any minute, so I started to eat again. I gained 25 pounds and people said I looked 100 per cent better, but I felt fat.

Last summer I went to a camp for eight weeks. During that month I lost 10 pounds and was very happy about it. Then it began to eat like a pig. I've put on 40 pounds and my mouth is still going.

I went to a hypnotist and he couldn't help me. I joined two clubs for overweight people but couldn't stick with their program. I tried a psychologist and he said nobody could do it but me. And I CAN'T. Please give me some advice. I hate myself. — Motor Mouth

Dear Mouth: The clue appears in the last three words of your letter. Go to another therapist and find out why you hate yourself and get to work on THAT.

A teen-ager who has experienced such wild weight fluctuations must have severe emotional problems. Until you get them resolved you'll continue to alternate between very fat and very thin—and neither is healthy.

Dear Ann Landers: I have never seen this problem discussed in your column although I've been a steady reader for many years. I don't want to believe you've never before received a letter of this nature. It would make me feel even more uncomfortable.

I'm in love with my brother, and he is in love with me. X is his early 30s and I am in my middle 20s. We've felt this way about each other for years but it's become more difficult lately because of our bad marriages.

It seems like no one understands X but me, and vice versa. This has drawn us closer together. But the physical desire for one another makes us feel weird and unnatural.

We've never discussed this with anyone but each other. Writing to you is the first attempt to remedy the problem. We both want our marriages to work. Do we need counselling or should we follow our hearts? So far we have managed to keep our hands off each other. Will this love mixed with desire pass as we get older? Do we need counselling? If so, how does one explain something like this to a spouse?

There isn't another soul in this world I can turn to. Please help. — Blood Is Thicker

Dear Thicker: Incestuous relationships ARE weird and unnatural. You DO need counselling and I hope you both get it immediately.

I can see no reason to tell your respective spouses why you are seeking help. It would serve no useful purpose and it may well destroy for all time any chance to improve your marriage. Good luck and get going.

Dear Ann Landers: I work in an office building. It is one of the newest and most beautiful in the city. I'm sure it cost at least $10 million.

I get sick when I see women emoloyees wipe lipstick on the walls and put their dirty shoes on the beautifully upholstered seats.

Should I say something and make enemies or keep my mouth shut and boil inside? — Need Advice

Dear Ad: Speak up. Someone should let these sows know that their tacky behavior is not going unnoticed.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a man in my late 50s. I know a widow who has three children. She is about 10 years younger. We like each other. This woman is working and makes a nice salary. She also was left some money by her late husband. I am unemployed right now and my financial condition is not good because I'm in a seasonal trade.

Every weekend this woman wants to be taken to dinner and to the theatre or to an expensive movie. I cannot afford it and have suggested that she pay her own way. She says, "This is not the American style. If a man can't afford to take out a lady he has no right to invite her."

I am European. Maybe I don't understand the customs in this country. To me it seems like a very selfish, one-sided outlook. Do you believe that the man must always be the total provider, even if the woman has the money and he has not?—N.Y.

Dear N. Y.: If the friendship is new, I believe the man should certainly expect to pay the woman's way. I gather, however, that you have been seeing each other for quite some time.

Your companion is obviously aware of your financial problems. If she enjoys your company she should be willing to pay her own way. It would be considerate, also, if she cooked a meal for you now and then and purchased a pair of theatre tickets.

Aura of Corruption Produced By Quebec Construction Probe

MONTREAL (CP) — What has been the impact of the Cliche inquiry?

That is one of the biggest questions in Quebec as Premier Robert Bourassa and his Liberals approach the fifth anniversary of the April 29, 1970, election that brought them to power.

Maurice Pinard, political sociologist and expert on public opinion polls, said in an interview he feels the hearings of the inquiry into union freedoms in the no-holiest construction field were damaging to the government.

Their impact, coming on top of an investigation into organized crime and various media disclosures, has produced an "aura of corruption and maladministration."

While no election is expected for two years or more, Mr. Pinard has estimated that the separatist Parti Quebecois might give the Liberals a close run in terms of popular vote if one were held today.

Editorialists have commented extensively on the apparent Liberal decline, stirring in the light of the last provincial election in 1973 when Liberals won 102 seats in the 110-member Quebec national assembly.

The three-man Cliche royal commission was sworn in last May after a long history of union violence in the construction industry, in which province-wide bargaining was established under a law passed by the former Union Nationale government in 1968.

In a spectacular two-day riot in March last year, workers had ransacked the main LG-2 site of the $13-billion James Bay hydroelectric development, launched by Mr. Bourassa in April, 1971, as the "project of the century." It later came out that eight of 15 union stewards at LG-2 had criminal records.

Judge Robert Cliche, 53, conducted 88 days of hearings in which a picture emerged of government impotence in the face of violence and corruption on both sides of an industry whose 15,000 firms employ 100,000 workers, 70 per cent of them affiliated with the Quebec Federation of Labor.

Well-informed citizens told a reporter surveying the impact of the sometimes sensational hearings that the Cliche inquiry reflects the political and social climate of the day.

Nostalgia was apparent when some spokesmen compared the present uneasy mood with the excitement of French Quebec's Quiet Revolution under Liberal Premier Jean Lesage in the early 1960s.

"It was easier to get a consensus in those days," said one veteran commentator.

Rifts have deepened since the emergence of the separatist movement and Rene Levesque's departure from the Liberals to form the Parti Quebecois in the late 1960s.

Voters in the last election polarized largely on the independence issue between the federalist Liberals and the separatist PQ, with two other parties all but demolished.

"You have to remember that French Canada has come through an extremely difficult evolution in the last 15 years," said Charles Perrault, president of the Conseil du Patronat (Quebec Employers' Council).

"You can't put people through this kind of exercise without some problems and without encountering false prophets. Many things have caused insecurity in the population and insecurity contributes to the problems of government."

He said the Cliche hearings showed the government itself contributed to lawlessness, rather than "banging heads together" as needed in a situation in which unions and lobby groups were guilty of irresponsibility and worse.

"We are suffering from a certain lack of government leadership," Mr. Perrault said.

The Cliche commission, expected to report next month may make an "evaluation" of Bill 270, which Mr. Perrault said is unique in North America. It was an unsuccessful attempt to extend to the whole province the lessons learned in building Expo 67 in Montreal—but it gave extraordinary powers and revenue to union leaders.

Evaluating the political picture, Dr. Pinard, a McGill University professor, recalled that a public opinion poll last fall indicated the Parti Quebecois had gained on the Liberals.

He said it reflects public reaction to testimony at the hearings and "other cases such as" of the Parti Quebecois and the newspapers.

"We see something similar in Ontario—corruption or presumed corruption—and we see the Liberals ahead of the governing Conservatives for the first time in many years. Whether it is true or not doesn't matter.

"The media have a great responsibility because many people conclude corruption exists as soon as the accusation is made, whether founded or not, whether denied or not.

THE HASTINGS COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION
AUDITORS' REPORT

TO THE SUPPORTERS OF
THE HASTINGS COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION

We have examined the Revenue Fund and Capital Fund Balance Sheet of The Hastings County Board of Education as at December 31, 1974 and the Revenue Fund Statement of Revenue and Expenditure and Statement of Changes in Financial Position of Capital Funds for the year then ended. Our examination included a general review of the accounting procedures and such tests of accounting records and other supporting evidence as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

In our opinion these financial statements present fairly the financial position of the Board as at December 31, 1974 and the results of its operations and changes in financial position of its capital funds for the year then ended, in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted for Ontario School Boards applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

Inquiry Made Public Aware Of Nepotism's Quebec Rule

MONTREAL (CP) — To some authorities on Quebec's social and industrial life, part of the impact of the wide-ranging Cliche commission has been to create a public awareness of developments and situations that heretofore have been the domain of the specialists.

Leon Dion, professor of political science a Laval University in Quebec City and a trained sociologist, said the mandate of Judge Robert Cliche to study union freedoms in the province's construction industry has had considerable political implications.

"To me, nothing new came out of the Cliche commission," he said in an interview. "What is new is how the political climate has changed."

Dr. Dion said more citizens now see a "permissive" weakness in the leadership of Mr. Bourassa.

"Quebec was ruled not as a "patrimony" or property of the whole community but as though it were the private property of some persons in politics and the civil service on one side and in unions and industry on the other.

Dr. Dion said various countries are wrestlin gwith similar problems—also the federal government and the Ontario government. Why was Quebec different?

"First, it is a smaller community in which most people who are active beyond a certain level know one another or are even related to one another. Nepotism comes quickly in political and economic dealings.

Second, the crisis of values and institutions in Quebec appears to be deeper because Quebec has no imangged to get rid of old institutions, though it has to deal with complex problems associated with a post-industrial society."

Dr. Dion said Quebec developed liberal institutions and values with great speed in the Quiet Revolution of the early 1960s, notably in the education and labor fields.

But those institutions and values were vulnerable in crises and to "challenges fom the left or right."

A terrorist kidnap-murder crisis struck the Bourassa government in October, 1970, when the administration had been only six months in power. In 1972, a common front of labor unions tried to bring down the government with strikes in the public sector.

Dr. Dion said the Liberal government had become "more and more conservative and even reactionary" in contrast with the high hopes that attended Mr. Bourassa's election in 1970. At age 37, he was the youngest premier in Quebec history and the first economist to get the job.

The public had expected Mr. Bourassa to generate a "new current of emotion and enthusiasm" in the Lesage style after 10 years of rhetoric and confusion. The Liberal government of Jean Lesage is generally credited with ushering in the Quiet Revolution.

"But it is not too late," said Dr. Dion. "Because Bourassa has been concerned with images and catchy slogans, we do not really know what he may be capable of doing if he changes his policy."

Abbe Gerard Dion—not related to Dr. Dion—Laval professor of industrial relations said veteran social reformer said he is worried that demands for tougher law enforcement may reflect desire for authoritarian government.

"From all sides, you have the same cries for law and order," Abbe Dion said. "Leftists call for it. Cliche calls for it. Businessmen call for it.

"To me, it is dangerous because there seems a desire, surely coming from the people, for order, and perhaps for a strong-man government."

The priest-professor, who first came into prominence in the 1950s as a critic of the authoritarian Duplessis government, said power is found in various places in today's society.

"Dede Desjardins has power," he added, referring to a Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL) leader who resigned under fire during the Cliche hearings. "The media have power.

"We say the Liberals are strong because they have a big majority in the assembly. But they are afraid to use their power. The media would attack Bourassa if he rode roughshod over the opposition."

The questions of Cliche impact on unions themselves, on public opinion and also on the political process are matters of concern to Abbe Dion.

"The gap between union leaders and the rank and file will be increased." I'm also afraid there will be a public reaction against unions. But unions are necessary, not only for fixing wages and working conditions but for democracy."

Abbe Dion cautioned against guilt by association arising from official inquiries and searches for "scapegoats." An inquisitorial or "inculpatory" atmosphere seemed widespread in the wake of Watergate. Defenders of civil liberties were strangely silent in Quebec over the wholesale use of police wiretaps in investigations.

Another authority said Quebec seems to be developing "parallel systems" of justice—royal commissions, police commissions, fire commissioner's hearings, special coroner's hearings as well as criminal courts.

"It has an attraction for amateurs of popular justice," he commented wryly.

Abbe Dion commented that the Liberal government could hardly be accused of a political appointment in the case of Judge Cliche, former Quebec leader of the New Democratic party. As for his two colleagues, Brian Mulroney is a Progressive Conservative organizer and management lawyer while Guy Chevrette is a Parti Quebecois executive and official of the biggest Quebec teachers' union.

CP News Roundup

Industries Protest Hydro Plan

TORONTO (CP) — The Association of Direct Customers of Ontario Hydro, industrial consumers about 30 per cent of Hydro's output, Friday attacked Hydro proposed rate increases as being "out of line with economic realities and threatening the competitive position of the province's major industries."

The association said in a news release that industry is being asked to shoulder an unfair burden of an unjustified escalation in capital costs by Hydro.

Hydro Chairman Robert Taylor has proposed increases of between 31 and 37 per cent for municipalities and 29.3 per cent for large industries served directly by Hydro.

The association said that the proposed increases "threaten the profitability of some heavy users and would be a major factor in weakening their competitive position, especially those which export."

The association called for a moratorium on rate increases until a full and public inquiry can be made of Hydro's justification for the proposed increases.

Eviction Upheld

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Supreme Court of Ontario has upheld a Toronto Metropolitan council decision to evict 640 residents of Toronto Island.

However, Mr. Justice John Osler ruled Friday that the residents in 253 homes on Ward's and Algonquin Islands can remain until Aug. 31 because of the "ambiguities" in termination notices received from council.

Crops Have Lead

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Environmental Hearing Board was urged Friday by University of Toronto environmental scientists to warn residents not to eat fruit and vegetables grown within 300 metres of Toronto Refiners and Smelters Ltd. or Canada Metal Co. Ltd.

T. C. Hutchinson, a University of Toronto botany professor and researcher, later said it might be all right to eat fruit but not vegetables.

Samples of fruit near Toronto Refiners tested low in lead but lettuce and root crops had higher readings.

Must Explain

MARATHON, Ont. (CP) — Energy Minister Dennis Timbrell said Friday that Ontario Hydro must justify its proposed 29.7-per-cent rate increase with concrete reasons.

Mr. Timbrell told the Northwestern Ontario Municipal Association that Hydro must convince the energy ministry the increases are necessary before they will be allowed.

Marathon is about 170 miles east of Thunder Bay.

Denies Charge

TORONTO (CP) — A guard has told a royal commission investigating alleged guard brutality at the Toronto jail that charges that he beat prisoner Richard Gray last fall were "complete fabrication."

Joseph Pool, 35, told the commission Friday that he never had "any physical contact with any inmate."

Gray, now a prisoner at the Guelph, Ont., reformatory, told the commission Thursday that he was beaten on three occasions while at the Toronto jail.

Quebecois 'NDP'

KITCHENER, Ont. (cp) — Take away its separatist plank and the Parti Quebecois could pass for a provincial New Democratic Party or perhaps Lorne Nystrom, NDP member of Parliament for Yorkton Melville, said Friday.

Mr. Nystrom, 39, is a candidate for the federal leadership of the party.

In Ontario to gain support for his leadership bid, Mr Nystrom said in an interview that he would not want an actual affiliation with the Parti Quebecois because he is opposed to separatism, but thought the party would be a good mate for the NDP in Quebec.

Blames Red Tape

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — House prices have soared because of the Ontario government's failure to provide enough new housing, Opposition Leader Robert Nixon said Friday.

Plans for new housing are being strangled in bureaucratic red tape, Mr. Nixon said at a dinner meeting.

He said that in Toronto, the price of a new house increased by 72 per cent between 1971 and 1974, almost three times the general rate of inflation of 25 per cent.

Guard Flees

BERLIN (AP) — An East German border guard climbed over the Berlin Wall he was guarding Friday and sought asylum in West Berlin, police reported. He was identified only as a 22-year-old corporal who left his weapon behind but crossed in uniform. Police said 232 border guards have fled to West Berlin since the wall was built in 1961.

OUT OUR WAY — by Neg Cochran

Canada Said Failing To Educate Talented

BROCKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian president of the Association for Education of Gifted and Talented Children says Canada is "failing so grievously behind" other countries in education for such children.

John P. Mackenzie of Brockville, attending the annual convention of the International Council for Exceptional Children in Los Angeles this week, said Friday that the United States, England and the Soviet Union provide more for exceptional children than Canada.

Mr. Mackenzie said the U.S. government announced Thursday it will set aside $12 million for the education of gifted children.

He said the Canadian association, formed last fall, has been working with local school boards. He has found no local objection to federal assistance but there may be problems developing a relationship between the provinces, responsible for education, and Ottawa.

Mr. Mackenzie said provincial ministers are developing a positive attitude toward gifted children but most provinces still concentrate on the more traditionally handicapped.

He said it is as difficult for a bright child to slow down to the level of the class as it is for an other child to speed up. "Our more gifted kids are among those who are out in the street causing social and economic turmoil."

Sex Education Included

Wells Announces New PE Program

GENEVA PARK, Ont. (CP) — Announcing a new high school curriculum for health and physical education, Education Minister Thomas Wells said Friday that sex education has an important place in Ontario schools.

He said that health courses should emphasize family life, accepted values, stress and venereal disease.

They should also teach "an understanding of the claims made by manufacturers of health and beauty products," he said.

"Some of these components of a well-rounded health education program are often considered to be hot topics," Mr. Wells told a meeting of health instructors at an Ontario government-sponsored health education conference. "It's almost inevitable that a more mention of the term 'sex education in schools' causes many people to worry, sometimes quite vocally."

He said he was not question the sincerity of "those who feel that some of these topics should be covered at home exclusively, and not at school."

"But I feel that we have our heads in the sand if we stand back and blithely say to our schools that the schools have no role to play. To my mind there is no doubt about it."

"Most of our young people are clearly in need of more information and perspective than they are receiving at home," he said in urging sound information and perspective than they are receiving at home," he said in urging parents to talk to their teenagers about sex.

The Wells plan says teachers should exercise taste, discretion and sensitivity in the course. They also stress that parents should be advised of the general course content and the purposes of the courses.

The ministry is also allowing high school students to earn one full credit in health education and a second credit in physical education. Previously health and physical education courses were considered and students earned only one credit.

No Fortune in Lottery Distribution Is Claim

OTTAWA (CP) — Charges that the Ottawa distributor of Wintario lottery tickets will reap a $100,000 profit this year are "ridiculous," Fernand Messier, the Ottawa distributor, said Friday.

Mr. Messier was replying to charges made Thursday in the Ontario legislature by Liberal MPP Albert Roy that Mr. Messier would reap a $100,000 profit on the tickets and a similar profit on Olympic lottery tickets.

The Ottawa East MPP said he was concerned that "the real winner of Ontario will probably be the distributors, not the poor who buys a ticket," and added Mr. Messier would make seven cents on each $1 ticket sold.

But Mr. Messier says "it isn't simple or cheap."

In an interview Friday, he said he has five full-time distributors who deliver tickets and find new outlets and they get a commission of three cents a ticket.

Mr. Messier said the lottery corporation requires him to spend another half-cent a ticket on advertising, and he must also maintain a staff to operate according to the corporation's standards.

He said he expects to sell about 90,000 Ontario tickets a drawing.

Mr. Messier also is a distributor for Olympic lottery tickets for which he makes a 45-cent profit on each $10 ticket before expenses.

He added he hopes Mr. Roy is correct—that he will become rich—but that he doesn't see it happening.

Deficit in Trade Worst on Record

OTTAWA (CP) — Exports lagged $617 million behind imports during the first quarter for the worst trade deficit on record, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

A drop of 6% per cent in sales abroad in March followed by a smaller decline in February, was the main factor in widening the gap between foreign sales and purchases.

About one-third of the sharp fall in exports was in trade with the United States. Deliveries of crude oil were down and a West Coast strike cut into grain deliveries. Sales of lumber and cars and auto parts also declined.

For the first three months of the year—counting an increase in exports in January—there was a decline of almost three per cent in the value of imports in all countries. The figure does not count the effects of price inflation.

Average prices of export goods were up about 2 per cent in the first quarter, which means the drop in volume of exports was close to six per cent.

The value of imports was up slightly in the first three months of the year but Canadians were buying less and paying more. Average import prices rose about 5½ per cent during the three-month period, which meant the volume of imports was down about five per cent.

Lower Wages and Costs Are Seen as Necessary

TORONTO (CP) — Keith Rapsey, executive director of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, said Friday that Canada must lower wages and government costs to face a decrease in the dollar's value.

Commenting on Statistics Canada's announcement that exports lagged $617 million behind imports during the first quarter of this year for the worst trade deficit on record, Mr. Rapsey said the deficit was "predictable."

Canada had made itself a high-cost economy in the world market with its high wages, salaries and government expenditures.

"What else could we expect?" he said. "The situation will inevitably correct itself, but it is rather a painful process."

Patrick Lavelle, president of the Auto Parts Manufacturing Association, said Canada's deficit to the U.S. in 1974 for car parts was $2.1 billion.

Hospital Parking Draws Local Protest

A protest is lodged with the Ontario Municipal Board over rezoning necessary to permit Belleville General Hospital a new parking lot.

The protest — on the agenda for Monday night's city council meeting has been sent the city clerk's office from a householder near BGH who already has opposed the rezoning.

Roland Delanger 20 First St. insists the move is spot rezoning and methods used by BGH to acquire property in its east-ern boundary—site of the proposed parking project — are unfair to adjacent residents.

Also before council is a petition from residents on the west side of Sidney St. seeking to have street-widening plans under the city's official plan.

A resolution also calls for approval of a bylaw covering a received agreement with the Ontario Humane Society — after council two weeks ago blocked off from immediately expending its own animal control service.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1976

47 to Go?

Embarking on retirement with gusto is Arthur Savage, 65, a 4-year-employee of AOCO. Retiring as lead hand, he will take off on a trip in his camper and fish his way back, "when he feels like it." Company vice-president of operations John Blocker presented Mr. Savage with a set of Olympic coins and his first pension cheque. Other gifts came from his union, fellow night shift employees and the employees' social and service club.

Ellis Confirms OFY Grant For Eager Student Audience

Two groups of Belleville high school students received a bonus from a seminar with their local MP Friday.

They discovered their applications for federal Opportunities For Youth funding for two community programs had been approved.

The news came after Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, was questioned on OFY funds by students participating in a city community involvement education program.

As local MP, Mr. Ellis had been invited to address the group — made up of 20 students from the four Belleville secondary schools — on social issues at Hastings County school board's Education Centre on Anne St.

Fielding the questions, Mr. Ellis discovered that a number of students in the class were anxiously awaiting word from Ottawa officials on whether their OFY applications had been approved.

—Immediately after the discussion Mr. Ellis phoned his parliamentary office in Ottawa with the students' revelry, hopefully in the background for the answer.

The reply caused excited reaction: Approval of both programs had just come from the ministry.

Grants approved were $4,300 for an oral history project centred on Hastings County Museum and $2,200 for a program involving mentally handicapped youngsters.

Earlier, Mr. Ellis estimated for the students some 40-60 OFY grant applications had come from Hastings while he believed about 18 had been selected for ministerial approval by a regional advisory committee.

"I can park my truck any time I want to," if I don't get a "fair return for my time and investment," he said.

"We're looking for an exemption of the combines act," said Mr. Cole.

Mr. Cole said Hastings County Council has been paying $12.25 an hour for tandem truckers and receives a "T h a t's less than the minimum prescribed by the ministry of transportation and communications." ($16 an hour), said Mr. Cole.

Frank Pinder, county engineer, said the county committee responsible for trucking rates is not intentionally undercutting ministry rates, "that is looking to get the job done at the lowest cost to the taxpayer."

Commenting on the ministry's rates, Mr. Pinder said, "the province is a little more affluent than the county."

The hourly rate agreed upon Thursday night for a tandem axle vehicle is $17.

By load weight or size, the rate card shows 60 cents for each ton-mile and 60 cents for each yard-mile. (A yard-mile is one-cubic yard of material transported one mile.)

At present, an inquiry into the trucking business is being held in Toronto to hear briefs from 10 trucking associations across the province. Truckers are looking for more control on the number of trucking licences issued and more trucker input into minimum-prescribed fee schedules, said Mr. Cole.

He said local truckers cannot wait for the conclusion of the inquiry and that "we need more money now." He said he would prefer the rates to be even higher by the time the inquiry has made its findings.

Two work stoppages have been held by local members of the Ottawa association. These were held in Bloomfield and Marmora where truckers were asking for a rate increase that would bring them to the ministry's minimum prescribed rate.

Truckers Drop Tender System

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

About 75 independant truckers in the Belleville area will institute a standard fee schedule to go into effect that it was learned Friday.

The membership of the Belleville chapter of the Greater Ottawa Truckers Association met in Belleville on Thursday night and voted 95 per cent in favor of a fee schedule.

In the past when tenders have been called for a job, truckers would submit bids with the lowest bid getting the contract for the job.

"We're going to forget about tendering and members will submit bids based on a general rate card," said Cord Cole, president of the local chapter, during an interview with The Intelligencer.

Mr. Cole said the standard rates agreed upon by the membership Thursday are "suggested rates" and added, "if we don't get the rates, we won't be driving."

Disputes Mandatory Retirement

No one should be forced to retire from an active work life because of a mandatory age limit, Jack Ellis MP Hastings told high school students Friday.

Mr. Ellis was participating in a seminar with students from four city schools who are members of a special community involvement course.

He told one of his youthful questioners he didn't agree the mandatory retirement age should be lowered to 60 years.

However, pension programs should be scheduled to permit any workers to retire at 60 if they so decide.

He said public life would be poorer if certain figures — he mentioned John Diefenbaker and Senator Gratian O'Leary — were forced to retire at a mandatory age.

"I don't think to force anybody into retirement at a specific age is worthwhile," said Mr. Ellis. "It's probably a controversial opinion — and I'm open to argument," he added.

Museum Education Week Drawing Card

Over 1,000 Quinte area elementary school students visited Hastings County Museum this week as the museum conducted its education week activities.

In making that estimate Marion Lewis, museum curator, adds with the addition of other visitors the final total would probably reach about 1,300.

Highlight of the week was the five-day visit by the Royal Ontario Museum's mesmerizing mobile which featured exhibits and information on the history of man in the province during the past 12,000 years.

"This (the visit) is a preliminary to a full-fledged archeological history program in the school," notes Mr. Lewis " using students to do supervised archeological work."

He points out there are some sites in Hastings County which have not been examined by archeologists. If the plans materialize, the Royal Ontario Museum will assist, he adds.

Mr. Lewis says the "surprise might begin in autumn "if they can get themselves (county board of education) ready that soon. It will be a functioning part of the history program."

The museum mobile's visit was initiated by Mr. Lewis in conjunction with Lloyd Jones, history coordinator for the board.

The most intensive visit by any school during the past week came from St. Peter's in Trenton. It involved entire morning sessions, not merely one or two and a half hour tours, says Mr. Lewis.

"The museum would prefer a much more intensive visit," he comments. "We'd like to have much more of this."

However, he admits such a regular program would require paid instructors and funds for such are not readily available.

Class visits to the museum are free of charge to student's, explains Mr. Lewis. Both the Hastings and Prince Edward County Separate School Board and Hastings County Board of Education contribute 15 cents per pupil annually.

Meetings Of the Week

Open public and civic meetings during the Week April 27 to May 3 of which The Intelligencer has been notified are:

MONDAY

Regular meeting of Belleville City Council in the council chambers at city hall at 6 p.m.

Regular meeting of Hastings County Board of Education in the education centre on Ann St. at 7:30 p.m.

TUESDAY

Monthly meeting of the LaAcalist College Board of Governors in Alnwick at Mother's Restaurant at 8:30 p.m.

Peter Fleming, Canada Manpower placement officer scrutinizes what hopefully will become summer job posters. They're posters being harvested in high schools' contest to prompt thinking about student work opportunities.

Student Poster Contest Boosts Summer Employment

There's a new idea in progress to promote student summer employment through Hastings County.

It's a poster contest — involving the seven secondary schools in the county and sponsored by the Belleville and District Employment Committee.

Already, the demand for jobs is building, Peter Fleming, Canada Manpower's student placement officer in Belleville, reports about 500 applications already on file for summer work. Applications range from university age groups down to grade 8.

Objective of the poster contest is to stimulate students to think early about summer jobs while creating their own advertising through the area.

Winners will be selected from each school. But all the posters produced will be circulated through the area — displayed in stores and public places—to promote the need for providing summer work for young people.

So far, students in the Madoc-Bancroft area have produced almost 40 posters, says Mr. Fleming.

The contest closes at the month's end for the five high schools in the city area.

Winners so far are Calvin Dobson, Mike Moynes, Karen Cannon and Debbie North Hastings Secondary School, Bancroft, and Debbie Wigens and David Vance, of Centre Hastings Secondary School, Madoc.

Chamber Members Meet

Belleville Chamber of Commerce will hold its annual new members luncheon at the Shrine Club May 20.

Cocktails will begin at noon with the dinner scheduled to start at 12:30 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Peter E. Hunt, operations vice-president for the Great Lakes region of Canadian National Railway.

Education Beat

School Visit Could Be Shock

By RON CARON
Staff Reporter

For those who took the minister of education's advice this week and visited schools to form your own impressions of the system you are probably just as confused and more likely to believe the popular criticism of the day.

To send inexperienced parents into the mysterious world of the classroom is an unnerving and shocking treatment for the minister of education to prescribe, Thomas Wells would have done better to distribute a handbook explaining the rationale behind the activities they would observe in the classroom and around the school.

The biggest shock for most parents would come when they witnessed a majority of students having fun and enjoying themselves — a direct contrast to their school days when the classroom was a form of torture.

Most Canadian parents still believe in the Protestant work ethic which losely interpreted reads "in order to achieve in this world you must stand alone and suffer for your rewards." Mix this with a touch of Calvinism and little bit of the Great Depression and you've got parents who believe their children should not be having fun while learning their three Rs.

Parents are first suspicious when their children come home from school late only to find a detention was not the cause. Upon inquiry they discover the child had been stimulated to go beyond the classroom work and spend some extra time in the library or gymnasium.

Since it is unlikely the ministry will produce a handbook for parents there are a few simple steps principals and teachers could take to reduce the shock experienced by parents during their first visit to the school.

One way would be for the teachers to simply project an image in a classroom that the parents would like to see their children seated in hi or her nailed-down desk, no one talking except the teacher, books open to the third chapter of a speller and children expressing a little emotion as possible.

But a better way would be for the schools to begin a planned and well thought out series of parent education programs designed to help them understand what is taking place in the classrooms today, as well as their own educational backgrounds.

Forget the open house and set up regular meetings to give parents as much real information as possible. Organize discussion groups involving parents, teachers and students to iron what it is that everyone is trying to do.

If teachers and educators are going to succeed with new approaches to learning they are also going to have to spend more time in re-educating the parents who are also the taxpayers. They are ready to understand the new ways of the classroom but first they need to understand the way in which THEY were educated.

Hospital Appointments Held Up

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

The Belleville General Hospital board of governors has effectively blocked the appointment of three new staffers to the BGH medical staff for four weeks by asking its medical advisory committee to reassess its recommendations.

In a 10-5 vote, the board Friday amended a motion which had called for approval of seven appointments to the associate staff, including the three internists.

An internist is a doctor studying for a fellowship to specialize in internal medicine.

Dr. John Stock, board member, pointed out the internists, who would complete their terms of study in the middle of this year, would not take the initial examinations for their fellowships until November.

He said the board could have a potentially dangerous situation in which if an internist left, the hospital would have an unqualified person on its associate staff.

Mr. Bruce Morgan, another board member, added if an associate staff internist fails, then the board would have to tell him he has to be relegated after he has accumulated patients and responsibilities.

Dr. D.A. MacIntosh argued lack of approval "could be a deterrent" to attracting qualified medical people to the city.

Following the lunch it was learned Dr. Reg Anderson, medical director, said if the board maintains its position next month, it will mean in effect these internists will be out of work until their examinations results are known.

He said he could not understand the board's position, because there are other hospitals which appoint final-year internists to associate staff status before examinations are taken.

Lotteries Have Supporters...and Detractors

Whether it's for a church quilt or a million dollars, a lottery is a lottery and that's gambling.

The other side of the coin is that lottery funds are often applied to benevolent works in the community — taking away the stigma of gambling and replacing it with a work of charity fund-raising.

In recent years, lotteries have become commonplace fund raising vehicles used by service clubs and government bodies alike.

Probably the most notable lottery to emerge has been the federal government's Olympic Lottery sporting $1 million in first prize money.

Called on to the lottery bandwagon, the government of Ontario has instituted the "Winlaria" draw — a lottery that has taken off in wider proportions than expected with sales already in short supply. Top prize is $100,000.

But even as the crowds rush to the seller, there's still a few around who don't believe in lotteries and a few who say it's just plain gambling and that's all there is to it.

JOHN ROBINSON

"I don't buy them . . . particularly the Olympic Lottery tickets," said John Robinson, a resident of 129 Victoria Ave. "You're just throwing your money away when you do."

"The odds are too great against you and after all, it is a form of gambling," said Mr. Robinson. "There are a lot better places to spend the money."

CYNDI GORSLINE

"I don't think I'll ever win but it's a lot of fun hoping," said Prince Edward Collegiate student Cyndi Gorsline.

"A graduate of Grade 12, she says the only draw she buys tickets for is the Olympic Lottery. "It's worth the $10 for the ticket just to have the fun of waiting."

JEAN DeGAUST

Jean DeGaust says she buys lottery tickets all the time and says the appeal is the "excitement of waiting to see if I win. It's just the chance of winning that's the fun part."

"They're entertaining," she said. "If I won the million dollars I'd retire."

WILLIAM GIBSON

"People have forgotten how to work and they're spending money on gambling," said Guelph resident William Gibson. "An honest day's work is the best way to make money."

"Nobody ever really won money on a chance," he said. "I knew a fellow once who won several thousand dollars and three years later had nothing to show for it and not a penny left."

CLAIRE GILLESPIE

"If the lottery is for a good cause, I'm all for it," said Mrs. Claire Gillespie, a resident of Union St.

"If I know the people selling the tickets I buy one. As far as I'm concerned the money I spend on Olympic Lottery tickets is worth it in excitement of waiting.

BERNARD MEAGHER

"I've never won but I buy every lottery ticket going," said Bernard Meagher.

"It's a good way for clubs and organizations to raise money," he said. "A lot of good works are completed with money raised by the Yardmen ticket draw."

Snow Goose Visits Here

GOOSE GUEST

A Great Snow Goose, born and bred on Canadian Arctic tundra or northern Greenland, whose summer home is off shoals islands of Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina, was grounded in Belleville for a prolonged stay.

The obscure visitor arrived last weekend at George Ketcheson's sanctuary on the eastern outskirts of the city and appears quite content to move in with the resident Canada geese.

In learned tests the goose is described as being "stockily a bird of the Atlantic coast." What this individual is doing in central Ontario is its own business, but the food, company and nearby ponds appear to be satisfactory.

Houston Stops Andre Lacroix And Takes 4-0 Win in Opener

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Houston Aeros think they've finally found a way to shut off high-scoring San Diego centre Andre Lacroix.

The trick is to smother the wingers on either side of him.

It worked to perfection yesterday night. Lacroix, the World Hockey Association's leading scorer, was shut out along with the rest of the San Diego Mariners and the Aeros went on to win 4-0 in the first game of their best-of-seven semi-final playoff series. The teams play here again Sunday night, then travel to Houston for three games.

Quebec Nordiques and Minnesota Fighting Saints meet tonight in the third game of their semi-final series which is tied 1-1.

The Aeros, defending WHA champions, had to figure out something to stop Lacroix and the Mariners who had beaten Houston in five of six regular season games.

"We had been double-teaming Lacroix all season," said Aeros coach Bill Dineen. "But tonight we played him one-on-one and kept everyone on his line covered."

Both teams had 35 shots on goal, but Aeros goalie Ron Grahame had an easier time of it, thanks to Houston's stifling defence.

Mariners player-coach Harry Howell said he's not worried yet, however.

"Houston played a brilliant game," he said. "That was some back from bad games before."

Andre Hinze scored the first—and winning—goal for the Aeros. Houston then scored twice in over a minute in the second period on assists by Murray Hall and Terry Ruskowski.

Hall suffered a gash in his forehead in the first period that needed 15 stitches, but he could still play.

Gordon Labossiere added the final goal for Houston.

Fincups Square Final

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Fincups took an early two-goal lead, increased it to four goals in the second period, then held on to edge Toronto Marlboros 5-4 Friday in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A playoff action.

The eight-point final series is tied 4-4.

The fifth game is in Toronto Sunday and the sixth is scheduled for Hamilton Tuesday.

Rick Selling turned in his second two-goal performance in consecutive games to pace the win. One of his goals was scored while the Fincups were shorthanded.

Tony Horvath, Mike Keating and Archie King scored the other Hamilton goals before a crowd of 3,707.

John Sneke, John Anderson, Mike McEwen and Ron Wilson scored for the Marlboros who trailed 3-1 in the first and 4-3 after two.

The Fincups were never behind after Horvath opened the scoring at 4:31 of the first period and Selling scored four made it 2-0 only 47 seconds later.

Sneke put the Marlboros on the scoreboard with 33 seconds left in the opening period.

Keating put Hamilton two goals up and Selling's second goal increased the lead to 4-1 after Anderson and Wilson replied for Toronto late in the second period.

Flyers Win 8-4

King and McEwen each scored power-play goals in the third.

The Fincups, who outshot Toronto 35-27, were assessed eight of 14 minor penalties.

Doctors Busy As Series Opens

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Barrie Flyers defeated St. John's Capitals 8-4 Friday in a rough-and-tumble first game of the Eastern Canada Allan Cup hockey final.

The game, which took three hours and 17 minutes to play, was laced with 40 penalties—35 minutes to each side—including 27 minors, 12 majors and one match penalty.

The evening started out peacably enough, with Mayor Dorothy Wyatt of St. John's planting kisses on the foreheads of the team captains.

But within 14 minutes of hockey, the mayor's husband, Dr. Don Wyatt, rushed onto the ice along with two other doctors to nurse the injured in a bench-clearing brawl that saw two players—Bob Lambert of St John's and Phil Branston of Barrie—carried bleeding off the ice.

Kent Runke scored five of the Flyer's eight goals and assisted on another. Bob Baird, with two, and Paul Regan also scored for Barrie.

Doug Stalker of St. John's opened the scoring at 2:22 of the first period to give the Caps a short-lived lead. Glen Crisp, Charlie Babstock and Randy Pearcey also scored for St. John's.

Tolis Chapman turned in a weak performance in the St. John's net. Do did better offensively—he was credited with the assists on the goals by Crisp and Pearcey. Chapman faced only 31 shots on goal compared to 39 by Grant Cole of Barrie.

The second game of the best-of-five series will be played in St. John's tonight and the third will be played Sunday. Further games will be played Monday and Tuesday if necessary.

The winner will meet the Western Canada winner in the Allan Cup final.

Indians Move In Front

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Dale Rogers scored one goal and assisted on two others Friday night to lead Springfield Indians to a 5-2 win over Rochester Americans in an American Hockey League game.

The win gives Springfield a 3-2 edge in the best-of-seven semi-final series.

Jean-Guy Lemieux, Dennis Ahgrail, Jimmy Peters and Paul Shaka were the other Springfield scorers. Doug Gibson and Rick Pagnutti had Rochester goals.

Peters scored in the fourth minute of the third period and Lewis in the fifth for the Kings as they broke a 2-2 tie after blowing a 3-0 first-period lead.

Springfield goalie Rick Charron had 29 stops while Rochester's Dave Reece had 28 saves.

OHA Meeting

Six Returned To Executive

TORONTO (CP) — The top six officials of the Ontario Hockey Association were acclaimed for a second term prior to the association's annual meeting today.

Returning to the OHA executive are: Cliffe Phillips, New market, president; Hugh McLean, London, first vice-president; Larry Bellafie, Pembroke; Bob Potts, Fort Erie, third vice-president; and Frank Buckland, Peterborough, treasurer.

Frank Doherty of Thorold is the association's immediate past president.

The association's membership will vote in six other directors to serve on the executive body.

Seeking re-election as directors will b Pat Doherty, Kitchener; Tom Pitsimmons, Shelburne; Jim Kilgour, Donald Lowe, Barrie; Bob Mackinnon, Oakville; William Paddock, Toronto; Wally Scott, Hanover; Tom Shepard, Walkerton, and Jim Short, Barrie.

One of the most controversial of amendments to be voted on at the meeting will be the one presented by North York Rangers of the OHA Metro Toronto Junior B league.

Junior B teams will be seeking the right to guarantee their own continual operation through the passing of a rancbise agreement, similar to those in the OHA Major Junior A and Tier II series.

Delegates will also be asked to approve the recommendation made by the executive to present a new trophy in the Major Junior A series.

The William (Bill) Ranley Trophy, named after the series' former secretary manager who retired this year, will go the player best combining outstanding and gentlemanly play.

Also up for approval is an increase in pay to the association's officials.

REPRESENT CANADA

MONTREAL (CP) — A group of 21 Canadian athletes and coaches will leave Monday for the 10th Hapoel Games scheduled for Tel Aviv May 1-8, marking the first time Canada has sent representatives to the international competition. Canada will be represented in three sports—gymnastics, track and field, and table tennis.

Nystrom—No Hunting Luck

It Boils Down To One Game

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

New York Islanders and Pittsburgh Penguins are tied at three games each, and now both are looking for some of the luck Islanders goalie Glenn Resch had in the sixth game of their series.

The teams meet tonight at Pittsburgh in the deciding game of their National Hockey League best-of-seven quarter-final with the winner advancing to a semi-final against the Flyers in Philadelphia starting Tuesday.

The other semi-final opens Sunday with Montreal Canadiens visiting Buffalo Sabres in an opening game that will be televised nationally by the CBC at 2:30 p.m. EDT.

If Resch's new-found love, the goalpost which saved him Thursday night in a 4-1 win, helps him as much in the final game, the Penguins could be in trouble.

"After she slopped Ron Schock's shot in the first period I kissed her right through the hole in my mask," Resch said of his goalpost. "After all, she is my best friend. Right now, we get along as well as me and my wife."

Schock's shot hit the post and went across the crease harmlessly; an earlier one by Lowell MacDonald hit the post squarely and Pierre Larouche banged one alongside it in the third period.

Resch, a rookie, says he's feeling the pressure of the playoffs, but he doesn't mind.

"I just decided to let the pressure flow and not fight it," he said. "It put myself pit nervous because if you fight it, you distract yourself from the game. We have to think about the hockey."

Meanwhile, Pittsburgh goalie Gary Inness has been making some of the Islanders nervous—especially winger Bob Nystrom who led the Islanders during the season with 27 goals but hasn't scored in nine playoff games.

"I've been having nightmares about that mask just staring at me there," Nystrom said of the masked Penguins goalie. "I just think about it all the time, how many times he's made on me.

"But, way back, a lot of these days I've got to get a break and get a goal, hopefully the winner Saturday."

Meanwhile, the Canadiens go into Buffalo with much the same problem as they had in 1971—that of trying to nullify their opposition's star player.

In 1971, when Montreal met then defending Stanley Cup champion Boston Bruins, they were worried about Boston Bobby Orr. But goalie Ken Dryden, then a rookie, was the star who stopped the Bruins in the quarter-final and the Canadiens went on to win the cup.

This time, Montreal is worried about Buffalo's Gilbert Perreault, a high-scoring centre finished by high-scoring wingers Rene Robert and Rick Martin.

Montreal defenceman Serge Savard said the only thing to do is "put a man on him (Perreault) all the time. Just like we try to do with Bobby Orr."

Fellow defenceman Guy Lapointe agreed with Savard: "Like Serge says, the man layed against him has to stay close to him. In other words, force their defencemen to carry the puck—they want Perreault to do it—but if you stay close, he can't."

Geiberger Owns the Lead

Course Puzzles Nicklaus

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus surveyed his position a distant eight shots back of leading Al Geiberger and complained about the golf course.

"This is a strange course, very strange," said Nicklaus.

"When you've got it going, you tend to keep it going. When you're not quite there, it can be the toughest course in the world."

And Geiberger has it going nicely at the $300,000 Tournament of Champions.

He's put together a pair of 67s, based scored a bogey, has matched the course record for 36 holes at 10-under-par 134 and owns a three-shot lead halfway through this elite event that brings together only the winners of regular pro golf tour events from the last 12 months.

Nicklaus, on the other hand, isn't quite there. And the 6,835-yard La Costa Country Club course, with its deep, clinging rough and gusty breezes, is playing tough for the five-time Masters champion.

"I just wasn't very good," Nicklaus said after a second-round 72 and a 142 total. "Nothing wrong. I feel I'm not far from playing a good round, but it hasn't happened yet."

Lee Trevino, however, suddenly put it all together.

"I'm really playing good right now, and I just started putting good last week," said Trevino, who had his best round of the season, a 63 that gave him a 137 total and second place alone going into today's third round.

First-round leader Jim Colbert made a double bogey on his final hole for a 73 that sent him skidding back to third at 138. He was followed by J.C. Snead, 68-140, and Gene Littler, 75-141, with Nicklaus and South African Gary Player at 142. Player the current Bristol Open king, had a second-round 78.

Johnny Miller, the defending champion here had only six pars in the field behind him after a 75-142.

Geiberger took the lead with a string of five birdies in seven holes Friday. He missed only one green, the 16th, and chipped to six feet to save par there. He's the only man in the field who went through two rounds without a bogey.

Nicklaus—Not Very Good

Controversy Raging

Does Foyt Cheat?

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A top Indianapolis 500-mile auto race mechanic has accused three-time Indy 500 winner A.J. Foyt of cheating by using extra fuel in a hidden tank.

George Bignotti, chief mechanic last year for 1973 winner Gordon Johncock, said Friday in an interview with radio station WFOC in Baltimore that some racing teams are considering pulling out of the Indy 500 because of Foyt.

According to WFOC, Foyt decided that he had cheated in any race.

"I think there should be more field inspections of car engines at Indy," Bignotti said. "It's well known that Foyt has been cheating all along, and some teams are upset because no action has ever been taken."

Bignotti said Foyt ran with an extra tank that gave him a total of 45 gallons of fuel at the Ontario 500 in January.

"If he can run with 45 gallons, then my cars should be able to run with 45 gallons," Bignotti said.

U.S. Auto Club championship cars are limited to 40 gallons.

Foyt said Bignotti's cars were using more fuel than his between Bignotti and Foyt at higher revolutions per minute.

"I turn 9,000 rpms and he turns 7,200 more," Foyt said. "That's why he uses a hell of a lot more fuel."

Bignotti also accused Foyt of using an illegal fuel during qualifications for the Indy 500.

"He uses extra trailer-mounted engines when he qualifies and then switches to alcohol in the pits, that's why he always was the pole," Bignotti said.

Bignotti said Foyt ran the fuel from a fire extinguisher hidden in his car.

Foyt denied tha his used illegal fuel.

"Something I've never done in my life, put another man's race car," Foyt said.

Bignotti said he would consider filing a formal protest with USAC officials after the 207-lap 500 on May 25.

USAC officials were unavailable for comment on the controversy.

The Series of '42

Plenty of talk about the 1942 Stanley Cup final these days as Al Arbour's New York Islanders show definite signs of emerging as the second team in National Hockey League history to take a best of seven series after dropping the first three games.

Of course, the Stanley Cup is not on the line in this New York - Pittsburgh Penguins' playoff. But when Islanders take the ice in Pittsburgh tonight, they will be aiming for a place in the record book. Arbour's ability to inspire his troops to bang it after starting elimination in the face is quite admirable, to say the least.

The 1942 series?

That was a dandy.

Detroit Red Wings, fifth-place finishers during the regular season, met Toronto Maple Leafs in the Cup Final. Leafs were three points back of first place New Rangers on the season.

Wings astounded everyone by taking the first two games of the final by scores of 3-2 and 4-3, right in Maple Leaf Gardens. And when the Detroit club took Game 3 on its home ice, 5-2, it appeared to be all over but the shouting.

But the Hap Day coached Leafs were not dead.

In Game 4, the Toronto club got goals from Bob Davidson, Lorne Carr, Syl Apps and Nick Metz to score a come from behind 4-3 win and hang on.

Returning to Toronto for fifth game, Leafs really came to life and with the Metz brothers, Don and Nick, and team captain Apps leading the way, crushed the Wings 9-3.

It was goalie Walter (Turk) Broda's turn to shine in Game 6. Rated one of the top money players of all time, the Toronto star blanked Wings on their home ice, 3-0, and it was 3-3 in games.

Regular viewers of today's version of the game will easily recognize one of the names in the scoring summary from that 1942 series. Bob Goldham shot one of the Leaf goals with the others going to Billy Taylor and Don Metz.

Leafs completed the amazing comeback in front of their own fans, taking the seventh and final game 3-1. Sweeney Schriner scored two goals while rookie Pete Langelle firing the winner.

Three years later, Wings very nearly repaid the compliment.

Frank McCool put his name in the record book by blanking Wings in the first three games of the final in 1945 as Toronto roared to a 3-0 lead in games by scores of 1-0, 2-0 and 1-0.

But history did not repeat itself.

Toronto won the seventh game, 3-1.

So much for nostalgia.

Can Islanders duplicate the feat of the 1942 Leafs?

SYL APPS JR.

Perhaps Syl Apps will have something to say about that.

Son of the captain of those great Leaf teams of the 1940s, Apps, Jr. has the ability to skate Pittsburgh back on track and make it close but not quite for Islanders.

At any rate, it should be interesting.

Marks Return to SHBL

Accent on Youth in Foxboro

After an absence of about 10 years, Foxboro is back in the South Hastings Baseball League (SHBL).

Since the club has received financial assistance from 18 businesses, it will be called Foxboro Merchants.

Club manager, Carm Dafoe, an SHBL regular himself during his playing days (Camilton, 1944-54), later coached the Foxboro team.

It and coach Jerry Masterson will be teamed up last year to guide Thurlow's Eastern Ontario Baseball Association Midget entry to a successful season, are busy lining up a solid squad for the SHBL competition.

And the accent is on youth.

"It looks like the oldest player in the team will be 20," offered coach Masterson, Wednesday night.

Many of the players on the team being formed by Dafoe and Masterson have had plenty of experience in the minor baseball ranks.

Some were with Thurlow teams which went to Ontario Baseball Association finals in peewee and bantam competition, a few years back.

Four players signed Wednesday, John Masterson, Dale Tunnman, Ron McTaggart and Don McTaggart, impressed Detroit Tigers' officials enough in 1973 to be invited to a training camp at Niagara Falls, New York.

Merchants will play their home games at Foxboro's Waller Park. The team is expected to have a first league start, May 17, with Capitals supplying the opposition.

Other teams in the eight-team league are Latta, Melrose, Shannonville, Reserve, Read and another team returning after a long absence, Deseronto.

Co-sponsors of the Foxboro team are Chilvers Meats, Ken Cassidy Electric, Stewart Signs, Foxboro Fabrics, Morris Esso, Chisholm Realty, Hopkins Wreckers, Electric Motor Sales, Bev Foster Realty, Sullivan's Auctioneering, Foxboro Cheese Factory, Harold Elliott, Vader Construction, Rollins Lumber, A and B Precast, and Hallins Shell.

Left to right are John Masterson, Dale Tummon, Ron McTaggart and Don McTaggart, Foxboro is back in the league after an absence of about 10 years. Dafoe, a member of the Camilton team during his playing days, is a former Foxboro coach. Sixteen businesses are supplying financial backing for the team, the club hopes will attract local youth. It is expected the oldest player on the roster will be 20 years of age.

The home team led 1-0 after one period and it was 3-1 for Mitchell heading for the third. Lions held a 3-1 edge in scoring in the final frame.

Hotsbock led the way with a top effort. While supplying most of the team's firepower, he had a hand in all the winners' scoring. Hotsbock an assist to go with his four goals.

Jamie Herman was the other marksman for Mitchell.

Brian Rozabeck notched his 5th goal in 17 playoff games for Brighton. Goaltender Victor Grier crew an assist on the play. Steven Thompson accounted for the other Brighton goal.

HOCKEY TIPS

By BOBBY ORR

Copyright 1975, Toronto Sun Syndicate

TIME TO FORGET THE GAME BUT NOT YOUR PHYSICAL CONDITION

The hockey season is over for some year. Some youngsters will attend sports camps this summer where they will likely find hockey as part of the agenda.

Whether it's by attending sports camps or just simply spending a summer at home, an effort should be made to forget the game. After all, the hockey season does span from Sep-tember to May.

But never ever forget to keep yourself in shape because before you know it, September will come along and it will be time to start thinking about hockey again.

Should you be one of the many attending sports camps, make use of the ice time you'll get by improving your skating. And, be it at sports camp or at home, participate in sports such as tennis, volleyball and soccer to keep yourself in shape. Perhaps you'll become one of the growing crowd of joggers or you might even consider working on a weight program.

An excellent and inexpensive way to retain your form is to lay out an exercise program at home: Push-ups, sit-ups, running on the spot, squeezing a rubber ball (to increase strength in the wrists) and touching your toes can all be done each morning and night.

Don't forget to watch your diet because if you don't, you will quickly see a lot of unwanted pounds.

Keeping in shape is a serious business whether you are a hockey player or not.

Have a good summer.

A Switch for Manny

Sanguillen Makes The Waiting Game Pay

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Manny Sanguillen promised he wouldn't swing at any more bad pitches.

"We have too many good hitters in our lineup for me to keep chasing bad pitches," says Pittsburgh Pirates' swinging switch-hitter. "I'm going to be swing at bad pitches anymore. I'm going to wait for my pitch."

The Pirate catcher was as good as his word Friday night. He waited for his pitch and when he didn't see anything he liked, he walked. When he did see something he liked, he hit a home run in the seventh inning with a man on base and provided Bruce Kison with the margin he needed to beat Steve Carlton and Philadelphia Phillies 3-2.

"When I first started playing baseball I swung at every pitch—every bat, every dirt," said Sanguillen. "But I'm a smarter ball player now and I'm going to wait."

In Friday's other National League games, Houston Astros beat Cincinnati Reds 6-4, San Diego Padres defeated Atlanta Braves 5-3, New York Mets beat Montreal Expos 5-3, Chicago Cubs defeated St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 and Los Angeles Dodgers beat San Francisco Giants 6-5.

Sanguillen's homer backed the combined eight-hit pitching of Kison and Dave Giusti. The score was tied 1-1 going into the Pirate seventh when Richie Zisk reached base on an error by Philadelphia second baseman Dave Cash. Sanguillen followed with his home run off losing pitcher Carlton.

Pat Darcy's bath sent Cesar Cedeno in to score and started a three-run sixth inning that helped Houston beat Cincinnati. The game was scoreless when Cedeno doubled to open the inning against Darcy. After moving to third, Darcy balked in one run before Doug Rader singled in a second run. The Astros added a 3-0 at Larry Dierker's fielder's choice grounder.

Tommy Siebert pitched seven strong innings and doubled home a run as San Diego defeated Atlanta to protect its National League Western Division lead. The Padres put together five straight hits off loser Buzz Capra, 5-2, for the fourth inning and enough for three runs to break a 1-1 tie. Fred Kendall doubled home two of the runs and Siebert doubled home the other.

New York made the most of only three hits, including two scoring singles by Rusty Staub and Ed Kranepool, and beat Montreal behind the combined nine-hit pitching of Joe Matlack and Rick Baldwin. The victory was the fifth in a row for the Mets, who capitalized for two scoring innings on the wildness of Steve Rogers, 0-3. Rogers was making his first appearance since April 13.

Steve Swisher's run-scoring single off St. Louis relief ace Al Hrabosky in the eighth inning lifted Chicago over the Cardinals.

Los Angeles pitcher Andy Messersmith, who raked San Francisco 10 leads with his wildness before hitting a double in the sixth inning and scoring the go-ahead run, was ejected as well as Giants' manager Charlie Fox.

Messersmith, 3-4, walked four batters over the first four innings and the Dodgers trailed 4-1 before Rick Auerbach singled to start a one-out rally in the sixth. Messersmith drove in a run with his second double of the night and scored on Dave Lopes' single.

Messersmith later hit his third double in the eighth inning, a modern record for a pitcher, and scored the Dodgers' sixth and eventual winning run with the help of a Giant error.

Bruce Edwards Dead at 51

THE UNEXPLAINED

by Allen Spraggett

The Ghost-hunting Priest

The Rev. Canon William Rauscher is an ecclesiastical ghost-hunter.

Other clergymen have sane, sensible hobbies — like collecting Indian arrowheads, doing needlepoint, or building model airplanes. But Canon Rauscher — he hunts ghosts.

The Episcopal priest, rector of Christ Church, in Woodbury, N.J., reveals his personal forays into the murky, mystical world of the unexplained in a new book, The Spiritual Frontier (published by Doubleday).

He describes his experiences with possession and exorcism ("yes," he says, "some people can be possessed by someone or something outside themselves but most of the time they're just nuts, crazy, in need of psychiatric care")

... haunted houses ... faith-healing ... and messages from the dead.

Does Canon Rauscher think that communication with the dead is possible; and if so, is it nice? In other words, is it the sort of thing Christians ought to be doing?

The priestly ghost-hunter says yes to both questions. Communication with the dead is possible ("this is what the traditional church teaching of the communion of saints, living and dead, suggests," he says) and though there are dangers in it (mainly the danger of being suckered in by a medium who's a fake) Canon Rauscher believes that such experiences can strengthen and enrich Christian faith.

He describes a meaningful and convincing communication he received from the dead...

"In 1961, shortly after I became rector of my present parish, the famed medium, Arthur Ford, whom I knew well, gave me a message that purported to come from the Rev. Paul Matthews, a deceased former bishop of New Jersey.

"The bishop said that he knew my predecessor at the parish, Canon Robert Williams, and was happy that I had succeeded so fine a priest. The bishop added, 'Bobby has my cross.'

"Bobby I took to mean Canon Williams. Well, a while later, after the canon's death, his wife said to me, 'Bill, I want you to have Bobby's cross.'

"When for some reason she added, 'He always wore it. Bishop Matthews gave it to him, you know.'

"I confess that my breath caught for an instant. How, I asked myself, could the medium Arthur Ford, or anybody else, have known so personal a fact about the canon? My answer is that such information most probably came from the one who knew — the dead bishop who had given him the cross."

Psychic experience, says Canon Rauscher, takes much of the guess-work out of faith. It puts belief in an afterlife much more on the basis of fact than faith.

He described to me how he once experienced death for himself, a sort of mini-death, and how life-changing an experience it was.

"It was back in my seminary days," Canon Rauscher said, "I had been visiting a friend, an elder man, who was dying and as I tried to sleep my thoughts were heavy. Finally I did doze off.

"Suddenly I was looking down at myself.

"Crazy? Yes, but true. I was looking at myself on the bed below. My chest was rhythmically rising and falling. I was enjoying myself sleep. It was uncanny but not frightening.

"Somehow, I knew, I was outside my body — alive, conscious, and feeling light as a feather.

Canon Rauscher said he passed through the wall of the room as easily as a thought would and was outside in the clear winter's night feeling so cold yet seeing the quivering stars more clearly than he ever had before.

"In those moments," he said, "I understood that there is an ineffable, perfect plan that contains all that was, is, and is to be, and I was part of that plan."

Suddenly, like a rubber band snapping, Canon Rauscher found himself back in his physical body, sitting up in bed, pondering his marvellous experience.

"It had not been a dream," he says emphatically. "It was too lucid, too utterly real for that. There was nothing in the least dreamlike about it.

"No, I believe that in those moments I had an out-of-the-body experience, as thousands of other people have, and I discovered for myself that human personality transcends the limits of the physical body and thus goes beyond death.

"This is not merely faith for me now," says the priestly psychic researcher, "but fact."

Peterborough Doctor Runs Buffalo Ranch

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — While Dr. Willoughby Belch puts in a busy day in his surgery, he often reflects on the empire he is building at home where the buffalo roam.

In his spare hours, Dr. Belch works on his 200-acre ranch where he has visions of building up a large buffalo population for gourmet dining.

Dr. Belch, 47, says he likes to work around machinery and "get out in the fresh air."

"I have a busy medical practice and when I leave the buffalo, I used to come home and lie down, I'd be so tired. Now, I come home and get into my old clothes and get working.

"It helps me unwind and I feel a lot better."

Dr. Belch's ranch, which has about 60 head, is the largest privately-owned buffalo ranch in Canada.

He got into the business in 1968, a year after the federal government allowed private citizens to own and sell buffalo.

He said he first tasted buffalo about 30 years ago in Montreal.

"I thought it was so good, it should be available to buy.

"I have this vision. There's going to be a great demand for buffalo when people find out how good it is."

At a sale on the ranch last month, buffalo roasts sold for $2 a pound, round steak $2.25 a pound and hamburger $5 for four pounds.

"Buffalo meat is a gourmet food—it's not something you'd have all the time," Dr. Belch said. "People buy it because it has a little more flavor than beef.

"It also contains 25 per cent more protein and is low in cholesterol."

Buffalo is a staple meat for the Belch family. Mrs. Belch uses buffalo in a variety of dinner menus—steaks, roasts, hamburgers, meatballs, spaghetti sauce, lasagna and soup.

Dr. Belch said he has a healthy respect for his herd.

"Buffalo have been known to kill grizzly bears so it's dangerous for people to drive in and wander around by the fences."

The bay holes are brought into the corral by hand—a task that requires care.

Sunday and Monday Horoscopes

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Sunday, April 27

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll be lucky in dealings with prestigious or influential people. They'll take a serious interest in your present activities.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You will gain something of material value through an unusual channel. It could be the result of a forgotten kindness you did in the past.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Agreements you enter into today will prove to be beneficial for all parties. They will also be of a lasting nature.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Conditions having a favorable effect on your work or career are shaping up. Be alert for opportunities that may come through people you'll meet.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Members of both sexes will find you pleasant company today. They'll want to share in the limelight you occupy when going around others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A business matter with family overtones that has been difficult to resolve will be concluded in a surprising, profitable manner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) A situation is going to arise where you'll profit from your position as a mediator.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The next few days larger profits than usual can be made through your business dealings. You must be alert and alive to gain the advantage.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't turn down any invitations at this time. You're likely to make some very important social contacts in places you'd least expect to.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There is some action taking place that involves you, though you're not aware of it. When results are known, they'll prove quite beneficial.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're in your element if participating in some form of group activity. A good day to champion worthwhile causes.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) The next few days substantial, profitable progress can be made in your world or career. Make this your No. 1 priority.

Monday, April 28

Be careful not to make some nasty remarks to one you're fond of just because you're temporarily annoyed with her.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be sensible about your business dealings today or you'll end up paying far more for something than it's worth.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your energies are not in harmony with your ambitions. A goal that could be reached now won't be. You're not willing to pay the price.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Underlings will have to be treated with kid gloves today if you expect them to comply with your wishes. Be very tactful.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You will not be a very productive day for you. Responsibilities will be neglected for more pleasurable pursuits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do-gooder pressures will be a bit heavier today than usual because of external influences. Don't let it shake you. This will soon pass.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Face up to your own mistakes today. If you're in error, don't run around for scapegoats.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 - Nov. 22) Be careful that something potentially profitable doesn't slip your hand because of a careless manner in which it's handled.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Instead of sticking to the course you've set, you'll let another talk you into her less effective way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't do anything now based upon motives not up to your highest standards. It could create a lingering problem.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're not apt to be as careful as you should be today in handling resources. Some loss is likely from foolishness on your part.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It's not the time to ease up on your objectives. Don't impede your own progress.

Plumptre's Plan Opposed

Big Food Chains Object To Giving Lowest Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — Some of the country's big supermarket chains are vehemently opposed by the Food Prices Review Board that they drastically change their advertising practices, charging this as being an attempt to keep down food prices.

Executives of several big retailing companies say they do not like board chairman Jean-Luc Plumptre's proposal that they advertise the lowest unit prices every week for 41 staple food items listed in the board's recently published nutritional food guide.

The idea, Mrs. Plumptre says, is to make it easier for food shoppers to compare prices and seek the best buys.

Some supermarket executives said it interferes the practice would touch off a supermarket price war of the kind that occurred in the Ottawa-Hull area for five weeks last fall when the board published weekly comparative food prices of commonly bought items.

The only company to make any move toward complying was Dominion Stores Ltd. which this week began advertisements listing the company's prices for 39 items in the guidelines. Company officials did not respond to requests for comment.

"If you advertise the same things week after week the public will get fed up," Bertram Loeb, president of M. Loeb Limited of Ottawa, said. "You must advertise items that are profitable—you can advertise items which will turn blue in the face and you don't sell any more volume."

"With this, we could get into a price war situation," James Gregory, vice-president of merchandising for Loblaws Ltd. of Toronto, said. "I personally think that it is an encroachment on the free enterprise system. ."

J. C. Kennedy of Toronto, president of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Co. of Canada, Ltd. (A and P), said sales officials "question the value" of the proposal.

John S. Kimball, managing director of Canadian Safeway Ltd., Ontario region, said from Toronto that his company supports the principle of giving shoppers "meaningful comparative price information but doubts that shoppers would "get any meaningful listing and comparison" price lists.

"My first reaction is simply no," Sanlo Montemurro of Bonvin, Que., president of the 100-member Canadian Federation of Retail Grocers, said. "If nothing else, the list would take up too much advertising space."

In Scarborough, N.S., officials of the 43-store Sobey supermarket chain said they were studying the idea but were "not very happy with it."

Shirley Anne Brown, communications director of Loblaws, Douglas and Co. Ltd. of Vancouver, which sponsors about 230 Red and White Supermarket Valu stores in British Columbia, said such comparative pricing would plunge the highly competitive industry into a crippling price war. But she added: "If I wasn't in the supermarket business I'd probably think it was a great idea."

The Loeb company has 222 enfranchised independent stores in Ontario, Quebec and several U.S. states. It also sponsors a string of Metro Move and Price convenience stores in Ontario and Quebec and, through a subsidiary, sponsors 75 IGA stores and 38 Marché stores in Alberta.

Mr. Loeb said there were too many variations in market areas and in the seasonal availability of some listed food items to make accurate comparisons.

Mr. Gregory said the Loblaw company, with its supermarkets in Ontario and on the Prairies, its Provigo discount food stores plus sponsorship through a subsidiary of 223 Red and White stores and a string of Dollar Super Save, Lucky Dollar, Maple Leaf and O.K. Economy markets, has not yet made a decision on the proposal, Plumptre request.

Mr. Kimball of the 271-store Safeway chain said there were inherent hazards in the proposed plan. He wondered how competing firms could get comparative prices on similar products of different quality. "But the principle behind it is a good one," he said.

Officials of other companies said they were still studying the proposal.

Arctic Weather Keeps Prince Aloft 12 Hours

RESOLUTE BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — Prince Charles was forced to make a 3,700-mile adjustment to his tour of the Northwest Territories on Friday when poor weather closed down the airport at this tiny arctic community less than 1,000 miles from the North Pole.

The prince spent more than 12 hours in the air, most of it aboard a Hercules C-130 packed with his official party and reporters, as tour officials hunted around southward to jungle the itinerary.

Initial changes sent the tour on a 1,300-mile detour across the Arctic from Pelsuhker Bay on Baffin Island to the territorial capital of Yellowknife, in search of better weather.

After a brief lunch, the royal tour flew north 300 miles to Norman Wells where it transferred to Twin Otter aircraft for a hop in the tiny community of Colville Lake where a dog-sled team was to have been staged Sunday.

After shaking hands and chatting with most of the village's 90 residents, the prince accompanied on a sledge and set on an 8-minute ride across the lake to a spot where fishing nets were set beneath the ice.

Less than an hour after his arrival, the 26-year-old heir to the British throne took off again, flying over the Mackenzie River and the magnificent scenery of the Mackenzie range, back to Norman Wells.

The royal aircraft then returned to Yellowknife to refuel and finally departed for Resolute Bay, 1,200 miles distant, where weather conditions finally cleared in the late afternoon.

The prince, looking haggard after the flight, finally arrived at his destination after spending more than 12 hours in the air.

Two officials said they hope to carry out most of the remaining activities of the tour.

If the weather holds, Prince Charles is scheduled to fly even farther north to Grotse Fiord to visit the Royal Canadian Mounted Police station at the site of Resolute Bay with Dr. Joseph Mackinnis, an expert on undersea living.

LBJ Felt Oswald Cuban Tool

NEW YORK (AP) — The late President Lyndon Johnson said in a 1969 interview that he believed "international connections" may have been involved with the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

The liberto unreleased interview by Walter Cronkite of CBS News was broadcast Friday night on the CBS Evening News.

Cronkite said that portions of the interview had been withheld for national security reasons, but recent statements by colonist Marianne Means and Joseph Califano, Johnson's chief of staff, made secrecy no longer necessary.

The columnist said Johnson believed that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone but was under the influence or orders of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro. Califano said Johnson believed Castro was acting in reprisal for CIA plots against him.

Johnson told Cronkite he did not "completely discount" international connections with the assassination.

However, he added:

"I don't think we ought to discuss suspicions because there's not any hard evidence that Oswald was directed by a foreign government. Or that his sympathies for other governments could have spurred him on in this effort.

"But he was quite a mysterious fellow and he did have connections that bore examination, and I think history will deal with much more than we are able to now."

Johnson said that he thought the Warren commission "did the best they could. But I don't think that they, or me or anyone else is always absolutely sure of everything that might have motivated Oswald or others that could have been involved."

Big U.S. Oil Firms Report Reduced Profits

NEW YORK (AP) — Leading U.S. oil companies began reporting their first-quarter profits in last week. Twelve of the 15 major companies which released their first-quarter results had lower profits ranging from three to 66 per cent below a year earlier.

Profits for third largest U.S. oil company, Texaco Inc., were down 66 per cent to $178. 4 million, which was lower than the $524 million Texaco earned in the first-quarter of 1973, before the Arab oil embargo.

Results for the top four companies looked like this: Exxon Corp., down 11.1 per cent, Mobil Oil Corp., down 28 percent Socony, off 66 per cent and Gulf Oil Corp., down 6 per cent.

Kenora Area Indians Allegedly Assaulted

KENORA, Ont. (CP) — Police in this northwestern Ontario community report that an 18-year-old white youth and a 15-year-old Juvenile have been charged with assault causing bodily harm following complaints from a number of Indians in the area.

Police say John Henry, of White Dog, Peter Abraham of Fort Alex, and Louis Copenace and George Nabish, both of Keewatin, were assaulted during a short period Thursday night.

The National Indian Brotherhood, meanwhile, has linked the beatings with three other apparent assaults in the area, including one in which Joseph Palmquist of Grassy Narrows had both his legs severed when a train ran over them. The other alleged victims are Steven Comeback of Grassy and George Morrison of Sioux Narrows.

Mr. Palmquist is listed in fair condition in Lake of the Woods District Hospital.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE with Major Hoople

Toronto Mayor Is Seen Possible PC Leader

OTTAWA (CP) — Although Toronto Mayor David Crombie remains non-committal, a growing number of federal Progressive Conservatives are considering him as a leadership candidate to succeed Robert Stanfield.

The 38-year-old mayor appears to be raising his profile within Conservative circles, and party officials say there is every indication will decide later this year to announce he is running. The leadership convention is tentatively scheduled for early next year.

Mr. Crombie, mayor of Toronto for the last three years, is known to be interested in federal politics and was one of the major subjects when he taught at Ryerson Polytechnic Institute in Toronto until within the last few months he has been increasingly his concern with the party.

A month ago, he spoke to the Manitoba Progressive Conservative Association, and former Conservative cabinet minister Gordon Churchill said he was "impressed with this bright young man."

Some Manitoba delegates said they were left with the impression he was giving the matter more than passing thought.

When the party's federal caucus held a meeting in Regina, Oct. a few months ago, Mr. Crombie was invited as a guest speaker, and he quickly accepted the invitation. Again, members of the audience came away convinced he would be a candidate.

This weekend, Mr. Crombie came to Ottawa and turned up as a last-minute guest at a luncheon honoring former Conservative prime minister John Diefenbaker and commemorating the 90th anniversary of the Salvation Army.

The Toronto mayor also is taking French lessons—a subject more valuable in federal politics than in Toronto's city hall.

Party sources say none of the current members has officially pledged support of Mr. Crombie, because it's not yet clear which members of what will enter the race. And most are still waiting to be sure what Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed will change his mind and seek the federal leadership.

Hydro 'Out of Control' In Growth Plans--Lewis

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro is "out of control" in its demands for growth and rate increases, Stephen Lewis, NDP leader, charged Friday.

He questioned in the legislature how much of a proposed 30-per-cent rate increase in planned for capital expansion plans estimated at $24 billion for the next seven years, and urged the government to make a fundamental policy decision on the growth rate and "constant rate increases" rather than submitting them to the Ontario Energy Board.

Allan Grossman, provincial resources secretary, said the government is not totally convinced of the need for the projected growth rate of Hydro, but has no intention of putting an immediate stop to expansion plans.

The amount the rate increase would provide for capital expansion will be part of the evidence in hearings of the rate increase application before the energy board, he said.

"To say that the energy board will decide would be presumptious of anyone at this stage of the thing."

Earlier in the legislature, Mr. Grossman said the public would "hear the boss" if it was found further expansion was undesirable.

Mr. Lewis told the legislature with the government's position on Hydro is "ironic" in light of the stand it took against oil and gas price increases.

Mr. Grossman said there is a difference between increases which might be granted private producers of oil and natural gas and those required by a non-profit corporation such as Hydro.

Government Delays Clause For Proof of Innocence

OTTAWA (CP) — The government moved to opposition pressure Friday and agreed to delay a clause in its controversial petroleum administration bill that critics said would violate the Bill of Rights.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said in the Commons he will withhold the section until it can be re-examined by federal legal experts.

At issue was a penalty clause that would put the onus on any corporate executive charged under the bill to prove his innocence.

If approved, the bill will give Ottawa unilateral power to set the selling price of crude oil, natural gas and petroleum products. A violation, presumably, would be to ignore price rates set by Ottawa.

Harvd Andre (PC—Calgary Centre) said the penalty clause goes against the Bill of Rights which says all persons are innocent until proven guilty. He expressed surprise that the government would ask Parliament to approve legislation reversing that principle.

The penalty section, included with another section that calls for fines up to $20,000 and jail sentences up to two years, says a charged person must establish "that the offence was committed without his knowledge or consent."

Mr. Macdonald said initially the proposed legal experts considered the section constitutional.

The deputy attorney-general has examined it and, in his view, the section does not, in any sense, violate the Canadian Bill of Rights."

But he agreed after another round of questioning to delay the clause and let legal experts study it again. The bill, which has piloted second reading, was under detailed study in committee.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) questioned whether the proposed penalties for convicted violators were severe enough. Society has a double standard, often punishing criminals harder than corporate officials who break the law, he suggested.

"For a whole host of other crimes, such as robbery or assault, it is not unusual for people to go to prison," he said. But corporate criminals were rarely jailed.

"Officers of a corporation or of any other organization should be treated the same way as other individuals."

Mr. Orlikow said the proposed legislation is scheduled to continue Monday.

Petition Denied

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice David Henry refused to grant a petition Friday to place T. E. Quinn Truck Lines Ltd. of St. Catharines, Ont., into bankruptcy.

Keystone Trailer Rentals Ltd. claimed it lacked funds in the bankruptcy court because it had earlier started a separate court proceeding against the company that has not yet come to trial.

Keystone claims the company owes it $5,950.

Johannesburg Battle Rages

Terrorists Seize Israeli Consulate

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Six terrorists armed with machine guns seized the Israeli consulate in downtown Johannesburg today, took five women hostages and sprayed the street outside with gunfire. At least 40 persons were wounded, South African officials said.

Police said the gunmen were holding the hostages — four whites and one black—inside the fifth-floor offices near the modern Carlton centre shopping complex.

The unidentified gunmen fought a running battle with police marksmen who surrounded the building and returned fire as authorities tried to clear thousands of onlookers from the area.

A journalist, Frank Fainer of the Jewish Herald, said that his office received a telephone call saying that Arab terrorists had taken over the consulate. But there was no confirmation of the identity of the terrorist.

One of the hostages phoned from a window for police snipers to stop firing about two hours after the attackers seized the Israeli offices.

He said there were wounded men in the offices and asked for ambulances to carry them to a hospital.

Police using a megaphone then started negotiating with the gunmen.

A rope to pick up a first-aid kit was lowered from a window and when it was hauled up reporters saw that a walkie-talkie also was attached.

Police sent for the Israeli ambassador, J. Unna, in response to a shouted request from the gunmen.

(Reuters news agency reported the gunmen said they wanted to talk to the ambassador or someone of equivalent rank by 6 p.m. (noon EDT), Otherwise they would blow up the consulate.)

A woman shouted from the building: "We are not complying out. We want Mr. Unna." There were also shouts from other women, "Don't shoot! Don't shoot!"

In Jerusalem, Israeli radio broadcast that the attackers had slipped into the consulate and seized its employees when they returned to work this morning after the weekend.

Official sources in Jerusalem said the besieged consulate in Johannesburg messaged the Israeli government that the attackers had 10 hostages. Officials said the messages were garbled and appeared to have been dictated by the intruders.

Two platoons of soldiers, about 50 men, were sent in to reinforce the police, who used dogs trying to clear the thick downtown crowds away from the gun battle.

At one point police demobed over a loudspeaker that the attackers surrender but their reply was a burst of gunfire.

Detectives raiding buildings in the London area found $40,000 in British bank notes. This brought the total so far recovered since last Thursday's robbery to the equivalent of almost $240,000 out of $348,000 worth of British currency taken.

Montreal Postmen Remain on Strike

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

About 200 letter carriers were on strike at four Montreal post offices today despite a tentative agreement reached Thursday in Ottawa.

Early reports indicated service was returning to normal in other parts of the country, including Western Canada where Guy Morrissette, president of the Montreal local, largest of the 17,000-member letter carrier union, was touring to seek support for a rejection of a 21½-year contract recommended by the union's national executive.

Mr. Morrissette said Sunday in Calgary the public would continue to get the best of service "but we will deliver no mail to the big corporations."

Striking carriers picketed four Montreal post offices to eluding the main downtown centre, another in the financial district and two suburban substations.

"We are going for broke to back—demands for $14,000 a year immediately under a twoyear maximum contract," said Mr. Morrissette. "I have told (Postmaster-General Bryce) MacKasey that we are either going to be paid for the treatment we are supposed to receive shoulder or we are not going to work at all."

Postal officials reported normal operations in Alberta, Manitoba, British Columbia and the Atlantic provinces as letter carriers returned to work following tentative settlement of a contract last week between the post office and the Letter Carriers Union of Canada (LCUC).

The proposed contract would increase basic salaries to $12,771 from $9,555 for letter carriers with three years experience, short of the $14,000 demanded by the 2,500-member Montreal local.

Quebec Dockers Ignore Work Law

MONTREAL (CP) — Longshoremen refused to return to work today despite federal legislation last week ordering them back to their jobs.

A spokesman for the International Longshoremen's Association representing 2,200 workers said all but two of the longshoremen defied the back-to-work legislation.

The ports affected by the strike include Montreal, Trois-Rivieres and Quebec City.

At a meeting Sunday night, members of the negotiating committee, in accordance with the law, asked the longshoremen to go back to work.

However, the union spokesman said the members felt the legislation was invalid because it was based on the report by federally-appointed conciliator Judge Alan Gold. The report had been rejected previously by the union.

We propose, raising hourly base pay to $8 from $5.10 at the end of a three-year contract, were approved by the longshoremen last week. However, workers also wanted a guaranteed 40-hour work week all year, or a total of 2,080 hours.

The report recommended 1,600 guaranteed hours of work for longshoremen in Montreal, 1,400 in Quebec City and 1,200 in Trois-Rivieres.

"From what I have seen, I think most of the men are more rather go to jail than work under an unfair law," one union member said.

The ILA has asked for negotiations to be reopened.

Sidney St. Mail Delivery to Resume

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

A letter from Postmaster General Bryce MacKasey indicates that the controversial suspension of mail deliveries on a section of Sidney St. will be ended soon.

Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, said today he had received a letter from Mr. MacKasey's which acknowledged postal authorities had conferred on the issue.

"It is expected mail deliveries will resume within the next few days," said the letter.

Belleville postmaster Roy Wainwright was not available in the city for comment this morning. But deputy postmaster George Burchill said a regional postal official had surveyed the Sidney St. area where deliveries were halted last February because of feared traffic hazards. Service would resume, said Mr. Wainwright, after a sidewalk had been built.

About 30 homes between Cascade Road and Moira Baptist church were affected. Mail has been left for pickup at communal boxes located at the church parking lot.

The suspension brought a protest to Mr. MacKasey from Mayor Robin Jeffrey.

Device Foils Muggers

But What Happens If Mugger Uses It?

DETROIT (AP) — A pedestrian strolling along a dimly-lit street is confronted by a thug demanding money. Instead of handing over his cash, the citizen produces an object that resembles a flashlight, presses a button, and immobilizes the agressor.

Science fiction? Not so says Ellis Kahn, who says a device called a Taser will do just that. Bank is marketing the device in the Detroit area. It was invented by California aerospace engineer John Cover.

The Taser, says Bank, shoots out tiny wires with hooks on the end. The hooks dig in flesh and carry a 50,000 volt charge, immobilizing the recipient.

The device is powered by a rechargable battery, weighs about 21 ounces and slips over a belt. Bank is a professional holster.

The hooks, limited to a range of 18 feet, can penetrate clothing up to 1½ inches thick.

Five Generations Apart

Five generations met in Belleville as Mrs. Jennie Osterhout celebrated her 100th birthday. The centenarian met a family line that now extends down to great great grandchildren . . . among them (above) nine-year-old Ricky Phillips, of Frankford.

100th Birthday Marked

Jennie Osterhout's Life Spans Oxen-to-jet Transport Eras

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Jennie Osterhout has two symbols that put her lifespan in perspective —oxen and the jet plane.

The evolution of transportation came immediately to her alert mind Sunday as she marked her 100th birthday.

She recalled the oxen used on a neighbor's farmstead during her childhood near Holloway.

In recent years she has been shuttling by jet airliner to Florida to avoid the crunch of Canada's winters.

But the vast weekend saw her in Belleville — the rendezvous chosen by her now far-flung family for a reunion with friends and relatives to mark her centennial.

They've multiplied over the years and the big celebration — at the Elks lodge on Cedar St. — was thronged with well-wishers, young and old.

She's now matriarch of four generations, extending down to great, great grandchildren.

Born Jennie Hamilton, she spent much of her life farming just west of Frankford. She was married at 17 — to Sheldon Osterhout, Murray Township farmer. Later they moved back to a family farm in the Holloway area, where Mr. Osterhout died in 1943 at 81.

In her later years Mrs. Osterhout has divided her time between living with her children in Florida and then Ontario, when the weather warms.

One of her main enjoyments still is reading — the Bible and local newspapers, she said.

But her longevity is something she has never really pondered, she indicated.

"You never think of it that way. We have no time limit."

She said.

Five of her seven children survive and the family progeny she now reckons at 40 grandchildren, more than 20 great grandchildren and 15 great, great-grandchildren.

Air Base Bombed

Ceasefire Denied New President

SAIGON (AP) — Duong Van Minh was inaugurated as president of South Vietnam today and proposed an immediate ceasefire and negotiations to end the war. But the Viet Cong rejected the proposal.

Meanwhile, planes bombed the Tan Son Nhut air base on the edge of the city, and six parked aircraft were reported destroyed. The attacking planes bore the markings of the South Vietnamese air force.

There was speculation that the bombing was the work of government pilots opposed to dealing with the Communists or that the planes were among those captured by the Communists when they took over South Vietnamese air bases in the northern and central part of the country.

The bombing touched off a rash of anti-aircraft and small-arms fire in Saigon as people dashed for cover.

Authorities agreed that Communist-led troops had not yet launched a ground assault on Saigon and that there was no street fighting.

Fifteen miles northeast of Saigon, North Vietnamese gunners blasted Bien Hoa with an artillery cannonade that left the city of 500,000 in flames. The population fled, strung out as far as the eye could see on the sixlane highway to Saigon.

A spokesman for the Viet Cong's delegation to the Joint Military Commission in Saigon rejected Minh's ceasefire proposal in a three-paragraph statement read to reporters.

It called for "an end to the Saigon administration, a tool of American neocolonialism, and an end to the machinery of war and oppression against the population of South Vietnam."

Minh, 58, who has been in exile or on the sidelines throughout the entire Thieu administration, was unanimously endorsed by the South Vietnamese National Assembly Sunday to take over the presidency from Tran Van Huong, the 71-year-old vice-president who moved up briefly when Nguyen Van Thieu resigned a week ago.

The Viet Cong said repeatedly that they would not negotiate with Thieu or any member of his regime.

Another key Viet Cong demand is the immediate and withdrawal of all American military and disguised military advisers.

British Labor Convention Rejects Common Market

LONDON (AP) — Britain's ruling Labor party overwhelmingly rejected the appeals of its leaders Saturday and voted in favor of dropping out of the Common Market.

Almost twice as many delegates voted to campaign against the Common Market in a national referendum to be held June 5.

In doing so, they ignored the appeals of Prime Minister Harold Wilson and a majority of his government in favor of remaining in the nine-nation community that Britain joined Jan. 1 1973.

Wilson received only a smattering of polite applause when he told the convention: "My judgment is that it now is best for the future of Britain, best for the Commonwealth, best for Europe, best for the developing world, best for the wider world, that we remain in the community."

Foreign Secretary James Callaghan spoke against a torrent of protests and boos when he urged delegates to join with other socialists in Europe in guiding the market toward social democracy.

More than 1,000 delegates voted against Europe by a margin of 3,724,000 to 1,968,000 out of 8,905,000 eligible votes.

The huge anti-Europe majority came from the trade union delegates who controlled 5,412,000 votes. Only four unions, with a total of 1.2 million votes, favored remaining in the community.

Wilson has already announced that he and his government will be bound by the decision of the electorate to be expressed in the June 5 referendum on whether the country should remain in the market.

Fair play was observed throughout the day-long convention, with three ministers speaking for Europe and three again... Then speakers from the floor alternated one ir favor, one against.

But anti-marketeers spoke to applause, while those in favor of staying in were booed and heckled with the exception of Wilson.

Their Work Will Come Up Roses

Best Use of Space Major Problem Facing Hospital Directors in 1975

Utilization remains a serious problem at Belleville General Hospital despite efforts to resolve the issue during 1974, says Dr. Douglas A. MacIntosh, chief of staff.

In his report to the BGH board of governors annual meeting last week, Dr. MacIntosh said when there is no available room for a patient, "it is a testimony to all of us that we have all failed in proper utilization."

He said he felt the chief of staff, medical director and admission and utilization committee should co-operate over "exercise more control over the various admissions to be sure they are justified."

He said the aim for the average length of patient stay to be improved this year so the "no bed" situation can be maintained at a minimum.

Dr. MacIntosh put forth three possible solutions:

—"The use of expected date of discharge. Currently we do not have a computerized system to develop this program. This may have to be developed without the computer for the present."

—"Geographic location of departments to definite floors may provide for tighter control on admissions by departmental utilization committees.

—"Certainly the formation of a utilization committee in the larger department would be of value."

He listed some questions which require answers — "Is an admission justified — is there delay in investigation and treatment due to inadequate clinical problem formulation — is there a delay in getting consultations — are adequate hospital visits made to ensure progress of the treatment plan?"

Dr. MacIntosh said the average length of stay is 9.66 days, one day above median and mean for Ontario and Canada. He said in-patient laboratory utilization is high as well, well above the median and mean values provincially and nationally.

Medical and surgical supplies and drug costs are also well above average, he added.

Bed Checks To Ease Shortage

A plan has been devised at Belleville General Hospital to achieve a measure of control over admissions and discharges to alleviate a bed utilization problem, says Dr. Douglas A. MacIntosh, chief of staff.

In his report to the BGH board of governors annual meeting last week, he said the medical director will make regular rounds in the morning on the various floors to determine those patients that could be transferred or discharged.

"If the attending physician cannot be reached, then the department chief or chief of staff will be asked to act on the matter," said Dr. MacIntosh.

"The greatest difficulty encountered by the admission and utilization committee was the slowness by which discharges were obtained once a problem was recognized," he commented.

He said with the new method, beds should be obtained more rapidly on those days during which they are needed.

Aircraft Spread Fertilizer

PICTON — Six Prince Edward County farmers took advantage of air fertilization of their whole fields last week. Two single engine airplanes fertilized 450 acres in the county in a day and a half.

The pilots, Frank Sirkely and Larry Lysiak of Kincardine Air Services are veteran crop-dusters and have been applying fertilizer from the air in other sections of Ontario for seven years.

One fertilizer distributer says that the optimum time to spread nitrogen on wheat fields is during the spring thaw, and while the ground is too soft for conventional methods, aerial fertilization is the only alternative.

Thieves Grab Five TVs

City police are investigating the theft of five television sets valued at $1,600 from the Sun Valley Motor Inn at 407 North Front St. sometime Saturday.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said today unknown thieves forced open five rooms on the ground floor from the outside to gain entry and disconnect the sets.

Township Cemeteries Getting Facelift

NORTHPORT A number of Sophistocrush Township cemeteries are taking on a new look this spring under the Local Initiatives Program (LIP).

The program, which terminates July 31, now employs seven local residents to clean up the cemeteries.

Eleanor Lindsay, chairman of the Sophistocrush Cemetery Committee, says that once the initial work is completed and the cemetery stones straightened, it should be relatively easy to maintain the upkeep of "now in three or four times a year".

Mrs. Lindsay added, however, that funds received from sale of plots in the newly-established Sophistocrush Cemetery would prove insufficient to cover maintenance costs. "We're hoping for a small grant from township council."

All cemeteries in the township are under the jurisdiction of Sophistocrush Township, said Mrs. Lindsay.

Hastings Manor Gets Garden from Kinsmen

Elderly folk in Belleville will have a roster prospect in view this summer.

It's all due the city's Kinsmen service club.

The club, which involves itself in such with junior citizens, is sprucing up the spacious front lawns of Hastings Manor — Hastings County's home for the aged in Belleville.

Club members this weekend broke ground on the lawn as a preliminary to turning it into a rose garden for home residents.

The Kinsmen — with advice from the Belleville Garden Club — will plant six large beds of shrubs and roses, says club president Bob Thomas.

The project may set a pattern.

"It may be next year we'll look at other senior citizen homes in the city and see what we can do there," said Mr. Thomas.

Queens Offers Course For Area Businessmen

Small businesses in the Belleville to Brockville area are being urged again this year to participate in the Small Business Counselling Assistance Program conducted by the school of business at Queen's University in Kingston and sponsored by the provincial education, industry and tourism.

Dr. F. B. Buchan, program supervisor, says there are several objectives of the program which will commence May 1 and continue during the summer months.

He says they are "to provide business counselling assistance to small businesses in the area between Belleville and Brockville at low cost ... to improve the business school's understanding of small business problems and the small businessman's understanding of the value of formal management education."

The program, he said, also exposes students, many of whom are interested in starting their own businesses, to some of the opportunities and difficulties of small business management . . . and to increase student summer employment opportunities which will enhance their educational and professional development."

Sixteen Area Groups Receive OFY Funding

The federal government has approved funds for 16 Opportunities For Youth projects in the Belleville-Bancroft sector of Hastings County.

The grants total almost $87,000 and are for projects approved to date for his riding, says Jack Ellis, MP Hastings.

A covering letter from the Manpower and Immigration ministry — which processes OFY applications — indicates more projects may be approved in the "next week or so" he said.

Grant approvals received by Mr. Ellis for summer projects by groups of people in the riding range from $10,500 for a water safety program in Belleville to $2,500 for a community co-operation program in Coe Hill.

Hastings riding covers most of the county excepting the six townships north of Bancroft.

It is not yet known how many applications for OFY grants from the area have been turned down.

But, Mr. Ellis indicated several dozen projects had been submitted. These were screened by a regional advisory committee — which included two citizen appointees from Hastings riding — before sent to the ministry for final scrutiny.

Nine of the 16 grants go to Belleville youth groups.

Titles, locations and grants for the projects approved are:

Belleville Legal Aid, $8,500; Hill, $2,860; Sports 'n Skills, Deseronto, $3,700; Oral History, Hastings County Museum, Belleville, $4,380; Kids Korner, Bancroft, $4,130; Hillcrest Headstart, Belleville, $6,200; Cultural Preservation, Belleville, $4,500; Fun 'n Music, Belleville, $3,150; Service Pensioners, Belleville, $7,424; Water Safety Theatre, Belleville, $10,500; Floating Area Playground, $7,485; Quinte District Labor History, Belleville, $8,000; Helping Hands, Tweed, $4,110; H.E.A.P., Bancroft, $3,152; Marmora Local History, $4,560.

Lack of Demand Scraps City Recycling Program

Belleville's waste paper recycling program has been suspended.

The project — which has been leaking a collapse of market demand for months — finally was cancelled this weekend.

But a spokesman for the waste disposal company which has been purchasing paper collected from city households, today indicated hopes of an upswing in demand later this year.

Jean Smith, the city councillor who organized the project in late 1973, admitted to being "terribly disappointed."

She said she will explain the problem to city council tonight.

Cancellation of the project apparently became inevitable late last week.

Len Vigodda, general manager of Container Services Co., in Trenton, which has been purchasing the city's collected wastepaper, said there has been no change in market conditions. The price has slumped from a high of $50 a year ago to "zero dollars" since processing mills now do not want' low-grade waste.

"We supported it as long as we could but there's been no turn-around in the market," he said.

However, Mr. Vigodda said he believed demand "will come back in the fall. I'm quite sure it'll return."

Ald Smith said Quinte Sanitation Services Ltd. — the city's garbage contractor which has been collecting paper sorted by city householders — has been running the service at a loss for months.

John Graham, company president, hopes that demand would pick-up this spring were not realized. "Now we can't even get rid of the paper," he said.

Pickups have been averaging 25 tons in recent months, estimated Ald. Smith.

Two Hurt In Crash

Two Belleville residents were treated and released from Belleville General Hospital Sunday for minor injuries they received in a one-car accident on Bay Bridge Rd.

City Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said driver David Vannorman, 23, of 40 East Moira St., was the driver of a northbound 1971 Monte Carlo which went out of control, crossed a cement median and smashed into the west railing of the bridge which crosses over the Canadian Pacific railway tracks.

The car, which received $2,100 damage, did not fall off the bridge, he said. Damage to the railing was estimated at $500.

Vannorman's passenger in the 6:-53 a.m. mishap was Lynn Davies (age not available) of 7 Wareham St.

Tape Deck Stolen

Another in a series of tape deck thefts from automobiles this year was reported to city police early today.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said a tape deck and battery, valued at $95 were stolen from a car owned by Randy Emery of 226 West Moira St. parked at the rear of his residence.

He said the theft occurred sometime during a 24-hours period ending at 7:30 a.m. today.

On the subject of stereo tape equipment thefts from cars, Chief Crosbie advises, "make sure when buying a tape deck from an individual that it is

All in the Family

The first Ontario Hiking Day brought crowds out along the Quinte-Hastings Recreational Trail Sunday morning, for some, like Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Enright, RR 3 Belleville, a walk along the trail near Moira Lake was a family affair. Mr. Enright faced 29-month-old daughter Michel, while Lisa, 5, and Paula, 3, hiked it on foot.

Apartment Robbed

City police are investigating the theft of goods from an apartment at 209½ Front St. rented by Laurie Adams sometime between 10 p.m. and 11:45 p.m. Saturday.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said clothing, jewelry, make-up and perfume were stolen. Value was estimated at $385. Entry was gained by forcing the front door

Fire Guts Old Church

SHANNONVILLE — A former church being used as a warehouse just off Yonge St. in this village was destroyed by fire Sunday.

Fire Chief Vince Maher of Thurlow Township Volunteer Fire Brigade, said today the structure, estimated at over 50 years old, was being used to store crates and canning factory equipment.

He said the fire broke out about 2:30 p.m. and firmen remained until about 5 p.m. although "the building only took about 30 minutes to go in return to the site during the evening when the smoldering remains flared up again, he added.

Chief Maher discounted arson in the blaze but said children have been playing with witches are suspected of accidentally setting the fire. He explained children regularly break into the building despite past efforts to keep them out.

New Season Launched

Bay of Quinte Yacht Club has launched 1975 boating season as craft were taken out from under winter wraps and hoisted - in Belleville harbor. About 35 pleasure craft of various displacements — the biggest was the 13-ton Delos, above— were gently lowered in the water by mobile crane.

Pregnancy Program Under Review Says Education Board Chairman

A Hastings County Board of Education official dismissed rumors this week that a special class for pregnant students will be cancelled because of too much publicity.

"The matter has not been dropped — it's now with the chairman's committee and will be brought back to the board with a recommendation, said board chairman Jean Hutchison monday.

Two months ago the board referred the extended program to the chairman's committee after several board members felt it could not be discussed in open session due to advance publicity. The program would be an extension of the home-hospital instruction whereby classes of pregnant students would meet as a group to continue their academic work.

The service has been provided to girls on an individual basis in the past and board officials describe the new phase of the program as an extension. A home-hospital instructor with the board estimated that 30 girls left the school system last year due to pregnancy.

Mrs. Hutchinson said the program is still under review but that the committee had been busy with salary negotiations. She described the project as "low priority." She said their was no urgency to approve the program.

The program proposes that the pregnant student attend a class three mornings a week. Instruction would also include pre-natal care as well as the academic subjects for the girls. In March a board spokesman reported there was only one pregnant student, an elementary school student, in the system.

Mr. Hutchison would not speculate as to when the committee would make a recommendation to the board.

College Open House Draws 400 Visitors

A public debate with a surprise ending highlighted the open house program at Albert College in Belleville during the weekend.

Before a mixed crowd of students and public Saturday evening, two student debating teams argued the merits of whether college uniforms should be abolished, much the way dress codes were discussed in secondary schools

The team favoring retention of the uniforms won the debate and an additional poll of students present found an overwhelming vote in favor of the uniforms.

Close to 400 people, the core of which was composed of immediate families of the students, attended the five-hour open house over two days.

Other popular activities included a model airplane demonstration, a karate and scuba demonstration and a water polo show.

Set for Take-off

Eric Swann (front), 13 and Tom Smallwood (rear), 15, Grade 8 students at Albert College in Belleville, rehearse a model airplane for take-off during open house activities at the college during the weekend. Close to 400 people toured the college on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon.

Suspect Disarmed

City police have laid three charges against a 21-year-old Belleville man following an incident on Charlotte St. early Sunday

Chief Douglas Crosbie said today Ronald Ervine Park of 20 Charlotte St. has been charged with possession of a weapon dangerous to the public peace, creating a disturbance and willful damage.

Chief Crosbie said police were called to Charlotte St. at about 2:00 a.m. where they found a man standing on a front lawn, waving a long chain over his head and brandishing a 13-inch knife and managed to disarm him.

He said the man had been driven home in a taxicab owned by Central Taxi Leasing and Sales (Belleville) Ltd. prior to the incident during which two other taxi drivers showed up to aid their fellow driver.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance during a 48-hour period which ended at 8 a.m. today:

Saturday, April 26, 11:52 a.m. — false report of brush fire at end of East Bridge St.

Saturday, April 26, 8:45 p.m: — service call to the Kiwanis Centre parking lot on East Dundas St., where gas was leaking from a car.

Business Students Graduate

Belleville's Ontario Business College has added institution of its kind in Canada — Saturday night marked the graduation of 40 of its students.

The ceremony, held at the Sun Valley Motor Valley Motor Inn, was attended by 125 students and guests.

Some 21 of the students graduated with honors.

The college, founded in 1889, has a continuing enrolment in various courses of between 80-90.

Juvenile Charged

An unidentified juvenile will appear in juvenile court following charges stemming from the attempted breakin of a city residence Saturday.

City Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said today Lionel Bovey of 81 Avondale Rd. caught the youth attempting to enter his home by a window at 1:30 p.m.

Warm, Sunny Weather Ideal for Hiking Day

Warm, sunny weather Sunday was just the kind the spring day to put a spring in the step.

And scores of Quinte residents did just that, along the Quinte-Hastings Recreational Trail (QHRT).

The strolling groups out observing the arrival of spring along the trail were part of a province-wide event — the first Ontario Hiking Day.

Biggest group concentrated on the QHRT went for a five-mile stroll around the Moira Lake area, south of Madoc.

About 100 hikers took part, including schoolchildren, a ma e teur naturalists and photographers but mainly those out to enjoy a ramble in the country.

Jim Staveley, QHRT president, said other groups went for similar hikes from O'Hara's Mill, north of Madoc, and along Oak Hills routes of the trail. Scouts, cadet and church groups were among the participants, he said.

The hiking event was organized by the Federation of Ontario Hiking Trails Association and was aimed at promoting the hiking routes with the public and emphasizing their significance to the provincial government.

As far as the QHRT was concerned the event drew a "fantastic" response, said Mr. Staveley.

He said he hoped the event would make the government trails.

Urgently needed, he said, is (1) Government action on such "needs as official land use agreements with private property owners, exempting them from any liability when their holdings are used by trails organizations; (2) establishment of a trails advisory committee to the government, promised by provincial officials late last year, he said.

Inflation and Unemployment the Result

Turner Admits Ottawa Played Politics with Taxpayers' Money to Regain Power

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA —In a burst of candor, Finance Minister John Turner has admitted that the Trudeau government manipulated the economy — running up government spending and running down the value of the dollar — to win last July's election.

It is not exactly news that the government in the last 10 years, led first, by Prime Minister Pearson and then by Pierre Trudeau, developed purchasing power of the dollar down to the current 56 cents.

The proof — inflation confronts and confounds the politicians who created it and exacts its frightening toll from its hepless victims, the taxpayers and the unemployed.

But it has to be news when the Finance Minister himself confesses that it was merely the price Canadians had to pay for electing Trudeau, Turner and company.

Here it is, set out, for all to read, in the Hansard record of Parliament.

Sinclair Stevens, conservative finance critic, is speaking:

"The Minister of Finance (Mr. Turner) let it all hang out when he testified before the Estimates Committee.

"In answer to the question, 'Why have you led government spending grow so quickly?' he now is a new peak of $25 billion and still counting) he said:

"'In democracies there are no such things as economic cycles; there are political cycles depending on the pressures of public policy and depending on the parliamentary process at the time.

"Certainly we were under political imperatives the year (referring to the last Parliament) where pressures were stronger in a minority than a majority. Those are the facts of life.'

At that point Sinclair Stevens had interjected: "You wanted to be re-elected," and Finance Minister Turner had replied: "Those happen to be the facts."

So there it is, straight from John Turner: the Trudeau government naturally wanted re-election, so, under this pressure, ran up government spending to stimulate the economy and further inflate already soaring inflation.

"If you look at the charts," Sinclair Stevens told the Commons when recounting this strange confession in committee of the Finance Minister, "you can see exactly when the government decided to call the election last year.

"The money increase (spun off the overworked contract-out presses of the Bank of Canada) shows it very clearly.

"It was going up sharply at over 30 per cent last Spring, and then it plateaued very dramatically in negative growth.

"In short, they blew up the economy (pumping out debased dollars) in anticipation of the July election, and then (after re-election) in order to cool the excess they had deliberately forced into the economy they contracted it sharply . . . and now we have, as one result, 800,000 people out of work."

Having established his case with that astonishing bit-of-all-hang-out admission from the Finance Minister, Mr. Sinclair went on briefly to contrast public and private enterprise.

In setting public service strikes, as in managing the economy, he contended, the government, lacking the "discipline of the marketplace, operates on the basis of political expediency rather than sound common sense.

"To survive in business," Sinclair Stevens, speaking as a businessman, told the Commons, "you must make a profit, or at least not suffer a loss.

"So a dollar saved is a dollar earned.

"But in government, a dollar saved is a dollar lost from last year's Estimates."

Translation: if the government doesn't spend, or preferably overspend its estimates this year, how can it ask Parliament for more, next?

Former Prime Minister Pearson, an old federal deputy minister, gave it to a press conference right early the day, like John Turner, letting it all hang out.

"You always ask for more than you know you'll get," he said, "so that what you get is more than you need."

What the heck, it is only the taxpayers' money, isn't it?

Tide of Permissiveness

Premier Davis contradicts himself when on the one hand he says the government intends to "curb the tide of permissiveness in Ontario society, then goes on to say "Life in our province is still civilized, and we intend to keep it that way."

Still, it is good to see someone in authority taking such a stand, for there is indeed a tide of permissiveness that threatens to undermine our people — especially the current and future generations — and our institutions.

There has been some criticism too of the provincial government's decision to hold a Royal Commission inquiry into violence in violence, and this because so much of this kind of programming originates outside our jurisdiction, in the United States. Nevertheless, such an inquiry will serve to focus attention on a real problem, one which may well have a bearing on growing violence in cities like Toronto.

Significant in this regard was a recent article in TV Guide pointing out how authorities in Mexico had tackled a similar situation. The government axed 37 violent TV shows with results that should prove beneficial to the health of society there as time passes.

The Ontario government of course will have no direct influence on such programming, but the Royal Commission's findings should still carry some weight when they are made known. Someone has to take a lead, and this is it. It should weigh for instance with the federal government which would then have authority to take appropriate action.

A Question of Rights

Prejudice. . . ?
Canadians prejudiced. . . ?
We're a "fortunate" people, aren't we?

Well, doesn't that pre-suppose that we have no slums, that everyone is properly housed, clothed, and fed?

Shouldn't it mean that there are opportunities for all, including jobs.

It also pre-supposes all things are equal in the best of all possible worlds which of course Canada is not.

Probably we come as close to the ideal though as any country. Yet prejudice still exists, and there are inequalities.

The kind of prejudice Rhoda Pavris, a Vancouver teacher and president of the East Indian Women's Association there spoke of during a recent Ottawa seminar on women and human rights.

Mrs. Pavris said she is surprised by the number of Canadians, including teachers, who see nothing wrong in openly admitting: "Sure I'm prejudiced against immigrants. I want this country for my own kids."

It's incredible that this should be the case in a society that now has such a multiflarious ethnic background, Mrs. Pavris pointing out that she is a Parsi whose ancestors were newcomers to India from Persia. Today she is presumably a Canadian citizen, yet she puts the question — and it is a valid one — how many Canadians know where the Parsis come from? In the context of the multi-faceted Canadian society, we should make it our business to know these things.

As Mrs. Pavris suggests, schools and media should lead toward furthering understanding of the cultures, religions and languages of newcomers, while at the same time helping them toward integration into the Canadian national scene.

MPs Are a Hardy Breed

Is the life of an MP, with its awesome pressures on mind and body, its effect on home life and so on . . . is it a killer?

Well, most men not. A study by a Toronto insurance company reveals that MPs live longer than most. Statistics gathered indicated that among MPs elected between 1931 and 1967, the ratio was about 30 per cent below that of Canadians born in the same years as the MPs.

One of the stock images of the parliamentary scene is one of the backbencher sleeping while a colleague holding the floor drones through a speech. It may be that the drowsy member is wiser than we know; because of the often long hours, he learns to pace himself and it may be, while he dozes he also has a weather ear to his colleague.

Perhaps the fact that an MP is on the move most of the time keeps him fitter than the rest of us. Certainly the adrenalin has to flow pretty fast to keep up with the demands on our MPs. And we have heard too of the fitness buffs such as Prime Minister Trudeau and Hastings Prince Edward MP George Hees who swim and jog and are in there battling each other verbally during House sittings.

It's a tough life the MPs lead, but they seem to thrive on it. Come to think of it, it's not too often that one hears of illness or heart attacks among our parliamentarians. A great life indeed if you don't weaken.

Among the undesirable solutions to the illegal alien problem is a proposal to require all citizens to carry a national identification card. Such passports for domestic use would be constitutionally repugnant. They would abridge the individual's right to privacy, and freedom of movement and association. They would impose on law-abiding citizens the onus of proving their citizenship, an outrageous shift of responsibility for immigration officers to the public at large. Current laws which attack the exploitation of immigrants as well as their illegal presence should be better enforced. Meanwhile, even immigration officials, who bear the brunt of dealing with the issue, tend to see illegal aliens more as "economic refugees" than as lawbreakers.

Metric Re-tooling a Headache

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

One of the biggest obstacles to North America's conversion to the metric system is the expense of buying new tools.

Workmen in some manufacturing industries perhaps one-third to one-half of such operations—would have to replace their old "measurement-sensitive" tools with new ones calibrated in the metric system, used nearly everywhere except in this continent.

The question of how much it would cost to replace the old tools, and who would bear the cost, is up in the air.

In the United States, organized labor has been successfully lobbying against a proposed metric bill, largely because it fears that many individual tradesmen would have to make a substantial outlay of their own money to replace their privately-owned tools, once that country decided to go metric.

When the Canadian government placed metric legislation, it left the question of privately-owned tools—and of what many other questions—to be worked out later.

The labor organizations on steering committee 9 of our government's metric commission have voiced their concern that workers in small, unrelated industries may be expected to bear the full costs of metric conversion in terms of lost earnings and retooling.

"It is estimated that the cost of new metric tools will range from $250 for the sub-trades to a high of $3,000 for a tool-and-die maker in certain specialized shops.

"For the older workers in particular, it would be most unfair for the government to insist that this cost be met out of their own pockets," the labor organizations say in a report to the metric commission.

The Canadian Manufacturers Association recently surveyed its members on the costs of conversion, and came up with a different range of cost figures:

"The tool costs to the individual may range widely within each job classification and from industry to industry.

"However, the average cost is likely to range from $50 to $300, and only the specialized tradesman, usually to be found in machining or toolmaking, faces costs of $500 to $600."

One economist, responding to the CMA survey, argued that the employer should not have to pay for the employees' tools:

"The ownership of tools is a worker asset, analogous to a fence around a trade or profession is usually a requirement relating to an income above the average earned by those with lesser skills.

"Industry rewards such skills, and should not be required to supply the specialized metric tooling required when an employee is following a chosen vocation."

The labor organizations on the metric commission believe that the federal and provincial labor standards codes should be changed to shift the cost of privately-owned tools to the employers.

But failing that, they recommend that the Income Tax Act be amended to permit working people to deduct the expense of retooling from their taxable income.

LETTERS

Literature and Politics

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Intelligencer editorials try very hard to place the blame for just about everything in society on either the communist or the fascist or as "leftists", "Corruption Via Books" in the issue of April 21 was a case in point.

Sharing the concern of many about the increasing number of books with heavy emphasis on sex, the editorialist elected to suggest that this practice of a segment of our free enterprise society is the work of "alien forces".

Of course the alien forces referred to are the communists. Just how this ridiculous suggestion can be laid at the doorsteps of the Communists is not made clear.

In our free enterprise society anything that is legal is allowed. If it is legal to sell sex books etc., in the spirit of the profit motive why not be honest and recognize this fact for what it is — the practice of the profit motive.

Then the editorialist has a bash at the South African scene. This time he imputes that South Africa "inevitably has to be one of the prime targets of communist subversion", He neglects to say why. But if he is right, surely it is because of the repugnant racial policies of that country.

The colored majority who live in Africa cannot be expected to lie down for ever under the continuance of white domination. When they finally get fed up with it, are we to be told it is because the Communists brainwashed them?

The drug scene, the moral scene, the socalled permissiveness, the greed, the lack of respect for authority, the indifference are nothing to do with the Communists — they all stem from the rotting fabric of a system that has had its day.

It is what they choose to replace it with that should be of concern to us — if we try to retain free enterprise within the capitalist system as it is we are and should be concerned.

WILLIAM C. HOCKLEY.

Erotica Seen as Luxury

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

"Corruption Via Books" threatens to become a piece of journalistic over-kill thanks to a preponderance of down squeezed into two small columns. It lashes out at a number of unsettling facts of modern life and attempts to elicit a response by calling for a return to old values.

Sexually-explicit books and erotic films are some of today's modern luxury goods, created to be consumed for profit. They contribute to the moral decay of our society, and are directed downward to a younger, more affluent segment of our society. Instant-information technology — radio, T.V., satellite! has opened up a barrel of maturing process and created children who are little adults and copy their elders.

These products are the results of a fast effort to adhere to a set of old values which are better off left behind. Given time, new values will replace them. What these new values will be will depend on the efforts of the adults in our present society. Their efforts, if aimed at educating young people to respect the world around us and communicating to them the need for individual development, will do much to establish values worth having. Only the growth of a well-informed youth, able armed to recognize the rights and obligations of our society can bring about the eventual death of much of the old values and attitudes of frustrated man's progress. Suppression of the unbalanced, will continue to keep alive old values as an organized force, more subtle than any political system.

...And Teachers are Uptight

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

With regard to the editorial, "Corruption Via Books" (April 21, 1975) we, the undersigned secondary school teachers wish to register our indignation at the blatant anti-Communist and anti-McCarthyism had long since been consigned to the garbage where it belongs.

It is merely a phenomenal feat to suggest that Communists are to blame for such "injurious" to our society as: pornographic books, "unisex" and "androgyny", a reluctant tendency towards homosexuality, V.D., drugs, trouble in South East Asia, and erotic film fare, all in one fell swoop.

The editorial lacks facts, logic, and a balanced point of view. Such shaky arguments have to do much to convincing "unpeopel" for the ills of society in which individual greed appears to us to play a very large part.

Vacant Lots Draw Fire From Picton Resident

By TERRY SPRAGUE
Staff Correspondent

PICTON — Cyril Weese, a third-year physical educational student at Queen's University an avid supporter of sports and recreation in Prince Edward County, says he is dismayed at the length of time it is taking Ontario Housing Corp. to develop two vacant lots on Dirsell St. into a recreation area.

Ontario Housing said six years ago they were going to turn the two vacant lots into a park for the children upon completion of the "hostel," commented Mr. Weese, "and it looks like weeds and mud for year seven."

The 39-house Ontario Housing Unit is on a dead-end street, and Mr. Weese said one of the criteria for getting in these houses is that you have a family. With three or four children to each family, the short street enjoys a population of approximately 70 or 80 children who have nowhere to play, he said.

"There are at least two road hockey games on the street at any given time of the day," Mr. Weese observed.

A potentially dangerous area, Mr. Weese noted, is the double fence which OHC constructed around a number of high voltage transformers.

"The only stable part of the fence are the two locked gates leading into the restricted area. The fence on either side is flat to the ground and children habitually use this as a shortcut to the abutting fairgrounds and Picton's east end," he said.

"While parents are aware of this danger and children are repeatedly warned, given the right time and circumstances, there could be a very serious accident," he added.

Mr. Weese suggests the vacant lots be developed into a multiple use area with a section for older children, an area of grass and trees for parents and a "creative playground" for the younger children.

Mr. Weese, who has the support of Dirsell St. residents, said he intends writing to OHC to find out what they are planning to do with the two vacant lots and the transformer site at the end of the street.

All village and township chairmen along with presidents of all Women's Associations in the riding are also members of the executive.

Dangerous Situation

A potentially dangerous area has developed at Picton's Dirsell St. where a fenced in area containing high-voltage transformers has collapsed allowing children to use the site as a short-cut to the abutting fairgrounds and Picton's east end.

Chamber Wants Higher Take From Licence Sticker Sales

BANCROFT — At an annual meeting of the local Chamber of Commerce held in Cardiff on Saturday a past president of the group urged more people to get involved in the Chamber's work since it is solely responsible for the promotion of North Hastings as a tourist area".

Ken Willcocks said the Bancroft and District Chamber of Chommerce has done a great deal of constructive work in the village and surrounding areas.

"I don't think that anyone realizes how much effort is made by the voluntary members of the executive of the chamber," said Mr. Willcocks.

A presentation was made to Mr. Willcocks by immediate past president Ivor Macleod, "in recognition of the work and service to the chamber and to the village of Bancroft."

Questions from the general membership at the meeting were directed at the cost of funning the vehicle licence office in the chamber building.

During the course of 1974, $2,000 was loaned to the licence operation from the chamber funds.

Ivor Macleod said "Only 70 cents is paid by the provincial government for each transaction in the bureau. So you can work like mad and make 100 transactions in a day and only make $70."

The past-president said an appeal has been made to the province to substantially increast the payment for the licence transactions and, "although the licence bureau is a pain in the neck, we really need it to keep the chamber building going."

Local businessman Doug Meeks was elected as the new president with vice-presidents Arnold Warden and Ted Wallis and treasurer Audrey Kelusky.

Also elected as directors for the next year were Helen Peterson, David Rattle, Nan Whitlaw, Madeline Holden, Joe Vance and Bert Comrie.

New president Doug Meeks called upon the general membership to get more involved in the operation and responsibilities of the chamber during the next year.

Hees Says Canada's Heroes at Vimy Ridge

WELLINGTON — A banquet here Friday night at the Canadian Legion, Wellington, commemorating the Battle of Vimy Ridge, was attended by some 80 veterans and their wives, from Branch 160 of the Royal Canadian Legion.

Guest speaker for the evening was George Hees, MP Prince Edward-Lennox riding and former minister of trade and commerce.

Mr. Hees, a veteran of the Second World War, said, "we are here tonight to pay respects and to commemorate the great battle of Vimy Ridge."

Relating his memories of the war, Mr. Hees commented, "How much we of the Second World War admire what you people of the First World War accomplished. Your hardships were far greater . . . life in the trenches must have been unbearable."

Concluding his address, Mr. Hees recalled an American acquaintance who commented on the lack of Canadian heroes.

"The Americans may have their Davy Crockets and Buffalo Bills, but the Canadian heroes are the men of Vimy Ridge," reverted Mr. Hees.

Among those attending the banquet were Wellington Reeve Robert Boyce, Reeve Allan Anderson of Bloomfield, Reeve Allan Pettingill of Hillier, MPP for Prince Edward-Lennox James Taylor and James Colton, Zone F 3 Commander of the Legion.

George Hees, MP Prince Edward-Hastings, spoke to veterans Friday night at the Vimy Banquet at the Canadain Legion, Wellington.

The day-long activities included a series of forums in the morning on a variety of sorority topics. Matters pertaining to International Women's Year were also discussed.

A sherry party and luncheon followed these meetings. The Founder's Day pledge was given by Sandra Deane, and a message from the sorority's international chapter was read by Carol Fulton.

A fashion show sponsored by Milady Shop, convened by Fern House and Margery Midlane, was commentated by Marg Hall.

The new area council executive, installed by Phylis Alicorn includes Anna Post, president, Ann Grey, vice-pres., Carol Fulton, treasurer, and Joanne Shaw, recording secretary.

Presented with the Order of the Rose in a ceremony closing the afternoon program, are Dorothy James, Wilma Alexander, Marion Tripp and Helen Tullin, members of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority that had its "mini convention" at the Four Seasons on Saturday.

In the foreground of the photo, a rug being hooked by Ruby Tieshurst is representative of the work being done by guild members. They are busy now preparing for the May 10 exhibit at Loyalist College, of rugs and wall hangings from Belleville, Picton, Bloomfield, Wellington, Napanee and Kingston. The public is invited to view the work.

Hooking Craft Guild Meets For Social, Creative Time

Pursuing the gentle and useful craft of rug-hooking, a dozen women meet twice a month in the Recreation Centre, enjoying each other's company as they work.

The Belleville branch of the Hooking Craft Guild has been in existence for more than eight years, although there were rug-hooking groups and classes long before that. There are still several other similar groups in the city and area as well, and other branches of the guild in nearby villages and towns.

"It's so enjoyable coming to the centre," says Marjorie Miller. "We encourage each other and it gives us added incentive. We exchange our ideas and give each other hints about ways to do different things.

"Sometimes we'll have someone come to a guild meeting to show us a particular technique, or some related skill like needlepoint. But we get a lot out of just meeting together."

Other women agree with Mrs. Miller, adding that rug-hooking is an extremely relaxing and sociable hobby.

"Another benefit to this craft is that it provides you with something beautiful and lasting—that you can really use," says Jane Sheppard, an enthusiastic rug-hooker who also gives lessons three times a week in her home.

"We're still using rugs our grandmothers hooked, that are perfectly good," she says.

"I think that one of the reasons this is becoming a more popular craft than ever is that people like the idea of making something really practical and worthwhile."

Of course, many women use the rug-hooking technique to make wall hangings, bell pulls and decorative pieces that have only artistic merit. And in this sense, rug-hooking is an art, in which the blending of colors contributes to a three-dimensional and realistic appearance of the fruits, flowers and scenes from nature that are popular subjects for both rugs and hangings.

Most of the guild members buy white wool flannel especially sold for this purpose, and then dye the material before cutting it into strips for hooking. In this way they are able to achieve the subtle variations and shadings that are so necessary for their designs.

Vi Brown, however, is currently working on a rug for a grandson, using strips of wool from old scarves, a camel hair coat and other used garments. "Making do" with materials from around the home is a traditional aspect of this craft, so much a part of this region's pioneering heritage.

BGH Auxiliary Report: Success and Progress

The Belleville General Hospital Auxiliary enjoyed a year of progress and success in 1974, says its past president, Mrs. C.D. Ashley.

In her report to the BGH board of governors annual meeting Friday, Mrs. Ashley noted the hospital's Opportunity Shop was the chief source of revenue, realizing $13,700. She added the coffee shop earned $5,100 and the gift shop took in $4,400.

She said 412 volunteers, donated 23,033 hours "to make the patients' stay in hospital brighter."

She outlined their services — planter preparation and maintenance, book and magazine distribution, patient visits, patient assistance in letter writing, messages and errands, entertainment for long-term patients, supervision of the paediatric playroom, craft arrangement for older children and helping with occupational therapy in the chronic care unit.

"The Samaritan Cup board was expanded in 1974 to include the chronic care unit where pyjamas, housecoats, slippers etc. are supplied to needy patients as well as supplying needy infants with layettes etc. on discharge," added Mrs. Ashley.

Auxiliary special treats to patients included tray favors placed on patients' trays on St. Valentine's Day, St. Patrick's ay, Hallowen and Christmas Day, a Christmas gift to each hospital and Queen's self-care unit patient, a plant to each patient at Easter, a new pair of baby bootes to each new mother on Mother's Day and 400 handmade puppets to small children on discharge from paediatrics, she listed.

Last year's auxiliary membership was 297 including 44 new members, she said.

People and Events

A show of current men's fashions from Burke's of Belleville ended the evening at the recent dinner meeting of the National Secretaries Association at the Black Hawk Motel.

Commentator Carolyn Emerson introduced eight local business men who modelled the latest look in male apparel.

The fashion show followed the announcement of Leslie Reid as NSA's Boss of the Year, in whose honor the occasion was held.

WCTU CONVENTION

The annual county convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union for Hastings, Prince Edward Lennox and Addington counties was held recently at the Centennial Free Methodist Church.

President Barbara Trupp welcomed the delegates and guests who joined in singing hymns to open the meeting.

National WCTU Loyal Temperance League secretary Mrs. Gordon Hitchcock of Burnaby, B.C. was guest speaker for the occasion. She talked about her work with youthful drug addicts and alcoholics.

Edna Craig of Napanee, Helen Striker and Mrs. Trupp presented prescriptive reports from their organizations.

Special music was presented by children from the Dutch Reform Christian School in Belleville.

The new officers for the next term are: Barbara Trupp, president; Laurie Lewery of Picton, vice-president, Margaret Martyn, secretary and Florence Hobbs of Trenton, treasurer.

Coming with Inflation: The $700 Suit of Clothes

TORONTO(CP)—A Toronto men's wear designer says the clothing industry could fall in a prolonged sales slump because the consumer has begun setting price ceilings on clothing.

Morris Gay, owner of a Toronto custom tailor firm, said 1974 was one of the most successful years in history for the women's fashion industry, but men's clothing entered what could become the worst depression since the 1930s.

"We've heeded the crisis as an industry," he said.

"Major price increases have to come soon in women's and children's wear," Mr. Gay said in an interview. "What we need is some kind of moratorium, at least until economists, management, labor and governments can a body to re-evaluate the entire system-from textile mills to consumers."

He said sales could be increased if labor, management and government worked together on a campaign to lower prices and improve quality.

Mr. Gay said a made-to-measure man's suit in the 1960s may cost $700. His prediction is based on a five-fold price increase in the last 25 years and an existing inflation rate of about 15 per cent a year.

He said the retail price of suits was about $20 and vests were often included when his father entered the industry in the 1920s.

"When I got into the industry in the late 1940s we retailed suits at $50 to $60," Mr. Gay said. "In the 1970s we have seen the advent of the $300 to $400 tailored-to-measure suit."

Pressures at the retail level are the greatest ever, he said.

"At all levels, we have labor-intensive elements, each demanding a greater share of the profits," he said. "We have governments of all kinds taking a larger slice of the pie."

Mr. Gay said he wants government to re-evaluate Canada's textile importing policies, assess the industry's potential in domestic and foreign markets and establish price and production goals that would make Canada self-sufficient in textiles and clothing.

Ann Landers

Salt and Pepper Ruined Breakfast

Dear Ann Landers: Something peculiar happened to me this morning. Usually I eat breakfast at home but my wife is visiting her sister and I decided to treat myself to a big breakfast downtown at a fast-food place.

I sat at a counter next to an average-looking guy. When my bacon and eggs came I picked up my fork (sculpting your omm at the same time). All of a sudden this guy next to me says, "How can you eat eggs without salt and pepper?" I looked at him and didn't even answer—just kept reading your column. Out of the clear, blue sky, the guy reaches over for the salt and pepper and sprinkles a load over my bacon and eggs. Then he grabs his

I was plenty burned and told the waitress the restaurant owed me another order. She said, "Sorry, we aren't responsible for the nuts who come in here. If you want a second order you'll have to pay for it." Well, I did, but I still don't think it was fair. Do you?—R. in O. City

Dear O.: The restaurant should have served you a second order for nix—as a matter of good will.

Next time, eat elsewhere.

Dear Ann Landers: My mother-in-law has a photo album lying on her coffee table in the living room. Everyone who comes into that house sees it. There are several pictures in that album of my husband with his former girl friend.

I was heartsick when my mother-in-law sat our young daughters down the other day and showed them pictures of their daddy with "a sweet-heart he had before he knew your mommy."

I am so upset I don't want the girls to go over there any more. I'd gladly supply my mother-in-law with recent snapshots of the child-en if she would agree to take out the pictures of my husband with his old flame, but I'd hate for her to know I'm so disturbed. What should I do?—Seething

Dear S.: For heaven's sake, Girl, open your mouth and tell your mother-in-law how you feel. She's no mind-reader.

Hand her some replacements and ask if she'd mind. It's crule to suffer in silence when two sentences could put an end to your misery.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 26, divorced for three years, and have a child. My so-called sweetheart and I have lived together for two years. Finally Mack asked me to marry him. That was three months ago. I made plans for a beautiful, intimate wedding. The invitations were out, the cake ordered and my dress and shoes bought. One week before the big day Mack decided he couldn't go through with it. He claimed he loved me, but he just couldn't "give up his freedom."

Frustrated and fed up, I left him. Since that time Mack has been begging me to marry him.

I believe he is truly sorry for what he did, but I'm so turned off I can't recapture that old feeling.

What's wrong with me? Am I crazy? Or, am I just out of love?—Mixed Up

Dear Mixed: I don't think you're crazy. I think you're wise for not wanting to marry a man who stood you up at the altar. Now you must decide whether or not you want to keep seeing Mack (and allow him to wear down your resistance) or write him off and hope you meet a stable man with whom you can establish a solid relationship.

Doris Clark

Happy Wife Wants Separate Holiday

Dear Doris: Would I sound like an unhappy wife if I were to suggest that I might enjoy a certain tour alone better than when my husband comes along ? It is not that we do not enjoy a great many things together; but Mac is fussier about how things are handled.

I am inclined to just enjoy the scenery and the unusual places we see. And I love new adventures.

We care a lot about each other and he loves me. I should not take serious interest in anyone else, not for the world.

Don't Pence Me In.

Dear Don't: When we join forces with another individual (as in marriage) we gain much, even though we may lose a little. Yea's ago (in The Prophet) it was suggested that in marriage two people should stand together but not in each other's shadow.

Recently there has been an excellent book on the subject entitled "Open Marriage". The husband and wife authors (Nena and George O'Neill) have given a good deal of thought to continuing freedom within marriage; to do some things and enjoy some company without their mates. It is not referring to sexual freedom but the freedom to get self expression.

So if a wife wants to join a bowling team, and the husband would rather have an evening in conversation (in either case involving both sexes) they can go their separate way and meet later to share their experiences. Done with full understanding, this can result in broaden horizons than if the two people tend to stand too close together with a fence around them.

Haute Couture to Ready-to-Wear

MONTREAL (CP) — Leo Chevalier's name is synonymous with Canadian haute couture, as he has dressed some of the most chic and fashionable women in his native Montreal and New York.

Recently Chevalier turned away from exclusive couture, finding it no longer profitable. He now designs for ready-to-wear manufacturers. But his distinctive label is always there, that mark of good taste and excellence by which the 36-year-old designer has made his reputation.

For nine years Chevalier has designed a better price range of coats, suits and expensive sportswear for Sportroy. His coats are famous for their simple elegance.

Three years ago he added a loungewear line for Van Raaa, followed by a collection for Brodkin, a dress firm. Chevalier also designed the uniforms worn by stewardesses and male passenger agents on Air Canada.

His name is becoming well known internationally. Boutiques in Germany, England and Japan are selling his designs, and buyers from around the world were keenly interested in his lingerie collection displayed in Paris in January.

Chevalier had set his sights on becoming an artist, and studied at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts for three years. While at art school he won scholarships for his sculptures and in 1967 he designed a number of murals for a pavilion at Expo 67.

Finally he decided to try his hand at fashion designing and took his formal three-year training at l'Ecole des Metiers Commerciaux in Montreal.

As his career unfolded, Chevalier spent much of his time as fashion co-ordination and display, plus designing dresses for two Montreal firms.

In the fall of 1966 he opened his own couture salon.

Chevalier and his wife Barbara live in an old residential district in Montreal. The couple collects Persian, pre-Columbian, African, Chinese and Japanese furniture.

Mrs. Chevalier was born in New York and writes a fashion column for a new fashion textile magazine under her maiden name, Barbara Mirman.

Chevalier is the son of a Canadian-born Irish mother and a half-French Irish father. He is three the Chevalier family back 350 years. He is fluently bilingual.

The Chevaliers would prefer to live in the country, and do so on weekends at their farm in Vermont. The youngest of Mrs. Chevalier's sons from a previous marriage is still at school.

"Until he is on his own we shall keep the Montreal house," Chevalier said.

Rounding out the family circle are a wire-haired terrier and two Tibetan Hata apsos, six-year-old Natasha and her daughter Miss Sadie Woo. They are shown regularly at shows and have collected several championship prizes.

Unprepared for Marriage, Many Russians Divorce

LENINGRAD (AP)—As she puts on her white gown and veil, Tanya is excited but apprehensive about her marriage to Sergei, which will take place in an hour.

Realizing that her preparation has been limited to newyeas, often giggly, talks with her girl-friends and fiance, she wonders, "What is it really going to be like?"

Tanya isn't alone in her uncertainty, says philosopher V. Svesenko. "Millions of young Russians plunge into wedlock every year completely unprepared for the sometimes tortuous task awaiting them."

Young people must be given better preparation for the "d ematic adjustments of married life," Svesenko has written in the Young Communist League newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda.

The failure to prepare young people for conjugal life can be traced in part to an official Soviet policy which has resulted in a lack of high school and college courses on marital and sex relations, avoidance of the topic by the media and a dearth of handbooks on marriage.

Official figures show one of every four couples get divorced although it is believed the rate is actually one of three. Social scientists and officials dealing with newlyweds are alarmed and some are taking steps to correct the situation.

In Leningrad, young people who want to marry in the state's ornate wedding palace are offered lectures on marriage preparation, which cover all aspects of married life, including psychological, sexual and financial. Similar services have been established in Lithuania and the Ukraine.

"We receive many letters now from towns throughout the Soviet Union on how to set up such services," said Lidya Yerofeyeva of the Leningrad Marriage Consultation Service. "Young people, are interested in knowing the answers to all the questions that may have been looked at differently by their parents."

Interest in preparation for mar iage has skyrocketed, said Clara Emilyanova, director of the wedding palace. "The intellectual level of many young people has become much higher. They're far more curious about these problems."

Mr. Yerh said the parents of today's young people are the survivors of the Second World War, many of whom lost their homes and spouses and other relatives in the German onslaught.

"Many families have lived under hard conditions," she said. "It's difficult for them to pay attention to what their child en see as problems."

Many parents express appreciation for the guidance offered their children now and some even come to the lectures, held every night at the wedding palace, Mrs. Verh said.

"Sometimes the parents are not satisfied with the selection made by their sons or daughter and they want to know how to control them," she added with a smile. "According to the law, they can't forbid the marriage, but they want to know if anything can be done."

Most questions asked by the young people are the lectures or in private consultations deal with sex.

The lectures stress the importance of having children, explaining that "children are the happiness of the family," M'e. Emilyanova said.

The Soviet leadership is pushing for a higher birthrate to provide more workers for development of the economy.

But the lectures also recommend that families be limited to two children and that they be spaced three to four years apart.

She Carves Love Spoons

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The term "spooning," used with regard to courting couples, came from the custom of making and giving love spoons.

In order not to let the art die, a Niagara Falls woman, Mary Hughes, has turned her fascination for Welsh love spoons into a hobby of carving them.

Although Welsh love spoons originally had a cutlery use, like the large ladle spoon (ewal is soup or broth), the carving on the handle of the smaller spoons tells the story of love.

As the years went by, the spoon handles lost all recognition that of the domestic spoon. The decorations on them followed similar patterns from district to district in Wales as each d"pconer" copied what he saw, locally.

On a long winter's night, young lovers would sit by a large fire and the boy would whittle a spoon. He would decorate it with love tokens, hearts, his and her initials, sometimes the date, locks keys and knots and present it to his lady love.

If she accepted it, they were betrothed.

Other symbols on love spoons have particular significance. Some have two bowls sprouting from one handle. This means "we two are one."

Others had wheels signifying that the "spooner" would work hard for his loved one. Keys and keyholes or miniature houses meant "my house is yours."

Similarly, one heart meant "my heart is yours" and two hearts on a single handle, "we was mutual.

Welsh love spoons were individualistic and were intended to be the heart of the donor had for his sweetheart but could not express in words.

Each spoon was traditionally carved from one piece of wood.

Mrs. Hughes began her hobby after a trip to Wales in 1966. A friend there who made the spoons gave her the impetus by presenting her with the necessary woodworking tools.

Clifford Urges Ford To Replace Kissinger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former U.S. defence secretary Clark Clifford says the imminent fall of Saigon to Communist control signals the failure of Henry Kissinger's policies in Indochina and around the world.

He called on President Ford to replace Kissinger as state secretary and senior White House foreign policy adviser.

"While Mr. Kissinger was having successes, his star rose meteorically," Clifford said. "Now when the inevitable reverses occur, his star seems to be falling just as fast as when it went up."

Clifford, the last defence secretary under the Democratic administration of the late President Lyndon Johnson, said in an interview that Kissinger and former president Nixon needlessly sacrificed 20,000 U.S. lives and $70 billion to $80 billion by not withdrawing U.S. troops from Vietnam as soon as they succeeded the Democratic administration to power in 1969.

Nova Scotian Indians Occupy Small Island

PICTOU LANDING, N.S. (CP) — A small uninhabited island in Merigomish Harbor that has been occupied by a group of Indians from the Pictou Landing reserve is just one of a number of land claims that will be made in the area, band Chief Albert Denny said Sunday.

A group of Micmacs, said to be carrying firearms, moved onto the seven-acre island Saturday, and were still encamped Sunday night. Chief Denny said they plan to stay until their claim is recognized.

Henry Boy of Lisacy, N.S., also claims ownership of the island, known locally as Mulless Island, but said Sunday he did not want to make any comment on the matter. An Indian affairs spokesman also declined immediate comment.

Chief Denny said the band has a document from the federal Indian affairs department which states that the band owns the island as well as an adjacent island where the Indians held religious ceremonies each year.

He also declined to say how many individuals were taking part in the occupation or how they were armed.

Going Dutch

DARTFORD, England (CP) — "The chance of a Dutch woman winning the prize was a million-to-one shot," said the organizer of a bingo club contest, but Dutch born Wilhemina Burnsby came up lucky. For years she had been longing to visit her mother and now she will do that during the four-day prize trip to Holland.

Canadian Chess Better

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian chess will continue on the way up as long as "interest and financial support" continue, visiting Soviet grandmaster Paul Keres said Sunday.

Keres is in Montreal for the first leg of a three-city Canadian tour. He is giving instruction to promising young players in Montreal and Toronto and will play in an open tournament in Vancouver.

Election Winners Moving Cautiously

LISBON (AP) — The two moderate parties that won last week's election are moving cautiously despite their strong victory.

The Communist party, which finished third with 12.5 per cent of the vote, warned that first-place Socialists that an alliance with the "bourgeois" Popular Democratic party, which ran second, would put them in conflict with the radical military officers who dominate the ruling Revolutionary Council.

Socialist party chief Mario Soares, whose party attracted more than 37 per cent of the vote in the election Friday for a constitutional assembly, said his party will join forces only with parties of the left. But he said it will not make "an exclusive alliance with the Portuguese Communist party."

Soares also said the Popular Democrats, a centrist party who got 26 per cent of the vote, should remain in the provisional government.

The six major parties agreed before the election to a draft constitution providing for four more years of military rule. But officials of both the Socialist and Popular Democratic parties say they feel the outcome of the election promises a genuine parliamentary democracy, although it will be some time arriving.

The radical officers running the country gave every advantage to the Communist party and were stunned at where the party finished in the voting.

Get in There Pitching

A night out costs a guy a bundle these days.

I mean, it's got so bad an entertainment seeker with a yen to spice his evening with a little recreation, needs a part time job to finance his weekly diversion.

But hold it.

The newly formed Quinte Area Harmony League seems answer.

Members of teams in that organization will shell out a $3-registration fee for the season. After that, the cost is 50 cents per night.

If those are not reasonable rates, Dave Schultz is a candidate for the Lady Byng Trophy.

What launched the interest in the barbershop league?

George Wilson, president of the loop, explains that for the past two years, teams from 418 Wing RCAF Association and Royal Canadian Legion Branch 99 hooked up in regular pitchfork contests.

Lord Gregory of 418 Wing, now treasurer of the league, laid the early groundwork and interest has grown rapidly.

Already, 12 teams have entered and more are expected to join the fun.

Each team will be allowed to carry 10 players, six plus four spares, to ensure each of the entries will not be hurt by loss of members during vacation and other commitments.

Branch 99 is represented by four teams. Belleville Electric has two; 418 Wing, three; Hasty Pines, Prudential, Trenlow Fire Department, Trent Valley Fish and Game Club and Belleville Fire Department, one each and Canadian Forces Base Trenton Junior Ranks Club, two.

Listed as possibles are teams from ANAF, Deseronto, Royal Canadian Legion Tweed Branch and two more from CFB Trenton.

A general meeting is set for Branch 99 in the executive rooms, Thursday at 7 p.m.

Representatives of other groups interested in entering teams are invited to attend.

It is expected rules and regulations will be drawn up and the date for the official league opening set, in the near future.

"It is strictly a fun league," stresses the league president, "so the season progresses, we'll grade the players so that we don't have the better one playing those who aren't as proficient."

We want to keep things on a competitive level and avoid lopsided results as much as possible.

"Nothing kills interest faster than having an uneven balance, talent-wise; and every effort will be made to rule out that possibility," said Wilson.

League play will take place through the week, leaving weekends open for the playoffs.

Rounding out the executive are Bob Shepherd, vice, president and Sid Scott, secretary.

The newest member of the division area's sports family is one game where close counts.

Hmmmm, even this weekend, out of sheer frustration, thumper might be able to find the kind of exercise that pastime offers.

It's a thought. And with me, that's probably as far as it will go.

GEORGE WILSON

Shabby Show at Gardens

Howard 'Cosell called it a carnival.

But isn't there some amusement connected with a carnival?

Side-show would have been a better choice of words.

I refer, of course, to the Saturday George Foreman fiasco carried live on ABC-TV.

Disgusting?

It was that at least.

Foreman waded through his five opponents while the reigning heavyweight champion of the world, Muhammad Ali screamed instructions at the question-able quintet established for what Cosell also described as a charade.

Perhaps only four of the five received the benefit of Ali's ringside coaching. Seems to me the champ had to leave early — something about an appointment in Florida.

Believe me if you missed it, you are to be envied.

I stuck with it, but between the beginning and end of a truly entertaining tennis challenge won by Jimmy Connors over John Newcombe simply because I couldn't believe what was going on.

Could he I was expecting someone or something to salvage proceedings from the wreck can where they certainly should have been deposited.

It was ludicrous.

Whatever it was, it was not a sports event.

Promoters of this piece of nonsense should be drummed out of the boxing game.

The real tragedy is that this alleged exhibition is boxing and its accompanying ballyhoo were allowed to take place in Canada, and at Maple Leaf Gardens.

It will be fortunate indeed if the stench is removed from that building in time for next hockey season.

A few years back professional boxing was being mourned. It was dead

It was an unlucky day that the slumbering price fighting game was awakened.

Promoter Don King the's the same genius who gave us Ali vs Joe Wepner and the real may yet infer boxing for good.

That expectation is the one bright spot in what was a Saturday's shenanigans.

We live in hope and with the realization that when the inevitable does happen, the death knell will fall on deaf ears.

Oshawa Picks Oliver

For the second time in the past few years, Oshawa has found promising young athlete talent in Trenton and taken steps to secure it.

First, it was Paul Wansbrouker. He answered the call to the Motor City, played one year with the Oshawa Sentpiz Juniors and moved right in to sesjer company the following season and has been a fixture with Oshawa Tony's ever since Another right-hander, Rob Oliver, is the latest Trenton product to accept an Oshawa offer.

"A 6-foot-3, 185 lb. prospect, Oliver lists hockey, football and squash in the list of sports which keep him active.

He won't be moving to Oshawa until school is out in June.

Right now, he's busy working to round himself into top shape.

"Team workouts in Oshawa are held indoors right now and the emphasis is on conditioning," he says.

"I can work out on my own at home and get in some pitching practice before it's time to report to Oshawa," he adds.

"I've met some of the fellows who will be on the team and I'm looking forward to getting started."

The start will come soon enough.

Oshawa Atlantas Flyers open the season, May 23

Oliver was with Trenton Dickin's Sports and Ilait last season when the squad captured Ontario Amateur Softball Association (OASA) Midget B honours.

An 18-year-old, Rob signed recently with Oshawa Atlantas Flyers, an OASA Junior A team formerly known as Charterways.

Bill Dickson, Oliver's midget coach for two years, says the big fellow has plenty of speed and a good assortment of 'stuff.'

"But his big asset is that he can use it to keep the ball on the knees in the strike zone," offers Dickson.

Sunny Sunday brought out summer sports buffs by the number in and around the city. Parks were busy with ball practices. Golfers were shaking the rust from their game and at Zwick's Island, many were getting back into the swing of tennis. One foursome at the Zwick's tennis court was made up of two couples who are recent arrivals to Belleville. Pat Driscoll and his wife Patty hail from Albany, Georgia. Fred and Kathy Zambrotki came "south" to Canada from Cheboygan, Michigan, a community which lies about 100 miles further north than the Quinte area. Pat and Fred are employed at Procter and Gamble here. Kathy puts everything into forehand to return ball during warmup session on a chilly morning. That's Fred taking in the action.

Italo-Canadians Grab 3-2 Exhibition Victory

TRENTON — Oscar Nespolo's second goal of the game snapped a 2-2 tie and gave Italo-Canadians a 3-2 win over Quinte Hellenic in an exhibition Bay of Quinte Soccer Association (BQSA) play here, Sunday.

Italo owned a 2-1 lead at half time but Hellenic fought back to get on even terms after the interval, setting the stage for Nespolo's game winner off a cross from Larry Woolley.

Hellenic opened the scoring when Dave Gibson took advantage of an Italo defensive lapse to put the ball past Italo goalkeeper Eddie Coculuzzi with a well placed shot.

Italo got its game together after that and kept the pressure on Hellenic, potting a pair of goals and missing several other excellent chances.

Nick Del Grosso got the equalizer and Nespolo made persistence pay off when he connected after Brian Stevenson and Del Grosso took turns shooting the ball off the goal posts.

The lose Hellenic goal in the second half came off a shot from the penalty spot. Vincent Di Cesare and Stevenson made no mistake on the free try.

Del Grosso and Stevenson were solid for the winners. Veteran Zoltan Czantar put in a strong effort for the losers.

It was the first game of the season for both clubs.

Hellenic will play in the Eastern Ontario Premier League as well as the BQSA.

Things Look Healthy For Broomball League

Having just completed its second year of operation, the Belleville Broomball League is already looking ahead to the 1975-76 season when it is expected the grouping will grow from four to six teams

A and J Restaurant was the big winner during the 1974-75 campaign, taking first place honors and adding the playoff title to its credit.

Captained by Paul Greenwood, the team was made up of Gord Yearwood, Mike Paquette, Ray Hall, Ron Cannons, Larry Wannamaker, Claude Latulippe, Bruce Bigelow, Warren Morash, Gilles Paradis, Don Lane, Kevin Allen, Yvon Lamer, Ted Arthurs and Henry Sonnevelt.

Paquette also took first place in the scoring derby and received a trophy donated by Chiasson's Trophies.

Arte's Ease took the consolation playoff title. Members of the team are Joel Trudeau, Richard Belch, Alex Belch, Grant Brummell, Hal Murray, Gary Hughes, Jim Parks, Andy Prudden, Jim McLaren, Dave Fox, Calvin Acorn, Ron Hedden, Duane Dryden, Ken Foreman and Wayne Trick.

A and J received the Carling-O'Keefe Trophy and its individual awards. Each of the Arte's Ease players also received a Carling-O'Keefe award.

Olympics Shaded In Five

The Belleville Olympics, fourth place finishers in last year's 30-team tournament, fell short on five separate occasions on Saturday as they took only two points in five starts at the annual Ottawa Invitational Indoor Soccer Tournament.

In five contests, the locals were only outscored by a total of four goals, but still could not manage a win.

Because of their finish last year, the Olympics were put in the toughest of the five groups. They battled to a scoreless draw with Car Lan Ltd., from New York State in their opener and then tied Ottawa Jap Hawks 1-1. Ottawa Blue Jays nipped them 1-0 and Montreal Hotelieres blanked them 2-0. Ironically, the eventual grand champions of the two-day event, edged Olympics 2-1.

Goalie Gary Donovan played well in spotlight the tournament and in the final game switched positions to left wing and scored the Olympics' only goal. In their 1-1 tie, John O'Neill tallied for the locals. Though he didn't score, Colin Baillie also came up with a strong showing.

Lacrosse Registrations Continue

Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association closed out its regular pre-season registration sessions on the weekend, but officials have extended the final signing date for another couple of weeks to accommodate even the worst procrastinators.

Team rosters will be formed within the next two weeks, but late registrations may change lineups.

Anyone still wishing to sign up for lacrosse may do so by visiting the Recreation and Arena Building, Pinnacle Street, during regular office hours.

Italo-Canadians' goalie Eddie Coculuzzi, eyes glued to the ball, has close call as two teammates (light sweaters) rush to the rescue. Coculuzzi, getting his first taste of action as a goalie, came up a winner as Italo-Canadians nipped Quinte Hellenic 3-2 in exhibition match at Trenton's Centennial Park. Both new teams on the area soccer scene, they'll be part of the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association. Hellenic has also entered the Eastern Ontario Premier League.

No Decision Reached On Oakridge Protest

Ontario Minor Hockey Association secretary-manager Vern McCallum said this morning that no decision has been reached concerning a protest lodged by Oakridge Acres Champion hockey club against Trenton Birt's Handy Stand team.

The two teams recently completed the OMHA Juvenile AA final series with Trenton challenging up an unprecedented third straight championship.

McCallum expects a decision will be handed down late today. He said the delay was caused by the fact that some members of the OMHA executive who will be dealing with the matter, were not available on the weekend.

The Oakridge protest was based on a practice employed by the Trenton team in its coaching system.

Roger Drake and Frank Chard alternated as signed-in coach during the playoffs.

It was Chard who signed the OMHA game report in the sixth game of the series at Riderton when Oakridge won 7-4 and the Trenton team surpassed the 35-minute limit for penalties.

That meant the Trenton coach would have to sit out the next game and Oakridge claimed in its protest that Drake, whether or not his name was on the game report, was indeed the coach of the team.

Drake coached the team in the seventh game and Trenton won the championship on home ice, 6-3.

Oakridge officials also suggested to the OMHA that Trenton players were instructed to provoke fights in the sixth game with the aim of putting the Oakridge team's penalty total over the limit.

Trenton team manager Gary Birt explained to the OMHA that the club used the two-coach system regularly with the man who was not coaching assuming the responsibilities of trainer for that game.

He said the practice had not been questioned until the sixth game.

Birt denied that any Trenton player was ever instructed to engage in fighting.

Intermediate Class COSSA Entries Place Fourth

TORONTO (Special) — Central Ontario, represented by three girls from the Bay of Quinte Secondary School Athletic Association, finished fourth over all in intermediate at the Ontario Federation of School Athletic Association girls gymnastics championships at York University here, on Saturday.

Moira Secondary School student, Leslie Claney, topped the list of central Ontario intermediate finishers with a mark of 7.55 points for her efforts on the balance beam, and her floor routine went very well. Michelle Harrison scored a 6.35 in novice bars.

Another Belleville student, Wendy Donovan, from Belleville Collegiate, was the best of Central Ontario competitors in the senior class with a third place finish in uneven bars.

Oshawa's Judy Lodge came fourth over all in elite. Michelle Wood, from Norwood, was fourth in intermediate uneven bars. Bonnie Douglas-Hecker, from Lindsay, was sixth in intermediate uneven bars, and Gail Sloan, from Peterborough Collegiate, was fourth in intermediate vault.

It was the first time Central Ontario had placed as high as fourth in intermediate overall, at the Ontario level.

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP) — Dave White of Bramalea, Ont., won the season-opening Bulova Formula 100 auto race Sunday over 22 laps of Mosport's road course.

Driving a Lola, White finished ahead of runner-up Nigel Gough of Newmarket, Ont. However, Gough's Crosslet racer was found to be underweight and he was disqualified, moving John Scratch of Goderich, Ont., into second place.

That gave White a victory margin of more than 30 seconds over Scratch, who was driving a Canadian-built Ferrari. Ali Ghandi, another Canadian, finished fourth in his Lola.

While said he did not expect to be a strong contender because he hadn't raced in six months, "I was lucky other people had problems and I was in the right place at the right time."

Early leader Don Sobering of Brantford, Ont., dropped out when the exhaust pipe broke on his Crossle. Burke Harrison of Burlington, Ont., another early leader, withdrew his Dulon with electrical damage.

Heinz Szierk of Toronto, driving a Hawke, placed third, followed by Mike Strawbridge of Amber, Pa., in a Hawke and James Holston of Lindsay, Ont., driving a Lola.

In the 20-lap Bulova sedan fit, Paul Lumbke of Cambridge, Ont., drove his Datsun to victory by seven seconds over second-place Walsun driver, Robert Ripley of Toronto. Lee White of Whitby, Ont., was third in a Pinto.

Danny Gare

Sabre Rookie Fires Winner

BUFFALO (CP) — Gare's Gang was ecstatic Sunday over for good reason.

Their hero, rookie right-winger Danny Gare, scored at 6:42 of the first sudden-death overtime period to give Buffalo Sabres a 5-4 victory over Montreal Canadiens in the opening game of their best-of-seven National Hockey League semi-final.

And as the red light went on, Gare's Gang, Gare's personal fan club in Buffalo, rose as part of the 15,863 partisan Buffalo crowd to give Gare and the Sabres a standing ovation.

Gare broke down the ice along with linemates Craig Ramsay and Don Luce, took a pass from Ramsay and fired a shot from the right-wing faceoff circle past Montreal goalie Ken Dryden.

"I stayed wide to make sure I was parallel to the blue line," Gare said. "Craig got me the puck. I saw it low and I think it went between his legs. As I chopped it, it went by me and I fell into the boards. When I looked up the puck was in the net."

Earlier in the game, Gare was not so lucky when a pass out by Jacques Lemaire of Montreal struck Gare's stick and deflected behind Buffalo goalie Roger Crozier with 24 seconds left in regulation, time to tie the score at 5-5.

Richard Martin, Rene Robert, Rick Middleton, Perreault and Jim Lorentz scored for the Sabres in regulation time while Guy Lapointe got two for Montreal and Guy Lafleur, Yvon Cournoyer and Lemaire added single scorers.

The Sabres led 3-2 at the end of the opening period but the Canadiens outscored them 2-1 in the second.

Buffalo controlled play for much of the final period, outshooting Montreal 15-4, but only Lorentz managed to beat Dryden with a close shot with 4:20 gone.

"I think Buffalo had the momentum," said Montreal coach Scotty Bowman. "We didn't have much momentum in the third period. We didn't have anything going in the third.

Playing on both clubs agreed that the second game of the series scheduled here for Tuesday night will probably feature better defensive play.

"I look for us to tighten up," said Sabres captain Jim Schoenfeld. "You can't make any mistakes against them. They're so quick."

Montreal captain Henri Richard, playing his first game after missing five months with a knee ankle, said the Canadiens would have to forecheck better than they did Sunday.

"We have to check them in their own end," he said. "We can't give them a chance to wind up.

Lapointe was inserted into the Montreal lineup after right-winger Steve Shutt suffered twisted knee ligaments in practice Saturday afternoon in Montreal. Shutt was listed as a centre on a line with Jim Roberts and Glen Sather.

Sabres goalie Gerry Desjardins left the game with a badly bruised right knee with only 56 seconds gone in the opening period after he collided with Montreal's Bob Gainey.

Daigle, another Sabres casualty, left the game with a bruised left leg in the second period when he crashed into the boards after missing a scoring chance.

Crozier replaced Desjardins and appeared sharp in his first playoff appearance this season.

The Sabres had 43 shots at Dryden while Montreal had 31 at the Buffalo net.

Following Tuesday's game, the series will shift to Montreal for games Thursday and Saturday.

Springfield Team Measures Up

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

A tape measure helped Springfield Indians get into the American Hockey League finals Sunday night.

With a minute to play and the Indians nursing a 4-3 lead against Rochester Americans, Springfield coach Ron Stewart asked that the stick of Rochester's Ron Garwasiuk be measured.

Garwasiuk drew a minor penalty when the curvature of his stick was found to be illegal and the Indians held on for a 4-3 win and a 4-3 win in the best-of-seve semi-final.

That put the Indians in the best-of-seven Calder Cup final against New Haven Nighthawks, who eliminated Hershey Bears by beating them 6-3 Saturday night, taking the semi-final 4-1.

The final begins Tuesday night at Springfield.

Jeff Serring, champion Doug Gibson of Rochester had cut Springfield's lead to one goal when he scored at 16:18 of the third period after Americans' coach Dick Mattiussi pulled goaltender Dave Reece in favor of a sixth attacker when Springfield drew a penalty.

Phil Hoene had scored what turned out to be the winning goal less than three minutes earlier.

A Springfield crowd of 6,650 saw Jim Peters, Dale Lewis and Paul Shakes add a goal each for the Indians, Jean Houiseau and Ray Malota score the other Rochester scorers.

At Hershey, the Nighthawks built a 6-1 mark by the 15-minute mark in the second period Saturday night on goals by Ron Wilson, Dave Cressman, Bob Crook, Alain Lanthier, Rod Norrish and Scott MacPhail.

Yves Bergeron scored once for the Bears and drew assists on Hershey's other two goals scored by Paul McIntosh and Derek Smith.

Referee John McCauley assessed 98 minutes in penalties, including game misconducts to Hershey's Jean Landry and Larry Bignell.

The final matches the teams that brought up the rear in the Northern Division during the AHL's regular schedule.

Saints Keep Bouncing Back

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Quebec Nordiques just couldn't seem to stay in front of Minnesota Fighting Saints but Houston Aeros had little trouble with San Diego Mariners in weekend World Hockey Association playoff action.

The Nordiques took a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven semi-final with a 6-1 win over the Saints in Minnesota on Saturday night but Minnesota came back to tie the series for the second time with a 4-2 victory

The series resumes Tuesday in Quebec.

The other semi-final switches to Houston tie for the next three games starting Tuesday following the Aeros' second win at San Diego by a 3-1 count Sunday.

Minnesota goalie John Garrett was the hero Sunday night, stopping 39 shots.

"We've seemed to play better all year when our backs are against the wall," said Minnesota coach Harry Howe. "Garrett was the star, but our whole club played personally well."

"It's sure feel better leaving here after this game than it did Saturday," said Garrett, who suffered through Saturday's loss.

"Our team really checked and that's what made the difference."

Quebec goal is Richard Brodeur, who was equally sharp in the nets, accepted the setback philosophically.

"They (Minnesota) are a freewheeling, dangerous kind of a team and they're going to get some," said the 6-3-year-old Brodeur. "But they've still got to beat us out of this on our ice."

Fran Huck got the tiebreaker when he carried a pass from Wayne Connelly past two Quebec defenders and scored in on top of Brodeur at 12:02 of the first period for the score to give Minnesota a 3-2 lead.

OTTAWA (CP) — Gord Duncan scored three times Sunday for Guelph Biltmores, but it was not enough to tie up the eastern Centennial Cup junior hockey championship as Smiths Falls Bears won the game 6-3 before 2,509 fans.

The victory extended Smiths Falls hopes and took the best-of-seven tier two series back to Guelph for a sixth game Tuesday.

Penguins Can't Stop Islanders

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

New York Islanders, the team no one expected to qualify for the National Hockey League playoffs, today look forward to a tough semi-final series against Philadelphia Flyers.

The Islanders qualified for the semi-finals when they edged out Pittsburgh Penguins 1-0 on Eddie Westfall's third-period goal Saturday night.

The victory gave the surprising Islanders a 4-3 games win over the Penguins who had won the first three games of the quarter-final series.

Only once before, in 1942 when Toronto Maple Leafs beat Detroit Red Wings in the Stanley Cup final, had a club won an NHL playoff series by coming back to take the last four games.

The Islanders now go against the tough defending Cup champion Flyers in Philadelphia starting Tuesday night.

"You know it's funny, no one gave us a chance to beat out Atlanta for the playoffs," said Islanders general manager Bill Torrey after Saturday's victory. "No one gave us a chance to beat the Rangers. And when we were down 3-0, no one gave us a chance.

"Well, whatever we're called, we're just a sound hockey team working like hell to try and do the best we can."

Pittsburgh coach Marc Boileau said he was shocked and disappointed. Then he corrected himself: "I don't know how the hell I could say shock. I can't believe it."

Although outshot 20-17 in the final game, the Islanders got good goaltending from Glenn Resch and Westfall provided the only goal they needed when he slipped a backhand past Garry Inness late in the third period.

At Buffalo, the Sabres won their high-scoring semi-final opener on rookie Danny Gare's goal at 4:42 of the first overtime.

Marlies Take Lead

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Marlboros, led by John Shirke's three goals, exploded for five third-period goals Sunday to beat Hamilton Fincups 5-3 in the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A Robertson Cup final and take a 6-4 lead in the eight-point series.

Archie King and Joe Contini scored for Hamilton in the second after a scoreless first period. Toronto came to life in the final period with Shirke's goals and singles by Mike Kaszycki and Lynn Jorgenson

Greg Clause netted Hamilton's third-period goal.

Both netminders, Gary Carr for Toronto and Mike Clark for Hamilton, were busy as Hamilton outshot Toronto 36-30. Toronto drew nine of the 17 penalties handed out.

Game six is scheduled for Tuesday in Hamilton.

Flyers Decide To Pack It In

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Defending champion Barrie Flyers Sunday turned their backs on Eastern Canadian Allan Cup senior hockey final against St. John's Capitals after a stormy three games marred by violence.

Although leading the best-of-five series two games to one, the Barrie team will by home said.

The series, which began Friday, was marred from the start by fights, injuries, suspensions and general hostility. After a bench-clearing brawl Sunday which sent two Barrie players to hospital, Coates announced the decision to go home. Another Barrie player had suffered a broken arm Friday in rough play.

Outcome of the series was in doubt late Sunday. Jack Devine, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said he had not been officially informed that Barrie had withdrawn and would make no comment.

Barrie won the first two games and were leading the series 2-0 Sunday when the bench-clearing brawl broke out near the end of the first period.

Referee John Kelly of Labrador City, Nfld., ordered both teams to their dressing rooms for a cooling-off period. But Barrie refused to return, and the CAHA awarded the game to St. John's 5-0.

Playing coach Darryl Sly said Barrie refused to return because "we didn't have enough players." Penalties from Sunday's fight, a previous suspension, and injuries had put 7/4 of the team's defensive line out of the ice either temporarily or permanently.

Club president Coates said he had decided to pull out with his families and jobs on the ice and "let Canada mob us, and face a team that doesn't want to play hockey but just abuse us."

After the Flyers forfeited the game, the CAHA slapped with definite suspensions on Sly and Coates.

The CAHA also suspended four players, including Sly, from participating in the rest of the series. The other three were Ken Graston of Barrie, and Brian Mulcahy and Bob Lambert of St. Johns.

Sunday's suspensions brought to three the number of Barrie players thrown out of the series. Jack Smith was suspended indefinitely for cross-checking Lambert at full speed from behind during the game together.

The Flyers second top scorer, Phil Branston, suffered a broken arm in Friday's game and in Sunday's fight two players were taken to hospital. Gerry Bayroff had double vision and Gary Mostelli had a broken nose.

Coates, who is both president and general manager of the Flyers, claimed that Bayroff was kicked in the face and Mostelli was hit by an elbow from his stands.

Fans needed the Flyers throughout the series and the final insult came Sunday when the team had to return to their hotel in a paddy wagon because someone had deflated the tires of their small rented bus.

The Flyers had built their 2-1 lead in Sunday's game on goals by Ron Robinson and Ken Rumka after Charlie Rabstock gave the Caps a brief 1-0 lead. Each team had served three minor penalties before the brawl erupted.

The fight cost St. John's two game misconducts, two five minute fighting majors and 400 minutes in penalties. Barrie took two game misconducts, three five-minute fighting majors and six 10-minute misconducts.

Barrie won the opener 8-4 and won the second 6-5 in overtime after leading by 4-0 in seconds from the end of regulation play when the teams were scoreless until 2:17 of the second overtime period when Don Pagnini tipped in the winner for Barrie.

All the games were rough and 400 minutes in penalties had been assessed in the almost seven periods of hockey played.

The brawl Sunday started with a fight between Mulcahy of St. John's and Knapton of Barrie. Then Lambert and St. John's and playing coach Darryl Sly of Barrie began exchanging punches, and the benches cleared.

Lambert, a tough defenceman and favorite of hometown fans, was in front and had the bad blood between the two teams. Knapton was high after he was carried bleeding from the ice in the first game Friday following the attack by Smith.

Besides costing Lambert a broken jaw and stitches, an indefinite suspension, the incident left off the first bench-clearing melee of the series. After that, there was no peace on the ice or in the stands.

Lambert was confined to a wheelchair in hospital as late as 1 p.m. Saturday, but by 8 p.m. that night he was back on the ice. His return drew a standing ovation.

In Sunday's fight, only a few players had actually exchanged blows. The others paired off and held onto each other.

The Catfish Is Back And Brewers Know It

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pitcher Jim (Catfish) Hunter paid the first dividend on New York Yankees' $3-million investment in him Sunday afternoon.

He came within four outs of pitching the New York Yankees' first no-hitter since Larsen's perfect game in the 1956 World Series. Hunter, relieving for a three-hit, 10-1 triumph over Milwaukee Brewers in the second game of an American League baseball doubleheader.

And it came just when the New York Yankees were starting to wonder whether the fellow they shelled out all that money for was the same pitcher who won 88 games in the last four years for the Oakland A's.

He brought an 0-3 record and 7.36 earned run average into the game.

CATFISH HUNTER

"I might have gotten more publicity by losing than winning," Hunter said. "I think it will settle down now."

Hunter had to share the spotlight with Milwaukee's Hank Aaron, whose two-run double in the Brewers' 7-0 victory in the opener enabled him to tie Babe Ruth's 2,213 for the all-time run-batted-in list with 2,209.

In Sunday's other American League games, Detroit Tigers edged Boston Red Sox 4-3, Baltimore Orioles trimmed Cleveland Indians 4-1, Oakland A's whipped California Angels 7-1, but dropped nightcap 9-1 and Chicago White Sox dropped Kansas City Royals 8-6.

A doubleheader at Bloomington, Minn., between Texas Rangers and Minnesota Twins was rained out.

On Saturday, the Yankees trounced the Brewers 10-1, the Rangers whipped the Twins 7-2, the Tigers nipped the Red Sox 3-2, the Indians beat the Orioles 3-0 in the first game of a doubleheader, then lost the second 3-2, California edged Oakland 1-0 and the Royals beat the White Sox 8-6.

Hunter allowed Milwaukee only a third-inning walk and had retired 15 batters in a row when rookie Stein Lerskow stroked a single between third and shortstop on a 3-2 count in the eighth.

Tim Johnson followed with a bloop single and Robin Yount homered with one out in the ninth, spoiling the millionaire right-hander's shutout bid.

Milwaukee won the opener behind Pete Broberg's three-hitter. Aaron bounced a two-run double inside third base off reliever Steve Tidrow during a five-run uprising in the seventh inning, driving in runs No. 2,208 and 2,209 of his 23-year career.

According to the baseball commissioner's office Aaron now shares the career record for runs-batted-in with Babe Ruth. Some other record books give Ruth a total of 2,199.

Ben Oglivie drove in three runs, two with a homer, as the Tigers won their third in a row over the Red Sox and remained atop the American League East.

Jim Palmer, continuing his comeback from minor arm trouble, notched his third win for the Orioles, stopping Cleveland on seven hits.

California's Bruce Bochte drove in three runs with a homer and double in the night cap and then was hit in the head by a pitch, triggering a sixth-inning melee.

The A's took the opener 7-1 as Vida Blue fired a five-hitter and became the first five-game winner in the American League. He has lost once.

Bochte was struck on the helmet by a pitch from reliever Jim Todd after the Angels scored four runs in the sixth, boosting their lead to 9-1. When Bochte slumped at the plate, California manager Dick Williams, a former Oakland manager, charged from the dugout and began throwing punches in Todd's direction.

Both benches and bullpens quickly converged on the scene but no new fights broke out amidst the pushing and shoving.

Said Williams: "I had shots of him but he slipped away from me. Maybe it's a good thing for him."

Jim Kaat, with seventh-inning help from Rich Gossage, won his 10th game against one loss, two-year period as Chicago ripped three Kansas City pitchers for 17 hits.

Padres Back Down to Earth

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

After the finest week in their history, San Diego Padres are down out of the clouds.

"The next three games against Houston, will be a real test of our character," manager John McNamara said Sunday after Atlanta swept a National League baseball doubleheader from the Padres 13-8 and 4-1 to drop from first place to third in the National League West.

Last Thursday, their pitching—best in the majors to that point—and defense fell apart. In the five games since then, the Padres have given up 61 hits and 36 runs, decimating a staff earned run average that was under 2.00 during the season's first 4 games.

Of equal concern, the club has been charged with 12 errors in the last five games, four of which were losses. In the process, the opposition has pushed across 14 unearned runs.

Atlanta scored nine runs in the eighth inning of the first game Sunday and five were unearned as the result of a two-out error.

In the nightcap, they gave up two unearned runs as Al-Ianta right-hander Rorie Harrington limited San Diego to five hits.

In Sunday's other National League games, New York Mets edged Montreal Expos 7-6, Los Angeles Dodgers but San Francisco swept 7-3, Pittsburgh Pirates blanked Philadelphia Phillies 2-0, Cincinnati Reds topped Houston Astros 6-2 in 10 innings and a game at Chicago had the Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals was rained out.

On Saturday, the Cubs beat the Cardinals 8-6, the Pirates whipped the Phillies 7-3, the Dodgers hammered the Giants 13-3, the Reds defeated the Astros 9-3 and in Braves slopped the Padres 6-4. Cold prevented the game between the Mets and Expos at Montreal.

The Mets scored six runs in the seventh inning to wipe out a 6-1 Montreal lead. Dave Kingman started a six-run rally in the seventh with a single and scored the outburst with another single to give New York the victory.

Bob Apodaca pitched three shutout innings in relief to save the Mets' ninth win in row.

Larry Parrish drove in three runs for the Expos with a triple and single, and Gary Carter knocked in two more with a triple and double.

Willie Crawford and Lee Lacy drove in three runs each Los Angeles beat back six-hit pitching of Jerl Sutton, who won for the 16th time in 17 decisions against the last season and including playoff and World Series games.

Dock Ellis buried a six-bitter for his first win of the season after two losses. Willie Stargell knocked in the first Pittsburgh run with a ground ball in the sixth inning and Bonnie Stennett Mc-Pirates blanked Philadelphia Phillies 2-0, Cincinnati Reds in the sixth; and El Penon, $10.90 in the ninth.

Friday, Hawley won four races, and on Thursday, won five races for the second time since the meeting started two weeks ago.

Hawley said he would come back to California to ride May 3-4 because of commitments and wants to remain after that if the problem can be straightened out with United States immigration officials.

Sandy Hawley's Mark Is 34 in 14 Days

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (CP) — Sandy Hawley of Ministanga, Ont., the leading jockey at Hollywood Park, now four races Sunday to raise his total to 34 in 14 days.

Hawley, who said Friday that he planned to return to Canada after the races because of trouble over a work permit for agent Colin Wick, is 17 winds ahead of Bill Shoemaker.

Hawley won on Doc Simon, $3.60, in the first; Ely Pet, $5.40 in the third; T.V. Mission, $6.20,

Missed Putt Costs Player Geiberger Wins in Playoff

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Gary Player lost a playoff to Eddie Geiberger but had no ill feeling for his golfing opponent.

"It's nice to see the nice guys win once in a while," said Player.

But, while he gave full credit to Geiberger for the bold birdie putt that beat him in a sudden-death playoff for the title in the Tournament Players Champions. Player had some second thoughts, too.

"Now I'm going home to South Africa. It's 10,000 miles, ... Ten thousand miles is a long way to think about missing a putt."

Player missed one of about 12 feet on the playoff hole that would have extended the tourney at least another hole.

Then Geiberger, whose timidity had cost him a shot at an outright victory on the last hole of regulation play, rammed home a shorter one—about nine feet—for the birdie that secured him his seventh title in 16 years on the pro golf tour.

Geiberger went to the last hole of regulation play with a one-stroke lead over Player. He put his approach some 25 feet from the cup and needed only to get it down in two.

But he left his first putt six or seven feet short. And he missed that. It was a bogey and he and Player were tied at 277, 11 under par on the 6,835-yard La Costa Country Club course. Geiberger, leader since the second round, had a closing 72 and Player made up six shots with a 67.

Then, going to the 13th tee, Geiberger got some help.

He has had a habit of munching peanut butter sandwiches to keep up his strength on the course, a habit that was highly publicized in his 1968 PGA national championship.

"You know, maybe there's something to it. Maybe it does work. It's my secret weapon." He collected $40,000 from the total purse of $200,000.

There Is No Doubt—Connors the Best

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Jimmy Connors has erased any doubt—even in the minds of the Australians—who is the world's No. 1 tennis player and he gained himself a half-million dollars in doing so.

Armed with confidence, speed and accuracy, Connors defeated No. 2-ranked Australian John Newcombe 6-3, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4 in their Saturday challenge match.

And today, Australian newspapers crowned Connors the world's best, though none professed liking him.

"John Newcombe, looking like a tired old man, doffed his hat to Jimmy Connors, the young hell-raiser of tennis," the Sydney Daily Telegraph said.

But the newspaper went on to say: "For a sportsman, compeller— and all-around good bloke, we couldn't ask for a better emissary."

The Melbourne Sun-Pictorial carried this headline: "Smash and grab raid by the king of balls."

The victory was the first in four matches the 22-year-old southpaw from Belleville, Ill., has played against the 30-year-old Newcombe, of Sydney.

Connors collected an estimated $500,000, while Newcombe got about $300,000.

"I don't think there is any doubt," Newcombe said. "He must be No. 1."

Connors, who has made $700,000 this year, said after the match he may not have another big-money match until next year.

"They can be overdone," he said of the challenge matches.

Newcombe expressed the same sentiment. "There should be another challenge match until after the tournaments at Wimbledon and Forest Hills to see if someone is deserving," Newcombe said.

Connors broke Newcombe's serve in the fourth game of the first set and held his own in the fifth game, when Newcombe had him at game point six times.

But Newcombe took the second set by breaking Connors' serve in the 10th and final game with a brilliant cross-court shot. Connors turned in the first love game of the match in the third set when he won his serve.

Newcombe was plagued by his backhand and his highly-lauded serve appeared weak. He scored three service aces in the first, set but none after that while Connors chalked up seven aces.

The final set went to Connors when Newcombe hit into the net with a 15-40 score. The seventh game, where Connors broke Newcombe's serve, drew a storm of protest from the Australian when a shot close to the line was ruled out.

Newcombe, a three-time Wimbledon champion, said he had "got 70 per cent of my first serves in" during the recent Australian Open, but "this time I was considerably below that."

Connors said he planned to take six weeks off. He declined comment when asked about an earlier statement that he wants to get married and have a family while he is still young enough to play tennis with his children.

He once was engaged to women's tennis champion Chris Evert and still dates her.

Take That, George

Boone Kirkman of Renton, Wash., connects with left jab to foe George Foreman during exhibition boxing action in Toronto Saturday afternoon. Kirkman was one of two boxers who went three full rounds against Foreman. Foreman knocked out his first three opponents. (CP Photo)

'Fearsome Five' Face Foreman in Ring Farce

TORONTO (CP) — George Foreman was never seriously threatened Saturday when he stopped three of five journeyman boxers in a laugh-filled exhibition, but the former world heavyweight champ still emerged a loser.

It was Foreman's first ring appearance since he lost the world title to Muhammad Ali last October. He's been since trying to get a rematch with Ali whose camp has repeatedly put him off and Saturday's contest seemed to do nothing to enhance Foreman's chances of a rematch.

In fact, most of the five men who kept Foreman mildly occupied for a total of 12 rounds said they thought Foreman had slowed down and would not be able to beat Ali.

Foreman had said he would knock out all five men Saturday, each one in the second round of his three scheduled rounds.

He appeared on his way to keeping the promise when he first stopped Alonzo Johnson on a second-round technical knockout, then knocked out Jerry Judge in the second and earned another TKO in the second over Terry Daniels.

But Ali, working as a television commentator at ringside, advised the fourth man, Charlie Polite, to keep his hands up and hide on the ropes.

Polite took the advice and survived the three rounds, as did Boone Kirkman, the only one of the five who had ever gone against Foreman before, losing on a second-round knockout in 1970.

After the exhibition, attended by 10,200 who booed Foreman and cheered for his five opponents and cheered loudest for Ali, Foreman said he was ready for another such contest of five rounds each against three opponents—Ali, Joe Frazier and Ken Norton.

But Ali's camp showed no interest. Ali now faces against Ron Lyle on May 16, has just agreed to meet England's Joe Bugner some time before the end of July and has tentative plans to meet Frazier in September.

From the time he entered the ring Saturday, tossing a chair at Ali on the way, until he retreated to the dressing room, most of the fans booed him.

The whole affair had a carnival atmosphere, beginning even before Foreman arrived. Fans crowded around Ali as he prepared for the telecast and then enjoyed his ringside antics as he exchanged verbal insults with Foreman.

After Foreman knocked down Judge, the second opponent, Foreman became angry at one of Judge's insults and went after him again, the two winding up wrestling in a heap on the canvas.

Then, after referee Harry Davis stopped the match against Daniels, Daniels' seconds emerged to protest. Foreman earned about $125,000.

Clyde Gray Stops Rookart in Three

TORONTO (CP) — Clyde Gray of Toronto, the Canadian and Commonwealth welterweight boxing champion, stopped Sammy Rookart of Spartanburg, N.Y., at 2:16 of the third round of a scheduled 10-round preliminary bout Saturday to the Foreman vs Ali card.

Referee Sammy Luftspeing halted the bout after Rookart had been dropped for the second time by a Gray right hand.

Gray began to dominate the fight in the second round, catching Rookart with a flurry of looping right hands. In the third round, he caught Rookart with a combination of punches, a looping right pulling the American off balance and a right cross.

When the match resumed, Gray hit him with two straight rights that sent Rookart to the canvas and the referee waited no time stopping the bout. Both boxers weighed 149 pounds.

4 Spectators Killed

Panic Grips Crowd at Race

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Flames and smoke circled the sunny skies over the controversial Montjuich circuit Sunday after the worst disaster in Spain's auto racing history.

A wave of panic washed over the crowd of 100,000 after at least four died and another 12 were seriously injured in a tragedy that racers and officials said should have and could have been averted.

The much-protested Spanish Grand Prix started innocently and cautiously over a course described by Brazilian world driving champion Emerson Fittipaldi as "too risky" and "dangerous." Fittipaldi withdrew his entry from the race Saturday, years before death and destruction took over.

On the treacherous Font Del Gat curve of the 29th lap, the Embassy Hill car driven by West Germany's Rolf Stommelen crashed into a protective barrier, burst into flames and ran into the crowd at a favorite vantage point of the fans.

"I saw some spectators by my side aflame, as though they were human torches," said one spectator, who was grazed by the car and suffered scratches and bruises. "The car, shooting flames in all directions, landed on a group of about 20 persons standing by my side. I was convinced it was the end for me. I still don't know how I managed to escape."

Four people, as yet unidentified, did not escape. Stommelen, 32, suffered multiple fractures all over his body and was in critical condition at a hospital. So were others in the path of the auto.

"A blazing car fell onto the crowd with incredible force and the panic-stricken crowd stampeded in all directions," said an eyewitness. "It was horrible."

The mishap also was seen by millions throughout Europe who were watching the event live on home television.

The accident also involved the car driven by Carlos Pace of Brazil, who was unhurt. "I was at his tail. In my effort to avoid the collision my car also hit the rail and then rebounded to the other side of the course."

By then the damage was done. The remainder of the race was cancelled and the Tecaco driven by Jochen Mass of West Germany declared winner over a field that had started at 25 but dwindled to 14.

The race nearly had been cancelled after a number of critics had called the Montjuich route unsafe for Formula 1 cars. Drivers complained that the circuit was inadequate for proper passing and that guard rails had not been fastened securely. It included 37 bends, a quarter-mile straightway and a drop of 110 yards in just over half a mile.

In withdrawing after a few practice laps Saturday, Fittipaldi had said: "All I want is to protect the lives of the drivers. This circuit is too risky and fails to stick to minimum safety regulations. The circuit is dangerous. I have said so, and this is my decision."

Pace vowed he'd never return to the hilly, 2.3-mile course.

"You cannot play around with human lives like this," Pace said. "I hope the organizers have learned a lesson, even if it is too late."

Washington Rallies To Outscore Celtics

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Washington Bullets gave the Boston Celtics a dose of their own medicine Sunday by rallying to defeat the National Basketball Association's defending champions in the opening game of the Eastern Conference playoff final.

The Celtics, long noted for their comeback prowess in the two periods, held a 12-point lead in Baltimore Sunday and wound up boasting to the Bullets 100-95 in the first game of the best-of-seven series.

"We weren't running, we were trotting," Boston coach Tommy Heinsohn said. "We had just walked the ball up the floor.

"We beat ourselves. We stood and watched the ball instead of the man. We had a lot of bad takes. We let them take the jump away from us. We beat ourselves."

Sunday's opening of the other series, Golden State Warriors downed Chicago Bulls 118-89.

In Sunday's American Basketball Association playoff games, Indiana Pacers topped Denver Nuggets 109-99 to take a 3-2 lead in the eastern division final and Kentucky Colonels defeated the Spirits of St. Louis 117-98 to take a 3-1 lead in their western division final.

Ashe Tops Tom Okker

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Top-seeded Arthur Ashe of Richmond, Va., defeated Tom Okker of The Netherlands 6-4, 6-2 Sunday to win the $60,000 World Championship Tennis Green Group event Sunday.

It was the fourth WCT tour triumph for the 31-year-old Ashe.

Ashe, playing his sixth final eight WCT appearances, needed only 70 minutes to record his fifth consecutive straight-set triumph in this week's tournament. He broke his opponent's serve twice in each set and received $12,000 for his efforts. Okker got $6,000.

Ashe, who won previous Green group events in Barcelona, Rotterdam and Munich, also has won the $25,333 prize for collecting the most tournament points on the circuit.

He finished the season with 750 points. Rod Laver lost his chance to catch Ashe when he lost Saturday to Mexico's Raul Ramirez in a semi-final at Charlotte, N.C.

U.S. Bicentennial Celebration Grassroots One Without Focus

By DON McLEOD
The Associated Press

Celebration of the Bicentennial of the United States' birth as a nation finally begins this month, and instead of the usual world's fair, the country is turning to grassroots festivities.

On April 18, 200 years ago, Paul Revere began his midnight ride and the next day Massachusetts Minutemen fired the first shots of the American Revolution.

Officially the celebration continues through 1976, the bicentennial year of American independence. To the more dedicated, it will continue through 1981, 200 years after Yorktown, or 1989, the bicentennial of the first government formed under the Constitution.

The federal government, whose creation is being commemorated, has failed to provide a focal point for the national celebration. Instead, the celebrating will be done in a variety of ways and places.

The best part is probably the refurbishing, restoration and even salvation of America's historic treasures in the name of the Bicentennial — and the invitation for Americans to visit their shrines instead of a fair.

There won't be a midway in Philadelphia, but you can stand on ground where history and a nation were made and see it almost as it was.

Battlefields from Concord to Gettysburg are spruced up and waiting. So is George Washington's birthplace, the place he died, and the church pew from which Patrick Henry demanded liberty or death.

A red, white and blue Freedom Train drawn by a genuine fire-belch big steam engine will shuttle across the nation this year and next with a cargo of historic documents and memorabilia, including George Washington's personal copy of the Constitution.

A great wagon train will start in the West and reverse the historic trek of early pioneers, picking up wagons from every state until they all converge on Valley Forge on July 4, 1976.

The National Society of Mural Painters is putting together a travelling show depicting American freedoms in 40-foot murals.

The Smithsonian Institution, which is planning some of the better attractions for Washington, D.C., also is sending exhibits across the nation.

SAILBOAT PARADE

Operation Sail '76 will bring as many as 25 major sailing ships to American waters. They'll finally converge on New York harbor for a water parade on Independence Day 1976.

The Declaration of Independence written by Thomas Jefferson and adopted by the Continental Congress in 1776 can be seen daily in the National Archives in Washington, along with the Constitution and Bill of Rights. The form of government created by these documents may be seen in action at the Capitol, the Supreme Court and the White House.

The Smithsonian Institution is being expanded for the Bicentennial. The new National Air and Space Museum will open July 4, 1976.

The annual festival of American Folklife will be extended to run for most of the summer this year and next in Washington.

And a Bicentennial will send Americans pedalling about the country, including inauguration of the first trans-continental bicycle trail.

The cultural pageant of the Bicentennial is those 13 states which fought the Revolution and formed the union.

Boston is where it all began.

Most of the city's historic sites are within walking distance of key information centres, and a shuttle bus service is provided for the less energetic.

For the price of a single day-long ticket, the rider can hop on and off at will. Similar bus service is available in New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

Objects from the 1876 Centennial will be displayed in the Smithsonian's Arts and Industries Building. The National Portrait Gallery opens the second of its Bicentennial exhibits on April 19.

Anyone travelling to major Bicentennial cities will be able to visit a number of Revolutionary War battlefields and other sites along the way.

The rush begins now in places where it all happened 200 years ago. As many as 50 million tourists are expected to travel through the eastern seaboard states this year and next.

Hauser Is His Own Best Advertisement

By VIVIAN BROWN
The Associated Press

For more than a half-century in North America, nutritionist Gaylord Hauser has been touting "living foods" as the key to looking younger and living longer, and expounding the nutritional value of yogurt, yeast, wheat germ and molasses, which he calls the "super four." He appears periodically on the lecture circuit as an example that the health principles he advocates do work, at least for him.

At 80 he appears youthful and vigorous. Slim and suntanned, he looked far younger as he sat recently in a New York hotel waiting for his 1 o n g-time friend, Greta Garbo, with whom he would take a walk. It makes him "a bit nervous," he said, "to see 60-year-old people on the street tottering as they walk."

"Men and women become incompatible when their nerves and brains are underfourished. If each would have a glass of fresh orange juice in the morning before speaking to each other, they would raise their blood sugar quickly and be less irritable."

When he brought his four super foods "to the attention of North Americans" wheat germ and brewer's yeast were being discarded by beer and flour people, he maintains.

"In St. Louis they were throwing away mountains of the yeast, the fermentation after the beer is made. In Minneapolis they were feeding the wheat germ to the pigs." He suggested the molasses because people were drinking a lot of milk, which lacks iron. Yogurt appealed to him as "an easily assimilated protein."

Hauser had detractors in the early days—in 1932 he had an office in Chicago where he taught nutrition and in the 1930s he was teaching movie stars how to eat—but critics ebbed as scientists began seconding nutritional ideas. Two years ago he says The Times of London chose him as one of "The Thousand Makers of the 20th Century" along with Schweitzer, Salk and others.

He lives in Beverly Hills in winter, but had just come from Palm Beach where he had autographed a revised and updated edition of his book, Treasury of Secrets.

He doesn't take credit for all the things he recommends. He has listened, learned, experimented and updated his ideas. He now suggests skimmed milk instead of evaporated in making yogurt because "people are more figure-conscious." A batch made at home should always be tested on the palm of the hand as Russian and Bulgarian women do. "If the yogurt is too hot it will kill off the important Lactic bacillus bulgaricus," he explained.

In recent years he has added lecithin as the fifth wonder food. Considered by some nutritionists to be an emulsifier of fat, lecithin is used by Hauser with brewer's yeast in a drink that makes the yeast more palatable. The formula was put together by an ill chemist "to save his heart and clogged veins." It did, Hauser claims.

Although the chemist used it on his cereal, dry, Hauser prefers it as a drink. The one he concocted "would revive the dead," he says, laughing.

He combines one cup of fruit juice—orange, grapefruit, pineapple—with one tablespoon each of the yeast, wheat germ, lecithin and bone meal and a couple of tablespoons of yogurt or kefir, a tart bacillus.

People should grow their own foods if possible, even rose hips, which is high in vitamin C, he maintains.

He stresses that proteins are the most important element in the diet, reminding his followers that nutritionists agree that every person should have at least one serving of first-class protein—eggs, cheese, milk, yogurt, meat, fish, soybeans, nuts or fresh wheat germ—each day for every 2.2 pounds of body weight real, not overweight. A 120-pound woman needs about 55 grams a day, a 150-pound man about 68. Twenty-eight grams are about one ounce.

His book contains a number of exercises including the "barely-gymnastic," which has been shown to make stomach muscles six per cent stronger in one week, and six per cent stronger in 11 weeks. The simple exercise—one intense muscular contraction—takes only a few seconds a day.

Born in Germany's Black Forest and burdened with a muscular hip at 17, held to be incurable, he says he heard about "living fresh foods" in Switzerland and began his own health therapy, curing himself.

Hauser has never married but has thought many times, he says, everything of children. (Each summer he returns to his father home in Sicily with armloads of sweaters and other things for the 50 orphans he has "more or less adopted."

ELLIS ISLAND SINKING

NEW YORK (AP) — Ellis Island, the gateway to America for 16 million immigrants, is slowly sinking into New York Harbor when it could be an imaginative landmark, says Dr. Peter Summerlin. Summerlin, chairman of the Restore Ellis Island committee, urged Congress to appropriate 1.5 million to begin restoration work and attract visitors.

Peterborough Square is a multi-use building of approximately 1 million square feet of office space, parking for 375 cars, 3 levels of shopping malls, 75 stores and a full-line Eaton's department store, preservation of the 84 year old Market Hall, and by summer 1975, a CP Hotels' Red Oak Inn.

Peterborough Square has been designed to blend with the existing buildings in the downtown of the city. The structure is brick and low rise. The enclosed shopping mall features skylights and trees with courtyards and rest areas.

'Outsider' Directing Stratford

OTTAWA (CP) — Nobody has challenged Robin Phillips to a duel for at least 18 months, but the young artistic director of the Stratford Festival still is picking his steps warily.

With rehearsals under way for this year's festival, opening in Stratford, Ont., June 9, Phillips is deep in the heaviest theatrical program yet staged since the festival was founded in 1953 and already is looking to the 1976 season.

He also is busy providing closer liaison among professional theatre groups in Canada, drawing the talents of directors, designers and actors together to mould a national theatre with its focus in Stratford.

When Phillips' appointment to succeed Jean Gascon as head of the festival was announced in September, 1973, there were complaints that the job should have gone to a Canadian. John Juliani, then in Vancouver and now head of York University's graduate theatre program in Toronto, was so incensed he spoke of challenging the young Englishman to a duel.

Phillips then was artistic director of the Greenwich Theatre in England, where he had risen meteor-like through such internationally famous theatres as the Bristol, Old Vic, the Royal Shakespeare Company, the Chichester Festival and theatres in London's West End.

When he came to Canada he spent almost a year getting to know the theatre scene and putting together a hand-picked company which, in February this year, opened the first two Phillips Stratford productions in Winnipeg.

Touring from Vancouver to Montreal, The Two Gentlemen of Verona and The Comedy of Errors gave audiences a fresh approach to Shakespeare, as modern as today's affluent society and as colorful as the Prairie pioneer days.

During a flying visit to Ottawa, Phillips spoke in an interview about his first year in Canada. The furore over his appointment has died down, but he said it hasn't entirely disappeared.

"I've learned a lot in that year. That screaming did really make me sit up and make absolutely sure I knew where I was going, and I think that was valuable.

"We stuck our neck out with those first two plays, but by and large most people can see their worth whether they like them or not.

"The first time I really do put a foot in a clearly wrong place, I think everyone will scream—which makes it fairly hard, because I'm bound to, sometimes."

The Two Gentlemen of Verona and The Comedy of Errors will open this summer in Stratford's Avon Theatre, while Shakespeare's Twelfth Night and Measure for Measure occupy the Festival Theatre stage.

The festival opens with Shaw's first venture into the works of George Bernard Shaw, with William Hutt directing Pat Galloway in the title role. She played Toinette, the maid in The Imaginary Invalid, Moliere's classic, in which Hutt starred last year as the hypochondriac.

Later in the season the festival adds Arthur Miller's The Crucible and Bertold Brecht's Trumpets and Drums to its Ariadne auf Naxos and two contemporary Canadian operas, Harry Somers' The Fool and Jean Vallerand's The Magicians, open The Third Stage late in July.

Six other plays occupy the Third Stage until the end of the season when, on Sept. 29, Phillips undertakes a major experiment, directing Oscar Wilde's The Importance of Being Earnest, one of the old warhorses of heavy-style drawing-room comedies.

"The season is very long, and actors get very tired and perhaps bored towards the end of the season," Phillips said. "Energy begins to drop. I was looking for something to give them new sparkle and vitality."

He expects the addition of the Wilde play, meaning rehearsals for members of the companies playing season-long in the regular repertory, will rub off on the whole festival.

"We may not even use a designer for it. We may just play it in rehearsal costume.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lyricist Ira Gershwin is doing well, but "we'll stay in the hospital a couple of more days," a spokesman for UCLA medical centre said Sunday.

The 79-year-old Gershwin, who wrote the words to many hit songs by his brother George, remains in satisfactory condition, the hospital said.

Gershwin entered hospital April 19 after he fell at his Beverly Hills home. Doctors said he needed fluid drained from a punctured lung where a broken rib had penetrated a membrane.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lyricist Ira Gershwin, suffering from a punctured lung, has been released from UCLA medical centre.

McDowell, 31, is currently appearing in Joe Orton's play Entertaining Mr. Sloane at London's Royal Court Theatre.

Mrs. Dullea, 37, divorced actor Keir Dullea in 1972.

Vegetarian Diet Requires Care

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I'm a 16 year-old girl who wants to become a vegetarian. My mother says it's not healthy. I'm 5-foot-4 and weigh 100 pounds. I eat a lot of graham crackers and peanut butter. I don't like eating meat.

Is it really important that I have animal protein?—Carolyn.

P.S. She would have approval from a doctor not to eat meat. I require her to eat a large amount of whatever we have for dinner.—Mrs. M.H.

Vegetarianism is a way of life for some people, either because of economic reasons or for cultural preference. The pure vegetarian eats no meat or dairy products, relying entirely on nuts, grains, cereals, fruits and vegetables for the body's protein needs.

It is not essential that a person have animal protein. Let's get that straight right at the outset. However, meat is a ready source of protein and provides a greater variety in the diet.

How serious are you about being a vegetarian, or how much of it is a dodge to avoid meat? Young people often develop an aversion to certain foods, but these are usually passing phases.

Whatever your motivation, you should realize that the vegetarian must have a thorough knowledge of nutrition, more than the average dieter. I cannot list in a brief column all the foods you should look for in protein. You mention peanut butter, a fine source, but that you might quickly tire of that menu. Soybeans are another good source.

Lacto ovo vegetarians compromise by using dairy products and sometimes fish. If this is your leaning, then another rich store of protein is eggs.

You are only 14, and that may be a proper age to make such decisions. Amole protein is essential for continued growth through the pubertal period. Your family are not vegetarians, and your mother would prefer you to eat what she prepares, not an unusual ahle requirement. A vegetarian regimen could present undue problems in meal planning.

Are you prepared to do your own vegetarian menu planning and cooking?

Most families on a vegetarian program involve all of members, youngsters and adults. Are you prepared to study the necessary nutrition books? An inadequate diet—vegetarian or otherwise—will be harmful to you, and you can quickly develop deficiencies which might affect your blood, your growth, and your general health.

In our society, meat is a primary source of protein. If you are not going to eat meat, you had better be sure you are getting it in equivalent supply from other foods.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 17 and wrich 122 pounds. When I wake up in the morning my waist measures 26-plus inches. Before retiring it measures 28 or 29 inches. I have a big appetite.

Also, about a week before my period my stomach and waist are big. Is there anything medically wrong with me?—Miss E.A.

You didn't list your height. Generally speaking, at your age your 122 pounds sounds reasonable.

When you eat you put a certain volume of solid and liquid food into your stomach. Most is held there temporarily during the preliminary digestive phase, which accounts for your evening girth.

During the night, the digestive process continues, and in the morning you have returned to your natural waist measurement. I had two of my young female-aged girls tell me they noticed the same changes in measurements.

Your premenstrual bloat is quite common. It's due to water retention in the tissues. Don't develop an obsession about the tips and downs of your waist. Rather, cut down on what I suspect are rather overgenerous dinner portions. If you don't, you may find your waist going outward, never to return.

Jewelry Making Is Taught

VANCOUVER (CP) — Most people who set out to make their own jewel y start by making a ring.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Nyman, who run the Dimention Gallery, teach people to make jewelry and they say rings are the most popular pieces. But pendents and bracelets aren't far behind.

Mrs. Nyman, who also uses her maiden name Eilat Tovi, is a jewelry artisan trained in Israel, and she is in charge of jewelry-making and design classes.

"With each student the first thing we think about is design," she said. "Some know right away what they want, others don't, but anyway we plan the sketches together.

"Then we work on techniques. Do they want casting or prefer to do their work entirely handmade? We try to get them to have expertise in both methods."

The students range from doctors to truck drivers.

Mrs. Nyman said the one thing they have in common is "they want to do their own thing."

Most work in silver and copper, with only a few using gold. The gallery also has facilities for silversmithing.

Mrs. Nyman, who was born in Israel, learned her craft from her jewelry grandfather. She has also studied at an art school in Jerusalem.

Win at Bridge

Guarantee better than guess

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Oswald: "If you could guess right all the time, you wouldn't have to do anything else well to be a winner. Experts do a lot of intuitive guessing, but when possible they try to substitute certainty for guesswork.

Jim: "I'm looking at the hand you are about to bring up. I suppose South won the first trick with the ten of hearts and led a diamond."

Oswald: "He certainly did but only after a lot of agonizing. When dummy's queen held the trick he relaxed, remarked, 'I sure played the right suit and was happily about the business of winning game and rubber.'

Jim: "South's play showed some merit. If he had to lead a spade or diamond, the diamond he was correct. There was a 68 percent chance that the suit would break 3-2. If it did, it would really matter who had which ace, since three tricks in diamonds would be enough to guarantee success of the three notrump contract."

Oswald: "However, there was no need for any guess at all. Instead of studying diamonds and spades South should have led a club to dummy's ace at trick two and then led a small diamond from dummy."

Jim: "This play would guarantee the contract against any and all bad suit divisions and other bludgeonings of fate."

Liberties Body Asks Law Change

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Civil Liberties Association has asked Ontario Attorney-General John Clement for legislation to protect members of tenant associations from retaliatory action by landlords.

In a letter delivered to the attorney-general's office week, Alan Borovoy, the association's general counsel, said a recent ruling by the Ontario Supreme Court makes the landlord "legally free to punish a tenant for his tenant activity by refusing to renew or to entire a lease with him."

Mr. Borovoy said Madam Justice Mabel Van Camp ruled March 3 that a landlord could not be compelled to give his reasons for refusing to renew the lease of the president of a tenants' association.

Trucker Helps

TORONTO (CP) — Bay Clark Ballantine, a Toronto-based trucking company, has added a fifteen-hour day to its payroll and Sunday has been added to the work week.

The company has added a "helping fund" to which employees can contribute.

Mr. Ballantine was asked in his home while the injured man, Donald Harold Bilodeau, 32, of Toronto, a passenger truck driver who left his sidekick to help when he saw the fight.

Teachers' Demands

TORONTO (CP) — The bargaining agent for 5,200 teachers at Ontario's 22 community colleges unveiled Sunday a package of contract proposals that would increase wages and benefits by an estimated 40 per cent.

Christopher Stevens, chief negotiator for the Civil Service Association of Ontario which represents the teachers, said the group wants limits on teaching hours, better job security and elimination of the bottom two of five wage categories.

Man Wanted

GODERICH, Ont. (CP) — Ross Ruiz Valencia of Valinda, Calif., wanted by United States police on a kidnapping charge and by Mexican authorities in connection with the murder of a judge, will appear in provincial court today on a charge of obstructing police and threatening.

He was arrested Friday in this community about 60 miles north of London after his vehicle was stopped because it had no licence plates.

Valencia, 47, also is wanted in the U.S. on a charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

Vote to Strike

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Members of Local 604, Hotel, Restaurant and Bartenders Union, voted Sunday to strike at seven city hotels unless an agreement is reached.

Jim Hayes, business agent of the local which represents about 25 waiters, waitresses, bartenders and bapmen at the hotels, said a majority of the members voted unanimously Sunday.

Conciliation talks broke off last Monday.

'Secret' Inquest

OTTAWA (CP) — A 20-year-old woman says Quebec provincial police have deliberately covered up details of a crash involving a police cruiser that killed five people, including four members of her family.

Suzanne Gagne of suburban Rockland said a 40-minute inquest in Hull, Que., last month into the accident was "nothing short of a sham."

She, her two surviving sisters, and her lawyer were not informed of the inquest, attended by seven witnesses—six of them police officers.

Test of New Treatment On MS Is Being Sought

TORONTO (CP) — Clinical trials of a promising new treatment for multiple sclerosis patients are planned for the new Playfair Neuroscience Centre at the University of Toronto, says Dr. Erwin H. Eylar, head of the centre.

He told the annual meeting of the Ontario division of the Multiple Sclerosis Society of Canada on Saturday that monkeys suffering from a similar disease can be cured by injections of body protein.

He said he would like to begin trials on humans if the treatment meets with the approval of physicians treating patients at Toronto Western Hospital where the centre will be located.

But he and Dr. W. J. McIlroy, chairman of the society's advisory board, both warned that the monkey disease treated is not multiple sclerosis and the treatment would have to be tested with a small group of severely-ill volunteers for at least 18 months before its value could be judged.

They said multiple sclerosis is characterized by periods of remission when patients suddenly get better for no known reason, making it hard to evaluate any particular treatment.

Gray Protests

TORONTO (CP) — Former Liberal cabinet minister Herb Gray says the Export Development Corp., a government agency, is financing contracts for companies that have agreed to comply with the Arab boycott against dealing with Israel.

"While the Export Development Corp., I'm told, has done may not yet be contrary to any specific law, if it is not, it should be," he told a Toronto Jewish congregation Sunday.

MPs Pay Raise Bill Coming Back

OTTAWA (CP) — The on-again-off-again bill to raise parliamentary salaries by one-third is on again in the Commons this week for what the government hopes is the last time.

The bill is to return to the House Tuesday. The government was ordered last week to remove from it improper amendments made in committee.

A government spokesman says legislative draftsmen have examined new amendments to the bill, closely to avoid a further delay through procedural error.

Stanley Knowles, NDP House leader and procedural watchdog, said last week he will be watching for another opportunity to scuttle the bill, which he and most other NDP members oppose.

It was Mr. Knowles who pointed out the procedural error last week, prompting Commons Speaker James Jerome to rule that "I can't allow it to proceed."

Although the offending amendments were stripped from the bill, they will be reintroduced in approved form, the government spokesman said.

The improper amendments dealt with plans to provide annual living-cost increases of up to seven per cent during the current Parliament and to establish a commission to recommend MPs' salary levels in subsequent Parliaments.

Under the bill, MPs would have their total annual pay increased to $34,600 from $28,000. Of the total, $10,600 would be in tax-free allowances, compared with $8,000 now. The raise would be retroactive to July 8, 1974.

Senators would get $29,300, compared with $25,000 now. The portion part of that total would increase to $5,300 from $4,000.

The bill has had a checkered life since it was introduced before Christmas. The original proposal, calling for a 50-per-cent increase, got the support of most MPs, but a public outcry forced the government to withdraw it for three months.

When it returned, the basic raise was cut to a proposed 33-1-3 per cent but the cost-of-living escalator was added. The NDP says the new structure eventually would provide higher incomes than the earlier proposal would have given.

Three New Democrats voted for the bill on second reading, which also saw the Conservatives lose 17 votes from their pro-bill line and one Liberal vote against the government.

Most MPs see the bill as an embarrassment, coming at a time when the government is urging wage restraint.

Another controversial measure preceeds the pay bill into the Commons this week. The government intends to spend today on the petroleum administration bill, vigorously opposed by the Conservatives.

The Conservatives are fighting hard against a clause that would give Ottawa unilateral oil and natural gas pricing powers in the absence of an agreement with the producing provinces.

That bill is expected to return to the House again later in the week if the salaries bill receives final approval.

Grafftey Says Canada Loses Independence

OTTAWA (CP) — Howard Grafftey, Progressive Conservative MP for Brome-Missisquoi, says Canadians have lost their economic independence since Prime Minister Trudeau came to power in 1968.

In an interview taped for the CTV program Question Period, Mr. Grafftey said total federal budget figures have risen to $30 billion from $10 billion in 1968.

Mr. Grafftey said young Canadians are hard-pressed to buy homes, start their own businesses or continue farming.

"Compared to other countries in the Western world, how many Canadians are being encouraged to invest in Canadian enterprises?" he asked.

He said he would propose "a citizens ownership democracy" in which the federal government would seek co-operation with other governments and private industry to give everyone a stake in the country.

CDC to Invest $100 Million In Mackenzie Pipeline

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canada Development Corp. (CDC) has indicated to Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. its provisional interest in subscribing $100 million of the equity financing currently needed to the proposed Mackenzie Valley pipeline project.

The announcement was made during the weekend by CDC president H. A. Hampson who said total Canadian equity investment of $700 million will be needed to ensure majority Canadian control of the pipeline facilities.

Prince's Arctic Tour Nearly Over

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T., (CP) — Prince Charles landed here Sunday night on the last lap of his whirlwind tour of the North, fresh from two quick afternoon visits in the Arctic.

After a relaxed and humorous evening in Resolute Bay Saturday, Prince Charles visited the bedding gas fields on King Christian Island and stopped off at Pelly Mission before flying back to the territorial capital for the last two days of his visit.

At the Panarctic Gas site on King Christian Island the prince watched workers bleed off the excess pressure from the gigantic gas field.

He and a company official twisted the huge valves on the well as a monstrous yellow, jagged-edged flame screamed into the grey, frigid sky over the desolate island, in the shadow of the North Pole 1,900 miles north of Winnipeg.

Hands clapped to ears, the royal party watched the bleeding off shriek into the sky and then slowly die away as the valves were shut again.

The island lies over a field estimated to hold more than 20 trillion cubic feet of natural gas — only one problem remains, the means of transportation to go into production.

The aircraft carrying the 26-year-old heir to the British throne tried to land at Beechey Island, site of the remains of the North Pole expedition of Illfated Sir John Franklin, lost more than 100 years ago.

But chancy weather that has plagued the tour since it started from Ottawa Wednesday closed the island airport down and the prince was diverted to Pelly Mission on the mainland, where he chatted briefly with the inhabitants.

The tour then turned back from the High Arctic and came here for a two-day visit in and around Yellowknife.

Prince Charles leaves Canada Wednesday from Winnipeg.

The flight south came after an unusual and entertaining evening Saturday in Resolute Bay during which the prince and his press contingent combined to provide the entertainment at a dinner given by the village council.

After the dinner the prince, who has done his best to be relaxed and informal throughout the tour, let his hair down all the way.

After the press group had sung three songs written as they flew through the grey northern skies, Charles rose, took a slip of paper from his pocket, and said:

"We can't let this go without a reply."

Then, to the tune of an old British hymn, he and his personal staff sang their own song, one line of which went:

"Oh where may I ask, is the monarchy going; when princes and presidents are on the same Boeing."

The song ended with a verse describing the shambles made of the carefully-created tour plan by the weather, then Charles, beaming his broadest, sat back down to the ringing cheers and applause of the full assembly.

Last Americans Leaving Saigon's Planes Flee to Thailand

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese airmen fled from Saigon in their planes today as United States helicopters began evacuating all but a few of about 900 Americans left in the city.

A spokesman for the Thai foreign ministry said 30 South Vietnamese fighter-bombers and transports landed at Utapao air base in southern Thailand.

Another South Vietnamese plane brought 130 Vietnamese, including airmen and some women and children, to Clark Air Base in the Philippines.

Saigon awaited the Communists as the Americans left.

Civilian and military officials of the South Vietnamese government also were fleeing, just as they did before the Communists in the northern and central parts of the country.

U.S. fighter-bombers flew high over the city, providing air cover for the American evacuation.

Officials said the U.S. embassy will close soon, ending 20 years of official American involvement in the Indochina war.

Thousands of South Vietnamese gathered in front of the embassy, still hoping to get out of the country.

As the Americans pulled out, South Vietnamese police and soldiers looted the vacated buildings.

Three U.S. Marine helicopters landed at the U.S. defence attache's compound at the air base to lead Americans brought there by bus, and three other marine helicopters turned back when a series of explosions rocked the air base.

Helicopters owned by Air America, the U.S. charter airline lifted other Americans from the roof of the embassy.

The helicopters took Americans, and those South Vietnamese who could get aboard, to U.S. Navy ships off the coast.

The evacuation was ordered after a heavy Viet Cong shelling of the air base before dawn and a radio speech by President Duong Van Minh ordering all Americans assigned to the U.S. defence attache's office out of the country within 24 hours.

The U.S. defence and state departments announced in Washington that President Ford ordered the evacuation because the military situation around Saigon, and particularly at the airport, had deteriorated.

The Viet Cong hit the air base before dawn with more than 150 rockets. Among those killed were two U.S. Marine guards at the defence attache's compound. A U.S. Air Force C-130 cargo plane being used to evacuate South Vietnamese was destroyed.

Fighting between the Communist and government forces continued around Saigon, but there still was no attempt by the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese to drive into the city.

Two Die, 33 Wounded

Welcome Is Cool

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The welcome awaiting thousands of Vietnamese refugees in the United States apparently will be a chilly one for the most part.

A Pentagon spokesman said Monday three military bases will house the refugees for 90 days or more—Camp Pendleton, Calif., Fort Chaffee, Ark., and Eglin Air Force Base in Florida.

The announcement drew cool reactions in the three states.

"I have serious questions about the policy we are pursuing in the evacuation program," said John McClellan (Dem. Ark.), chairman of the Senate appropriations committee.

"The Congress should have been consulted more fully before such a massive refugee program of Vietnamese people was launched."

Munro Promises Action

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will take legal action "as soon as we can" against Quebec longshoremen who have not returned to work, Labor Minister John Munro said Monday.

He told Howard Graffney (PC—Brome-Missisquoi) that labor and justice department officials are checking to see whether there was disobedience in complying with the back-to-work legislation signed into law Thursday.

Only two of the 7,200 longshoremen in Montreal, Quebec City and Trois-Rivieres returned to work Monday. Mr. Munro said dispatch orders were sent out Sunday night for the longshoremen.

Disgruntled Jew African Terrorist

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — A South African security guard held 21 persons hostage in the Israeli consulate, killed two persons and wounded at least 23, then surrendered after a siege lasting 21 hours.

David Protter, 26, a few who fought for Israel in the 1973 Arab-Israeli war, said he had a grievance against the Israeli government. He said he wanted to be flown to Israel to talk to Premier Yitzhak Rabin.

Armed with three revolvers, two submachine guns and some hand grenades, Protter hid inside the consulate before dawn Monday.

He then locked up staff members as they arrived for work, telling each that he was conducting a security exercise.

When his Israeli superior, security officer Gora Bayir, objected, Protter shot and killed him.

The other man killed was a South African employee, Edwin Malpe.

Protter later opened fire on lunchtime crowds in a street below and wounded more than a dozen persons. The police took over the floors above and below the consulate.

In Jerusalem, Rabin and Defence Minister Shimon Peres gave the South African government a free hand in dealing with the situation.

During the night, Protter released three children plus eight wounded hostages, including the commercial attache, Vice-Consul Sherni Zur, and Consul Schlomo Hover.

Protter was still holding six men and four women when he surrendered at 4:30 a.m., after Gen. Hendrik van den Berg, head of South Africa's bureau for state security, convinced him in two-way radio conversations that the government would never meet his demands.

He was taken to Pretoria, the South African capital, for questioning.

No Bus, No Pay Policy Possible

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

School bus drivers may no longer get paid for snow days when the old bus just won't run. Shirling Fraser, chairman of the board, raised the question Monday night to his fellow trustees as to what procedure takes place when a bus has a mechanical failure and can't take students to school.

Dick Beare, the board's transportation expert, said there is no policy covering the situation but he said the transportation committee currently has the matter under review. He said the bus drivers are still paid despite the fact their buses can't operate.

The board now has about 270 daily routes with 9,500 students being bussed to school daily. School buses travel over two million miles in a year.

Economic Outlook Bleak

Partners' Troubles Canada's Problem

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada faces a continuing bleak world economic picture relieved somewhat by the prospect of some easing in domestic consumer prices this year, the finance department says in its annual economic review.

The review, tabled Monday in the Commons by Treasury Board President Jean Chretien says the economy is likely to be greatly influenced by problems that major trading partners, mainly the United States, are experiencing

"The current prospects for 1975 are for decreases in real output in many of these countries, at best, and slow growth in the others—together with increasing unemployment rates."

Last year, real exports of goods and products declined by about 1.5 per cent, compared with a normal expansion of five to eight per cent in preceding years. This occurred largely because of weak industrial production performances by the U.S. and other major trade partners.

"At year-end, the outlook for economic performance, and particularly real output in other industrial countries, was poorer in 1975 than the actual experience in 1974."

Chretien tabled the report in the absence of Finance Minister John Turner, currently touring Middle East countries to meet leaders of major oil-producing nations. Most of the document is a recapitulation of 1974 and presents a familiar analysis of economic developments of government policy.

One of the few bright notes is that prices of major commodities used to make consumer goods apparently peaked for most items, and their decline should eventually lead to a slackening of the high 15-per cent inflation rate experienced last year.

"Except for food, all categories had lower year-end prices in 1974 than year-end 1973. These declines may contribute to a lower rate of increase in consumer prices in 1975," the report says.

Mail Still Snarled

Letter Carriers Oust Montreal Leader

MONTREAL (CP) — A Montreal post office official said 50 per cent of the city's letter carriers were not working today and that no mail truck drivers worked during the night.

The spokesman said some carriers had left with their mail, while others "were still studying the situation." Many were without mail to deliver because truck drivers did not bring mail to sub-stations.

Guy Morrissette, suspended president of the Montreal local of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada (LCUC), met with carriers during the night following his return from a tour in Western Canada to raise support for a rejection of a tentative agreement.

The 2,200-member Montreal local, largest in the LCUC, was put under trusteeship Monday by the union's national executive in Ottawa.

The suspension of Mr. Morrissette and his four-man executive and the seizure of financial records and minutes of the local were ordered by national president Bernard Becarte.

Mr. Mocassette sought support among western locals for a movement to reject the tentative aggreement which would raise wages by $68 a week over a 30-month contract when the suspension was announced.

Initial reaction over the suspension among some local activists was one of anger.

"The national executive was always happy when the guys were in total ignorance," said union steward Jean-Paul Chenet. "In Montreal, the guys woke up and now we will not allow the national executive to play with us like marionettes."

The suspension marks the first time in almost 20 years an LCUC local has been placed under trusteeship. The last incident occurred in Hamilton, Ont., after financial irregularities were discovered there.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the national executive described Mr. Morrissette as "a candable guy," but added he often "gets these temper tantrums and wants to fight the world.

"We're not going to be put in the same position as the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) where they local in Montreal calls the shots," the spokesman said.

Pensioners Seek City Tax Credit

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Pensioners have seen their fixed incomes shrived by almost 20 per cent in 14 years, city council was told Monday night.

The 1961 dollar now has a buying power of 56 cents, reported a brief from Pensioners Concerned, as the group restated its plea that elderly citizens be relieved of education taxes.

The request, first made to city hall early last year, was repeated by H. Glynne Jones, Pensioners Concerned, Belleville president.

The group suggests Belleville follow communities — including Toronto, Hamilton and Peterborough — which give a $100 tax credit to pensioners.

The issue is not only economic, but also moral, said Mr. Jones.

Elderly citizens already have paid to educate their own children. He called it a "simple miscarriage of justice" that they are forced to educate a new generation at a time when their economic resources are being thinned by inflation.

City council forwarded the submission for advice from the city manager's department.

Mr. Jones said later there are at least 3,000 pensioners living in Belleville — about 10 per cent of the city's total population.

Three Bandits Killed

SHAWININGAN, Que. (CP) — Three would-be bandits were killed in a shootout Monday after more than 30 policemen, acting on a tip, converged on the scene of a bank holdup in this community 90 miles northeast of Montreal. A police officer wounded in the incident said the bandits did not get any warning from police because they were shooting as they fled the bank.

Embassy Is Stormed

SAIGON (AP) Vietnamese desperate to get out of Saigon ahead of the Communists clawed their way over the 10 foot wall around the United States Embassy today despite the barbed wire on top of it. American marines and armed American civilians used pistol and rifle butts to smash the fingers of Vietnamese trying to climb over the embassy gate.

Banker's Family Held

STE. AGATHE, Que. (CP) — Two bandits fled with more than $50,000 in cash Monday after holding a bank manager's family hostage in this resort town, 30 miles north of Montreal. The men entered the home of the bank manager Sunday night and locked his wife and two children in the basement. One bandit drove to the bank with the manager Monday before opening time while the other remained with the hostages. Earlier, the employees were locked in the basement while the bandit scooped money from the tills and the night deposit box and fled. The bank manager later received a telephone call telling him his family was safe in a motel room in near Val David.

Sea Law Plan Drafted

GENEVA (CP) — A document prepared by a group of experts from about 30 countries under the leadership of Jens Evensen, head of the Norwegian delegation, was presented to a closed session of the United Nations Law of the Sea conference.

Eskimos Fear Radio

OTTAWA (CP) — The tiny Eskimo settlement of Igloolik in the eastern Arctic, which requested the CBC's offer to provide network television, now has doubts about receiving CBC radio. The community, intervening in a CBC request for a licence to operate an FM station there, "fears the effect of radio's cultural and emotional influence unless these influences are tempered by local input reflecting local values and traditions," says the intervention.

Charges Bring Angry Response

A volunteer environmentalist who is a frequent critic before city council was warned Monday night against "Shelburne insinuations."

It wasn't so much a caution as an irate counter-charge as Mr. Young's statements that secrecy shrouded the true environmental conditions of the Bay of Quinte, needed expert opinion of city council for the Weeks.

Mr. Young claimed Aid. Meeks had never released results of a survey the committee had made on Bay conditions and that he was pressing for fish-stocking of the waterway despite environmental problems.

"I'm sick and tired of you coming into this council and making insinuations — which are fabulous insinuations," rapped Aid. Meeks.

The committee said the Moira River Conservation Authority's fish and wildlife advisory committee — of which he is chairman — has requested a provincial study after a fish was found to contain more than the acceptable levels of mercury.

"—If those fish are not safe to eat I'll tell the people there fish are not safe to eat," said Aid. Meeks.

The councillor originally reported the mercury failing of the fish to council some weeks ago after he said he sent it for a laboratory test.

Mr. Young cited provincial government findings that Belleville had the highest chlorofom content in the water of 11 Ontario cities monitored, as the most recent example that the Bay was a "cesspool."

He charged the environment ministry with secrecy and evading issues over Bay water quality.

Aid. Arthur Keegan suggested Mr. Young should first talk to the Belleville Utilities Commission on such issues.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said the commission is in continual contact with the ministry. One reason for the high level of chloroform — a side effect of chlorine input — was the amount of chlorine needed to offset algae content. The only provin il effects so far was some liver damage in mice, said the mayor.

How to Handle Expropriation

Ed. McKinney
A. R. McKinney
Realty Ltd.

It's a real shock when you're told that part or all of your property will be taken for a new highway, sewer line, high tension line or public use it's sometimes an even greater shock when the representative of the public utility, highway department or government tells you what they propose to pay.

Relax, and react rationally. Your property may be taken if it is really needed for public use but you must be compensated at "fair market value". If the initial offer is unacceptable, make an appointment to discuss the facts with your lawyer. If he agrees with your position, he'll arrange for one or more Real Estate Appraisers to appraise the property for you. With the facts they give him about "fair market value," he can represent you better in direct negotiation, at a preliminary hearing, or (if necessary) in a court action.

Sidney Reconstruction Brings Complaints from Area Residents

A group of Sidney St. homeowners must wait further before council decides on their appeal against the cost of road redevelopment in their area.

First, city council decided Monday, it wants an in-depth review of the issue from its city hall staff.

Some 40 residents — complete with petition and legal advice — are contesting the results of restructuring Sidney St. to a four-lane road.

They live on west side of Sidney from College to Tracey streets and their complaints specify:

Some land acquisition costs are included in sidewalk construction costs (this has resulted in a local improvement charge of $19.87 a foot against them. Their neighbors on the east side they say are assessed at $8.31.

— Road improvement costs to make Sidney a four-lane arterial road should be paid under the general rate.

— Heavy transport trucks should be banned while the area remains residential.

The residents had former city solicitor John Miller at city hall Monday to emphasize their complaints.

Mr. Miller insisted that land acquisition costs — which push up the local improvement costs for the sidewalk — should be considered part of the overall Sidney St. redevelopment. Therefore it should be charged against the general rate.

He suggested council changes its policy and include the land costs with the entire reconstruction bill.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said she felt the issue — since it carried implications for city hall's policy on local improvement charges — demanded fuller scrutiny.

Council agreed with her that the issue—be referred to the city manager's office for a report on all "the pros and cons" before a decision is made.

Fire Damages New Home in Township

Damage was estimated at about $60,000 in a Monday fire which destroyed the southern end and roof of a home under construction on the Wallbridge—Loyalist Rd. across from Loyalist College.

Capt. Steve Waits of Sidney Township Fire Department said today the blaze apparently began when flames from a burning pile of trash spread to the southern end of the house and exploded a can of gasoline inside the house being used to fuel a burner.

The owner was identified as Alex Gynis, a dentarist whose offices were to be located in the below part of the house. Capt. Waits said the family was about to move in at the time. Some belongings were stored in there.

Capt. Waits said the fire began at 11:30 a.m. and was contained in a half hour. However, firefighters remained at the scene for about three hours and then returned to the house later in the afternoon when a pile of veneer doors re-ignited.

Trustees to Meet Parents Over Principal Demotion

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

BLOOMFIELD — Prince Edward school trustees are prepared to meet "as soon as possible", with representatives of an Ameliasburg parents group concerned by the demotion of Kente School principal Eugene Bright.

Board solicitor Richard Byers has advised Belleville lawyer Ben Burley, who represents the parents group, that trustees are willing to discuss their decision, says William Lane, chairman of the board's personnel committee.

A delegation of approximately 35 parents jammed the board of education offices Monday night in support of Mr. Bright.

One mother, Mrs. Sheila Osborne, asked trustees if they realized how difficult it will be to hire another principal for the school.

"Another principal would be afraid to do anything or the board would be on his back," she commented.

"I can't see where Mr. Bright has done anything wrong; that school was the one bell of a mess," she said.

An Ameliasburg ratepayer who said he had no children in the school challenged a statement by board chairman Douglas Caley made to an earlier delegation stating that the decision in the demotion was "none of your (parents) business."

Howard Weese told trustees they were misled when they were asked to vote on a motion for Mr. Bright's demotion.

"I have to ask where is our democracy," he observed in reference to the "none of your business" comment by Mr. Caley earlier this month.

"I only ask for justice in dealings with the principal of Kente and I don't think justice has been forthcoming," he stressed.

Mr. Weese said several trustees and especially education director John McNeil had failed" to do their homework.

"To me the reasons (for demotion) are nothing but petty," he asserted.

Mr. Weese and Kente School has had three principals since 1969.

Mrs. Sue Smith of the parents group observed the principal can fight for himself. Many of the parents are fighting for the school.

"If he is let go what kind of teachers will we have?," she asked.

Another parent said-trustees have not given concrete reasons for Mr. Bright's demotion and the complaints forwarded amount to "nit-picking."

"Give us something concrete and we'll back you 100 per cent; give us nothing and we'll fight you 100 per cent," he added.

Mr. Lane told the delegation a complete resume for the board's decision has been provided to its lawyer, Ben Burley, and the board expects the information will be made available to the group.

"Its our intention that it should be," he emphasized.

One parent asked Mr. Lane if the board would vote against general public approval of Mr. Bright.

The Picton trustee replied he personally would vote against it if he were convinced it was against the best interests of the school.

"It is a very difficult decision," he remarked in reference to the action ahead.

He noted that if trustees do reject their original decision to demote the principal there will be dissatisfied parents and if Mr. Bright is demoted many parents will object.

"We expect to have as much public input as possible from Ameliasburg," he told the delegation.

"This thing has been misconstrued — there is no personal animosity," he said.

"Our job is to determine what we feel is in the best interests of the school. In the long run we may have information you don't have," he commented.

Mr. Lane observed there will be complications with hiring a new principal if Mr. Bright's demotion is under discussion after May 31 but he promised the delegation a fair hearing.

Wildlife Sanctuary Opening June 14

FRANKFORD — Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority staff are currently working on preparations for the official opening of the Frank E. Goodrich wildlife sanctuary and conservation area in June.

The approximate 200-acre site is south of Codrington along Old Creek, west of Highway 30.

Its opening June 14 will mark the second conservation area of 12 under authority control that has been officially opened to the public.

In September, 1972, the dam and reservoir at Warkworth was the first project completed and opened to the public. At present, the reservoir is being used primarily for swimming. A small four-acre park is used for picnics.

The Warkworth dam was opened by John Rhodes, at the time parliamentary assistant to Natural Resources Minister Leo Bernier.

The Goodrich property is being developed here will be no extensive development outside several possible hiking trails, thereby leaving the area free for fishermen and nature enthusiasts.

County Educators Meet To Debate Curriculum

BLOOMFIELD — A Prince Edward County P.J. (Primary, Junior) Conference will be held at the Four Seasons Hotel in Belleville May 1 and 2 says Dan Rainey, principal of Pinecrest Secondary School.

Mr. Rainey, a member of the curriculum committee of the Prince Edward Principals' Association, told trustees Monday a main objective of the conference is to provide the initial thrust for curriculum development in the county.

Also, he said, it will provide an opportunity for a representative group of teachers and the principals of Prince Edward to examine the philosophy in selected chapters of the P.J. document.

He said 25 principals and teachers from Prince Edward will participate in the two-day session dealing with education in the primary and junior divisions.

"We believe we should make a commitment to curriculum development in the county," observed Mr. Rainey.

The principal outlined the objectives of the P. J. staff committee. One goal is to develop with the participants an understanding of the rationale and philosophy of education in Ont.

Mr. Rainey said the staff's aim is to develop with participants an awareness of the implications of education in the primary and junior divisions for the teaching-learning process and for the learning environment.

Dome Suggested

BLOOMFIELD — Prince Edward school trustees have been requested to consider erection of a geodesic Dome on the grounds of Wellington Consolidated School.

The project was explained Monday by principal Keith Barnett, science teacher Garnet Northey and an industrial arts teacher.

The dome, 30 feet in diameter, would be used for nature and agricultural studies at the school.

Even Without MPs' Pay Raise Parliamentary Costs Have Doubled Since 1970

By RICHARD JACKSON
OTTAWA — Parliament leads, right?

Right.

In not itself, practising what its preaches for others, including Taxpayer Von: restraint.

Never mind the current parliamentary pay raise.

Forget that the Honorable Members sort of squeaked it in when Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers were monopolizing the headlines and prime TV time, leaving little time with the energy price confrontation.

Ignore the speed with which your elected representatives rushed to Speaker Jean Sauvé Reading, which amounts to their acceptance and majority approval — they should move at such a blinding pace on the nation's gas and oil prices when personal business.

Overlook the fuzziness of pushing it through with the last election less than a year old and the next one, barring political and parliamentary accidents, another three years away.

Not to quibble over such small matters.

Just concentrate on the costs.

Contemplate the figures — the official dollar totals as set out in the Members Board's Estimates — and consider the spiralling cost of Parliament.

Spiralling even without the new pay raise which, when it enters the calculations could take Parliament's price before the next election well over $100 million.

The MPs needed more money; no question.

So only to ask why they sort of seemed to scurrge it in, when they hoped nobody was looking.

It is just not rising parliamentary pay, which is all fairness, cannot be denied MPs, it is more the soaring cost of Parliament itself that should raise taxpayers' worried eyebrows.

For it has more than doubled in just five years.

Back in 1970, the Estimates disclose, it took only $26 million to keep the Senate and Commons in business.

This year, the operation costs are scraping $60 million — to be precise, $59,699,000.

That is a 130,500,000 increase from last year's $51,164,000.

And that, in turn, was up just short of $10 million over the $41,700,000 cost only two years ago.

In 1973, it was a comparatively modest $46 million.

So it isn't really the parliamentary pay increases that run up the bill so fast.

It has to be something else — ever-increasing fringe benefits perhaps?

Like three offices — one in the riding back home — and two rooms on Parliament Hill, one of a single office shared by two MPs.

Like two, and sometimes three secretaries and even a research aide in place of the one secretary that two MPs shared along with that single one-room office.

Like free long distance phone calls to the riding twice a week.

And like saunas, billiard rooms and other such comfortable touches.

Not to argue that MPs shouldn't enjoy these facilities, the better to discharge their responsibilities.

Only to note that it is costing you about $10 million more each year.

And perhaps to, well, niggle, that Parliament, which talks a grim save-and-restraint game, does not exactly play it.

Back in 1970 — not exactly prehistoric, being only five years ago — Parliament, reveal the Estimates, was costing a now incredible $3.8 million.

Parliamentarians drew an annual $6,000 then, and nothing was tax-free. No pension. John Diefenbaker was here. So were Tommy Douglas and Stanley Knowles.

Five years later, pay went up to $10,000, tax-free, plus an expense allowance, and the bill went up to $3.9 million.

Dief, as Prime Minister, kept the lid on at just under $9 million, but the tempo laid by Leslie Pearson took over again, bumped the pay to $15,000 plus tax-free expense and brought in those ever-loving perks.

Off went the roof, and when Pierre Trudeau came to power, the bill at $39 million zoomed to a year in which it would be in two more years to $55 million by 1973 — and now passes on the threshold of a hundred million pointed for a st'ndstill at $100 million by the time you next get to pass judgment on your friendly neighbor MP.

But don't blame him.

Politics of the 70s

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Amid the somewhat hysterical — and justifiably revealing — replies to our recent editorial, Corruption via Books, there is some common ground relative to an exchange of correspondence on this page several years ago.

It alluded to the rival political systems of the day and to profit and greed in this way, as expressed by one writer: "Capitalism and Communism have much in common. The ironical thing is that these two systems, so opposed to each other, agree on the basic premise for human motivation — that is the profit incentive, which, when you think about it, is nothing more than greed."

There is general agreement today on the need for better distribution of the world's wealth and alleviation of human suffering and inequalities everywhere. Does anyone in our free democratic society believe, however, that it is to be found in Communism — a manifestly cruel and harsh system that has consigned thousands opposing it to imprisonment or death, as well as countries to unwilling absorption by its arch proponent, the Soviet Union?

This is not "McCarthyism," but simply a recognition of facts, a recognition too of the flood of left-wing propaganda permeating the media today, and even in the dialogue of western governments — including Canada's — and other institutions.

Back in June 1970, when apparently there was greater sensitivity to the threat of Communism and to its stated objectives of world domination, the Rev. M. A. Swaren wrote in The Peterborough Examiner: 'No sane-thinking person will ever again cry 'McCarthyism' when an individual dares to stand out against Communism, since a Royal Commission even mentioned it as the major threat to national security in Canada. . . .

Again, during the earlier exchange of letters mentioned above, another writer — a Quinte-area resident who came to Canada from his Communist-ruled homeland — warned of how the Communist world is confident of world conquest without recourse to war — but rather through the export of propaganda, and aided by subversive elements abroad.

He cited further a paper entitled "Naked Communist," outlining Communist subversive tactics, which was placed before the U.S. Congress by the then Field Director of the American Security Council, Cleon R. Skousen.

In addition to gaining control of the media, infiltrating the churches, and discrediting Christian religion, the paper offered such other strategy as this: "Discredit the family as an institution. Encourage promiscuity and easy divorce. . . Emphasize the need to raise children away from the negative influence of parents. . . Break down cultural standards of morality by promoting pornography and obscenity in books, magazines, motion pictures, radio and TV."

There is more, but this should be enough to indicate the subtlety of the Communist propaganda techniques which many in Canada, as our current correspondence suggests, seek either to dismiss or gloss over, if not condone. It also confirms our initial contention that the Communists use any means at their disposal to gain access to the minds of men.

Our Imports from Jamaica Include Hockey Equipment!

Would you believe it, one of our major imports from the sun-drenched Caribbean nation of Jamaica is hockey equipment?

How come? It come from what's called an "offshore industry" and quite literally so, since the raw materials and semi-fabricated goods are exported from Canada to small factories in Jamaica which make them into hockey sticks and sticks, sweaters and masks and ship them back to Canada.

None of the products of these factories enter the Jamaican economy, in the case of hockey equipment there would be no market for it, and the products are made in small, short-sweat-shop type factories built with tax holidays in remote parts of the big island country.

It's a little-known but tell-tale element in our trade with Jamaica, which also includes such matters like immigration, have been discussed by Prime Minister Trudeau during his visits to Guyana, Barbados and Trinidad and Tobago, prior to his arrival at the Commonwealth heads of government conference in Kingston, Jamaica.

The major area of discussion has probably been immigration since Canada has taken 120,000 people from the Caribbean region after our immigration act was liberalized in 1967.

About 52 per cent of the Commonwealth Caribbean is made up of immigrants to Canada at the present time are relatives of many who came earlier.

So with Canada engrossed in a proposed new immigration policy and with Ottawa urging Canadians for their opinion about it, the prime minister is also hearing what the source American and Canadian immigration green pastures have had a somewhat different political emphasis.

Each of the countries visited they all face the same problems of how to diversify economies as small countries and how to use outside aid and technical assistance without losing their own recently-announced political independence.

Guyana is perhaps the most different from the other two, pursuing as it does a highly socialist position referred to as an aspect of the co-operative movement, called by others a neo-Marxist approach to changing an emerging economy.

Trinidad and Tobago under the mysterious Prime Minister Eric Williams has a genuine mixed economy in which private enterprise and the state involvement in such areas as petroleum and sugar are allowed to work hand in hand.

Barbados is a less-spectacular island-nation that Trinidad and Tobago or continental Guyana on the South American land mass in terms of racial and economic problems.

Its basically black population is more homogeneous than these other two, though it does have a minority white population like Jamaica.

Barbados' major economic problem is how to substitute the monoculture of sugar with its employment and world market leaders for other industries.

Therefore it does have some offshore factories (also making hockey equipment) as in Jamaica, much tourism and other industries but not offshore.

Perhaps more than in the other countries visited by Trudeau visited, the "Canadian presence" is predominantly in more Canadian tourists than American and Canadian banks and life insurance firms have a major role, but also there is a growing demand for local control and more of that new familiar "national identity."

Lottery Popular with the Public

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

The new Ontario lottery under the ministry of culture, which certainly must give gambling a new status in our society, has been an instant success.

More than two weeks ahead of the first draw it is virtually a sell-out.

Nobody doubt it will need the story of future draws—which are to be held at two week intervals—to give full verification, it would seem that the government by getting into the lottery business has hit a happy note both financially and politically.

It has done something that obviously the public wants.

Backing up this belief is that no protest at all has been heard from either the saints or sinners in the province.

It is a safe surmise that a large number of the subscribers to the lottery are old-age pensioners and others on very much strained means.

And what does it give to them? Hope

For $1, which they will manage to eke out of their meagre incomes, they can have a few weeks of dreams.

They can envision themselves finally getting out of that great financial strait-jacket.

They can hope, even if only for a couple of weeks. And this surely is a great therapy, and better than any pills that are broke and lonely.

Which, incidentally, justifies the government's decision to set the ticket price at $1, rather than more.

Viewpoints

Ottawa Journal

American policy in Southeast Asia may be criticized for many things. But the blinkered liberalism which in Canada makes it fashionable those who to criticize almost everything made in the United States should not be allowed to obscure the fact that the unswerving, ruthless dedication of communists in Southeast Asia — and in Moscow — is the fundamental reason why the war continued and why the communists won.

A Long-term Growth

There is nothing new under the sun. Six years ago a west coast consumer observed that "the overriding economic and political fact in Canada today is that inflation is running wild like a malignant cancer. At its present rate of growth it will surely strangle the prosperity of the country."

Edgar Benson was finance minister then and he was Mitchell Sharp before him. Today, under John Turner inflation galops on.

Fifty years or more ago a large brick home in the countryside around Belleville, and typical of many across the province, cost a mere $6,000. Today it might fetch from $40,000 up.

And an example from the United States — from the pages of The Louisville (Kentucky) Courier-Journal and a report of an elderly Bowling Green farm couple, who about a year ago survived a tornado that wrecked their home, then recently experienced flooding in their new home.

For a while they had lived in a trailer furnished by the government, as they tried to fix up the farm. However, it got to be too much, understandable for a couple in their seventies. And besides it cost too much — four times as much to rebuild the barn as it cost to build it in the first place.

So it goes, in these inflationary times, and with hard-earned savings being depleted all the time.

Fighting Pollution

Remember those river clean-up jobs undertaken by students and conservation-minded people in the community. Both the Moira and Trent rivers were given the treatment, with gratifying results. Now that warmer climes are here, it is a good time to consider similar undertakings. Probably a lot more junk has entered the waterways since last time they were cleaned up.

Ethics Study Introduced

Cornwall Standard-Freeholder

Provision of a course in ethics at four schools under the jurisdiction of the S D and F county board of education may have a strong appeal to these young lives. At least, we hope it does.

But in general we would have to say that this option probably will not appeal to those who need it most. And further, the ethics course may have really should be taught in the home.

Still, we suppose that moral values have a place at all levels, the home, the church, the school and the community.

There may be some problem in satisfying people of all persuasions, but with care this will be possible.

There are worthy codes of ethics in most religions. And it seems likely that an objective look at religions in general might help to promote understanding and substantial interest in good moral values.

Looking Backward

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 29, 1955.

At the OASA convention at Peterborough recently, Belleville's Don Lee was elected to the executive for his second straight term. He was also named to the associations subcommittee. Harry Bullins was named honorary president. It was a fine tribute to this city and to one of its veteran softball men, who has given much of his time and effort to the furtherance of the game. Our heartiest congratulations are extended to both of these Bellevillians.

30 YEARS AGO

April 29, 1945.

The false rumor that the Germans had offered unconditional surrender on Saturday night had little chance to start celebration in the city of Belleville. President Truman of the United States quickly and promptly nipped the rumor in the bud. Belleville residents who were at home apparently showed no attitude toward celebration, feeling that something of a definite nature might be forthcoming. Downtown, however, the news spread quickly, and a large number of people who were in department stores rushed to buy flags and bunting — but the news came soon that the rumor was false.

40 YEARS AGO

April 29, 1925.

At the last meeting of the Board of Education a recommendation of the Board of Management was unanimously passed that all male teachers of the city be automatically retired at 70 and all female teachers at the age of 65.

Entomologists in the Dominion Entomological Laboratory here expect to start the distribution next week of parasites in this area of the Niagara district. They are being used to combat and control the destructive peach moth.

50 YEARS AGO

April 29, 1925.

The Royal Bank of Canada will erect a new building in Belleville this year, on the corner of Front and Bridge Streets. W.A. Parker, Belleville, manager of the bank, received a blueprint today of the plans for the new building. He said the construction would start about the 1st of July. The present building at the planned site, owned by the Royal Bank, is 75 years old. For years it was the Gibson House, then a boot store, then a barber shop, and later the Baltimore Hotel. The lot extends to the river bank, but the bank will not cover over the entire area. Beside the new bank, on a property fronting Front St., there will be a suitable building, the nature of which has not been decided. The entrance of the bank will be at the south side of the building.

The little coal mining village of Frank, Alta., was obliterated 72 years ago in 1903 when an estimated 82 million tons of rock crashed down in a landslide from Turtle Mountain above the village. Former Aide to Trudeau Remains Very Busy MP

By STEWART MacLEOD
OTTAWA (CP) — Eyebrows were raised when Jean-Luc O'Connell, former labor minister and principal secretary to the prime minister, was not reappointed to a cabinet post in his return to Parliament in last year's general election.

His own eyebrows twitched a little, too.

But anyone who thought the Northcorough East member slip into a political sulk doesn't know the man very well. His ideas may be heard now and his voice may be heard less frequently, but it would be a monumental mistake to equate this with what's really happening around this popular member of the Commons.

His office burns with activity and, there, Mr. O'Connell is working at a stack of thick reports marked "confidential" entitled "Pensions in Canada—Proposals for reform."

It turns out that these reports are his own, a huge study he undertook because he is concerned about the pension situation in the country.

How did he feel not being invited back to the cabinet for Mr. Trudeau, having recaptured his seat and having chaired changes by working at the prime minister's request "in Parliament?

"I'd confess to some disappointment," he said, after a thoughtful pause, adding "I haven't felt jilted or anything like that. There were others elected who deserved the opportunity."

But didn't it deflate a bit of your enthusiasm?

"Good, I'm I am having a ball."

A ball to Mr. O'Connell appears to be delving into matters that have been on his mind for a back of his mind for years. Without his parliamentary responsibilities, he now has the time to tackle them.

First there is the pension study—"I began publishing this before the next Liberal convention"—and then there is his interest in improving the criminal-law process.

This is a matter that we have traditionally left to lawyers. And they are essentially conservative. It's a matter for all of us because I feel we often leave society unprotected."

Mr. O'Connell already has introduced a bill on bail reform, and he will planning action on parole and rehabilitation.

He also has plans to get more activity into the Commons. As with law reform, he feels the economy is being left too much to the professionals.

He also wants to see some changes in economic policies to give the West a greater feeling of being involved in the country's decision-making, even though I think the government is totally launched in this direction."

But he can't do everything at once. As co-chairman of a special Commons committee on pensions, he must be preparing for coast-to-coast hearings, like a group already involved at two other House committees, and still manages to get home to Toronto every weekend to see his wife and two children.

"Oh yes, there's something else I want to mention and that concerns the status of women—I want to see them treated more equally. We have to do something about child-care so women can be free to pursue careers."

There are other things too, and the way he is going, it appears he is an easier life at minister of labor.

"Well, I'd be glad to serve in the cabinet again," he said in response to a question. "But, believe me, I haven't felt let down yet. Perhaps he hasn't had time.

Personnel will be present to conduct the walk and answer questions.

Mr. Storey replaced Clyde Bell who had represented the Tweed chamber for the past three years. George Lyons of Deseronto was elected association president. He served as vice-president last year. Bancroft Gideons Conference Hosts

BANCROFT — Members of the Bancroft camp of the International Association of Gideons were hosts for a rally in Bancroft on Saturday for Gideons from Oshawa, Lindsay, Port Hope, Belleville and Peterborough.

The rally of the Christian professional and businessmen attended by John Leeson of Tennessee, who is the International Director in charge of extension for the Gideons.

Mr. Leeson explained that the Gideons have," camps in 107 different countries, however the recent fall of Cambodia and Viet Nam to communist forces may mean that those countries are closed to us."

"We have 270,000 Vietnamese testaments on board a boat in the harbor at Saigon," said Mr. Leeson. "There doesn't appear to be any way to get them unloaded and into the country. We have tried to call but there is a three-week wailing list for calls to Viet Nam."

Mr. Leeson continued," If a country is going to be closed to the Christians than I think it should be closed with the word of God in it."

Mr. Leeson is reponsible for the work of the Gideon in all countries outside of the United States and Canada.

The Gideons are world renowned for their work of placing bibles in hotels, schools, on trains and planes and in jails.

MADOC — Progressive Conservative delegates from across the new provincial riding of Hastings-Peterborough will meet in Madoc next month to elect their candidate to contest the new provincial riding of Hastings-Peterborough.

The meeting will take place in the Madoc Kiwanis Centre, Wednesday, May 21.

Clarke T. Rollins, long-time member of the Ontario Legislature for the present Hastings riding, is expected to be the only contender. He has said he intends to seek re-election.

Education Board Boosts Insurance

County taxpayers can rest easier this year as the Hastings County Board of Education substantially increased its liability and building insurance reducing the threat of large claims that have been known to jeopardize other boards.

The board Monday night increased its general liability policy from $1 million to $3 million and raised its annual premium from $5,422 to $6,329. The estimated 1975 cost is an additional $663 to cover the increase.

The board also voted to increase its building insurance from $49 million to $52.5 million and raised its annual premiums from $28,178 to $27,506. The estimated 1975 cost is an additional $5,352 to cover the increase.

The board's business administrator Ken Wormald said the liability insurance has not been increased since 1966. He said other boards across the country have found themselves with large claims which their insurance could not meet.

Mr. Wormald said the liability insurance covers board-owned vehicles as well as non-owned vehicles that are being driven on board business.

The $52.5 million assessed to the buildings and their contents is arrived at by the construction cost of a square foot. The board now has about 70 buildings and about 45 portables.

The insurance on the contents has also been raised from $6.9 million to $8.7 million with annual premiums being increased from $29,178 to $27,506, the same as the building premium.

The board reviewed the policy with the Frank Cowan Company Ltd. and the Doug Whitley Insurance Agency Ltd.

Mr. Wormald told trustees that someday the board may have to increase its general liability to $5 million. He said this could be done with little additional expense.

Foxboro Store Damaged

By RACHAEL SPENCER
Staff Correspondent

FOXBORO — Thurlow Township firefighters worked throughout the evening Monday battling a blaze which eventually gutted the rear of Carl Madden's General Store on Main St., here.

Fire reports indicate the blaze originated in the store room attached to the rear of the building. Fire and smoke damage was contained in this area.

The Ontario Fire Marshall was expected at the scene today to determine cause of the fire.

No damage estimates were available but damage centred around two walk-in freezers.

CONSERVE ENERGY

9 ways to conserve energy and save money in the big "hot water" areas of your home.

Apart from home heating, a family usually consumes the most energy in producing hot water. So it makes good sense to follow these energy-saving tips—whether your water heater is gas, oil or electric.

The Bathroom

- Showers usually take less hot water than baths. Since baths and showers account for about 40% of home hot water use, taking showers can offer considerable savings.
- When you turn off a hot water tap, make sure it doesn't drip. If it does, it probably needs a new washer.
- More frequent use of the sink plug can prevent a lot of unused hot water from going down the drain.

The Laundry Room

- Always match the amount of hot water you put in your washer to the size of the load.
- Whenever possible use cold water for rinsing.

The Kitchen

- Using too much detergent to wash dishes can waste hot water in extra rinsing.
- If you use a dishwasher, wait until you have a full load.

The Hot Water Tank

- Long runs of hot water pipe should be well insulated—especially in unheated areas.
- Switch off your electric water heater when going on vacation.

Cascade

The Cascade water heater will give you a dependable supply of hot water, but it is up to you to use it wisely. If we each save a little, we'll all save a lot.

Quebec Climate Said Ripe For Reforms from Inside

QUEBEC (CP)—Leon Dion, professor of political science at Laval University, says the Quebec social climate is ripe for a reform of the province's political system and institutions "from the inside."

Present structures lead to the kind of abuses exposed in public hearings of two Quebec commissions investigating trade union freedoms and organized crime, said Dr. Dion.

The 53-year-old professor has been a critic of the leadership of Liberal Premier Robert Bourassa but he told a reporter his new proposals involve the whole system under which the province operates.

"I do not say this government is corrupt," he said. "I do say the institutions which the government is obliged to use inherited when it came to power—permit people to use their position for personal benefit, or for the benefit of their friends.

"The answer is to change the rules of the game. This we can do to a certain extent. We don't know any society in which these things are not possible, but we know of some in which they are more difficult."

Are not people more important than structures?

"I think the two must go together," said Prof. Dion, PhD in political science, MA in sociology, educated in France, Germany, Britain and the United States.

"That is why I feel we go beyond simply an outside inquiry, such as a royal commission that would study the situation and in due course make recommendations from the outside.

"I propose a series of concrete studies by the people actually involved, with perhaps one or two approaches from the outside so that we only the institutions but the people will change.

"The mandate would be to look at practical limits of the institutions within the system and to correct them quickly so that they would be better adjusted to the needs of modern life.

"I am thinking in terms of efficiency and in terms of protecting people within these organizations from temptations of going against the public interest or committing immoral actions."

Prof. Dion, who served for seven years as special consultant to the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism, first outlined his new proposals in the Montreal newspaper La Presse, urging Mr. Bourassa to revise his leadership. The premier's initial public response was cool, though he said the ideas might be examined.

As examples of the need for studies and change, Prof. Dion cited a reported breakdown in communication between government departments and poorly-functioning communitie: of the national assembly.

He recalled that Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer testified before Judge Robert Cliche's inquiry into construction union freedoms he was poverless to put an end to violence between labor federations.

"Is not the reason for his powerlessness precisely the lack of information between the labor department, the justice department and the office of the premier?" Prof. Dion demanded.

"Then there are the relationships between the government and the private sector, industry, unions. There are practical ways to distinguish and get rid of patronage to the extent that we have it. The various bodies that deal with the government would have to change if government institutions changed."

Ripe for Reform

Gardeners Advised To Buy Perennials

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — When buying plants this spring, consumers should consider perennial varieties, says a horticultural consultant at Sheridan College of Applied Arts and Technology.

Tom Crookston said perennials are better for early mid-and late-season flowering.

"At first glance, these plants appear tiny, but they will do more over the years than annuals, if chosen carefully for height, length of blooming time and color," he said.

Mr. Crookston added that most perennials do best in a sandy loam.

Commenting on buying annuals, he said: "Everyone seems to buy the box with the best bloom. Always buy the box with the least bloom but which shows the desired color. They will do much better."

Mr. Crookston also suggested that when purchasing plants or seeds at a supermarket or a garden centre, it is advisable to pay particular attention to labels.

"Many labels and plant stock originate in the United States, thereby making the directions somewhat erroneous for Ontario planting conditions."

He said annuals grown in plastic containers are produced differently than those in the usual brown-fibre flat.

"Pros and cons are rife in the business about the relative merits. Those in the plastic containers, although more convenient for the grower, have been paired in artificial conditions.

"Once transplanted to the garden, it is unlikely the grower will maintain the same treatment provided in a greenhouse and the plants suffer accordingly."

Mr. Crookston had some tips on caring for roses.

"When unreviving roses grow then back to the "row" or bed below the deadwood line on the outer side of the bush. Thick canes should be treated with tree-wound paint. Those in spray cans are faster than the old solid type."

Planting condition is perhaps one of the most important factors, he said.

"Treat plants with some kindness. Use peat moss, and cow manure, avoiding fertilizer when planting.

"Do not let the plants wallow in a clay hole. Water them after planting and keep them reasonably moist and, in the case of perennials, spray with water-soluble 20-20-20 during the first season."

Positive Results

Claude Castonguay, former Quebec social affairs minister, says that an inquiry set up to study the violence and individual freedoms within the Quebec construction industry has "brought positive results." (CP Photo)

Short Skirt in Zanzibar Can Lead to Shaved Head

ZANZIBAR, (Reuter)—Any woman who visits Zanzibar wearing a skirt too short for the island's strict Muslim rulings runs several risks.

She may be apprehended by any citizen and either severely warned or worse—have her head shaved or receive four strokes of a cane.

If she thinks quickly, the visitor can claim her miniskirt is part of her national costume.

But to be absolutely safe she should obey a decree of the island's ruling revolutionary council, which stipulates the exact length: "An imaginary line drawn horizontally around the leg, each point of which is exactly midway between the low most part of the knee-cap and the uppermost part of the ankle."

Behind this dress rule lies an intricate paper of legal drafting which shows the Zanzibar government's concern for almost every detail of the lives of its 330,000 citizens.

All law on the two islands Pemba and Zanzibar, which together form the tiny state of Zanzibar, the fabled Indian Ocean spice islands, is by decree.

The revolutionary council, under the chairmanship of Zanzibar's leader, Aboud Jumbe, has chosen with traditional Muslim fervor to give moral as well as political guidance.

The dress rule with its apparently detail-over four pages of small print—is entitled "A decree to safeguard national culture and protect it from such undesirable fashions in dress, hairstyles etc., as are not conductive to national culture and to provide for matters ancillary thereto."

The man largely responsible for drawing up such documents is the English-educated attorney-general, Wolfgang Dourado, who defended Zanzibar's unique legal system during a controversial treason trial last year of 44 Zanzibaris convicted of plotting the assassination of former Zanzibar leader Sheikh Abeid Karumi.

Zanzibar, in a general review of the structure of the courts following the overth ow of the Sultan of Zanzibar in 1964, imposed "people's justice" which made the man in the street both jury and judge and abolished the legal profession.

wish to thank the Belleville area sports fans who supported FIORI GOEGAN MEMORIAL NIGHT at the Belleville arena on April 12. A special thanks to the many people who contributed advertising, printing, funds and time, to make this night such a success.

The people spent so many hours working with us in the organizing of the night and some of their names should be mentioned, but as is the case so often with this special type of person they have asked that their names not be mentioned here.

For the members of the McFarland's, it was a night we won't forget. Happy to see our old buddies, but sad that it should take the loss of one of our teammates to bring us back together. Thanks also to the Syracuse Stars for coming to remember and honor their former coach and friend.

We hope the Belleville fans enjoyed the evening and your support enabled us to give the Goegan family a little financial support from which they in turn made a sizeable contribution to the Heart Fund.

Thank you Belleville area sports fans. We have a lot to remember and be proud of, not just a couple of hockey championships but a helpful community and the best darn fans in the country.

Horror Story King Of Forties Reminisces

TORONTO (CP)—Using a pair of scissors, a 60-year-old bead writer named Mrs. Brown and lots of hustle, Alex Valentine built a one-man publishing empire in the 1940s.

He built it on sex and violence—magazines that featured stores titled trapping Winnipeg's Peck-Marked Strangler Story of Vancouver Cult. Madness Possessed Me and Sliced Bulbs for the Society Beauty.

These were Canadian stories of depravity, torture and terror, designed to chill the hearts of readers in Mexican Hat and soldiers cooped up on troopships.

His villains were innocents compared with those offered by today's magazines. They were Lone Ranger masks and suspenders held up the thick, woollen pants. Many of them resembled Humphrey Bogart or Robert Taylor.

The victims were usually wide-eyed young women who also resembled Hollywood idols. And more often than in U.S. pulp fare, the stories had happy endings.

Mr. Valentine, now 65 and retired, says: "It was a time when crimes of passion and lust were somehow foreign and distant, fantasies without the overtones of social concern that occurred later."

The War Exchange Conservation Act in the 1940s cut off the flow of United States confessions and detective magazines into Canada. Mr. Valentine and other Canadian publishers filled the gap.

He published as many as six one-shot magazines at a time, all under the names of companies he owned or invented. He filled the pages with art work and stories updated or stolen from out-of-print American publications.

There were 10 of us publishing pulp magazines at the time and we didn't want anybody to get into the field, so we flooded the newsstands. Why, when Maclean-Hunter was publishing a total of 28 magazines, I was publishing 21."

When illustrations ran short, he simply cut out a villain from a detective magazine, replaced the knife in his hand with a gun and put him on the cover of a confession magazine with a victim clipped from another.

And that is where the mysterious Mrs. Brown, who hammered out copy for such lurid tales as A Date With Death and Love For Sale, comes in. He says she wrote the stories to earn money to put two sons through university.

"She would sit at her typewriter, with glasses slipping off the end of her nose rewriting those lurid stories over and over and saying 'the silly girl, the silly girl.' "

Production Is Reduced By Industries in Sarnia

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) —Rising inventories and production cuts are widespread in Sarnia-area industry.

Market dislocations, occuring for a variety of reasons but attributed chiefly to a general economic decline, are doing nothing to make sleep easier for management officers.

And officials of companies encountering problems matching supply to demand—with more than 9,000 persons in their employ in an area of southwestern Ontario heavily imbued fattened with petrochemical petrodollars—acknowledge that a slump of considerable proportion exists.

Although one firm has been forced to reduce staff, the situation generally hasn't brought about widespread layoffs.

But plant inventories are rising—at least one to a level acknowledged to be "excessive"—and a number of plants have cut sailed production. At least one now is operating at just 60 per cent capacity.

A number of spokesmen indicate inflation and apparent indecision on the part of world governments on how to cope with it appear to be at the root of many of the problems confronting industry.

Although some firms in the area can reported good production and sales levels, rising inventories and production cuts were evident after interviews with a number of other industry officials.

Bob Boldt, Sarnia division manager of Dow Chemical of Canada Ltd., said demand for one company's products is down an average of 22 per cent and production is running in a cutback position, reflecting the decline in demand.

"A 25-per-cent reduction, in demand is certainly a cause for concern—it's not a disaster, but it is cause for concern."

Shell Canada Ltd. refinery manager Vince Norwood said the plant is operating at about 15 to 20 per cent below capacity. "Our inventories of finished products are getting full."

He said no personnel layoffs were planned during the production cut, "but we can't see in the future; you can't crystal-ball everything."

Polysar Ltd. earlier announced the layoff of 75 employees and planned mandatory vacations for another 200 to allow a six-week production cut without further staff reductions.

The demand for rubber products is down moderately in Canada and more seriously in the United States and elsewhere in the world, Demand for plastics and latex is following a similar pattern, said Bill Purcell, Polysar's director of sales for North and South America.

"Inventories, unfortunately, are high, even excessive, and we are having to move production down to match the falling demand and high inventories."

At Imperial Oil Enterprises Ltd. Sarnia refinery a number of processing units have been shut down for about three months as the plant runs at about 80 per cent capacity.

Manager Bill Keough said there has been "a definite softening of the market for fuel products."

"We don't fill up inventory to higher levels, but cut back on processing. We've reduced our crude running by about 20 per cent. This would have to affect profits in the refinery end—we're probably operating close to just the break-even point."

The limited storage facilities at Esso Chemical Canada "are essentially full" and a softening in market demand has been evident, said manager Ralph Shepherd.

Sales volume has dipped and inventory has been about 20 per cent above normal at Allied Chemical Canada Ltd., said plant manager Steen Jensen.

Total standard production has been reduced by about one-third since the new year at Cabot Carbon of Canada Ltd., in what president and general manager Robert Boyd said he hopes is a temporary situation.

"It's a little slow right now, mainly due to automobile production being off. The major use of carbon black we produce is for auto tires and that business is pretty well soft due to the lack of auto sales."

Chinook Chemicals Ltd. plant is operating at 60 per cent of capacity, but the overall production cut is closer to 20 per cent than 60 per cent, said plant manager Doug Bisset.

As a supplier to other industries, Chinook felt an immediate impact from the aerospace fibre industry cuts in the United States last December.

Sales of insulation to the housing industry provides the bulk of business for Fiberglas Canada Ltd.

"Our markets (for housing) are down, they're terribly bad," a management spokesman said.

Holmes Insulations Ltd. plant is operating at 10 per cent below normal capacity.

The automotive industry slump was the key factor behind layoffs at Prestolite Electrical Division, Edra of Canada Ltd.

The plant has been functioning at close to capacity in electric motor production, "but definitely not on the automotive," said personnel manager Bert Watson.

Mathematician Deals With Catastrophes

TORONTO (CP) — Rene Thom's job is to deal with catastrophes.

He is a mathematics professor at the Institut des Hautes Etudes Scientifiques near Paris. He calls his work a theory of catastrophes, which deals with finding a way to describe mathematically things that suddenly change.

Clouds, which have flexible boundaries and can disappear, are an example of what may be described in his theory.

Dr. Thom said his theory may in the futu e apply to analysis of biological processes, especially in the fields of physiology and embryology.

He recently was in Toronto to give a series of seminars for university mathematicians.

Dr. Thom said the matters he discusses are not necessarily catastrophic in the generally accepted meaning of the word.

"A lot of them are beneficial and necessary for life," he said. Ve ry terms in his definition of catastrophe are heart-beat, a transformation around from cells and the development of an embryo.

"The standard mathematical models deal with situations having a fixed set of parameters which are unalterable," Dr. Thom said. "But as soon as you deal with a situation having a lot of fluid and local changes, the standard mathematical models break down."

He said his theory tries to fill the mathematical gap but has not yet reached the stage where it "gives any practical possibility of prediction" of biological processes.

Dr. Thom has won the Fields medal, regarded by some mathematicians as their Nobel Prize.

Anne of Green Gables Coming to Frankford

Dear to the hearts of generations of Canadians, when Anne of Green Gables turned from a book into a musical it became a smash hit, not only in Canada, but in countries all over the world.

Now the students of Frankford Public School have immersed themselves in the story of Anne, the red-haired orphan from Prince Edward Island, and are preparing to present the musical version Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

Directed by David Farmer, the school's vice-principal, the musical features a cast of 50 and a choir of 80 children. A further 50 children have been working for weeks on sets, costumes and props, and will be the stage crew for performances.

Students from Grade 4 to Grade 8 have been enthusiastically involved with Anne of Green Gables since casting began in January.

"We just really started the hard work about a month and a half ago," says Mr. Farmer. "The psychology of keeping the kids keen is one of the most important things in putting on a school play.

"And these kids are really good. They have less trouble with stage nerves than adults. I just have to remind them to speak out loudly so the audience can hear them, and to remember that they're 'on stage' even when they don't have lines."

In the staff room during recesses, the conversation centres on the coming performances since most teachers are connected with the play in some capacity.

"There are a thousand props and costumes, and 23 scene changes," says Mr. Farmer, "that have made this play a lot of work. But the kids have done most of the work under our supervision, and they've done a good job. I think the people who have built the two-storey set could probably put a cottage together now they're so good at carpentry!"

There are still tickets for both performances that will be available at the door to the school auditorium before the performances begin at 8 p.m.

Tickets are $1.25 for adults and 50 cents for children.

Rehearsing a dramatic confrontation from the Frankford Public School's production of Anne of Green Gables are Andrea Steele as Mrs. Lynde, Kelly Forbes as the hot-tempered heroine, Laurie Bowley, as Marilla and Philip Lawson as Matthew. Two other stars, Nancy Taillieu as Diana, and Doug McKenzie as Gilbert, are not shown in this scene.

More than 30 community agencies brought crowds to Four Seasons Hotel Sunday to annual Information Mart, co-ordinated by Belleville Central Volunteer Bureau.

Information on family planning was available from Pat Atkinson and nurse Helen McLachlen of Hastings-Prince Edward Health Unit.

Information Mart

Volunteer work touches a community at almost every point.

Belleville had the fact painfully driven home Sunday when Information Mart, a showcase for community groups which is co-ordinated by Belleville's Central Volunteer Bureau, took place.

The event has been growing steadily each year since it was launched four years ago by the bureau as a means of mutual exchange between Bellevillians and the various volunteer agencies their neighbors keep operating year round.

It gives the citizenry an appreciation of what is available in community work and enables the various groups to publicize their work, explained Ruth Burrows, the bureau's executive director.

With its continued expansion the mart was moved over the The Four Seasons Hotel last year. This year it filled the hotel's second floor of meeting and convention rooms.

Some 32 local agencies — involved in everything from family planning to pensioners' problems — were on display.

Such undertaking now draw the participation of hundreds of community workers, said Mrs. Burrows. The Central Volunteer Bureau alone counts more than 200 helpers on its lists.

The number of projects continues to grow each year, an expansion also made possible by "community awareness," she said.

This year's mart even involved participation from the Sir James Whitney School for the deaf (members with hearing problems).

Students from the school distributed information directories at the event.

STEPHEN, DOUG AND KENNY

The sparkling smiles belong to three brothers, a delightful, high-spirited trio of Indian descent. Left to right are Kenny, seven, Doug, eight and Stephen, 10. They are healthy, active and, as the picture shows, handsome with their dark eyes, black hair and dimples.

The boys are now together in a foster home and it is important to all other that they be adopted together. Though each has his own friends, and his own interests, and though their personalities are different, a strong bond links the brothers. It would be heart-breaking if that bond were broken by separation.

The three are bright, alert youngsters with good imaginations. They are not top students but teachers are happy with their progress this year. All can be expected to do better when they feel settled in a home of their own.

Stephen, in Grade four, is a year behind his age group because he repeated Grade three. His best subjects are math and science and his favorite is art. He has some difficulties with reading and spelling. He is interested in fossils and talks knowledgeably about dinosaurs. His ambition is to be an archeologist. A good athlete, he plays baseball and soccer and likes skating and swimming.

Doug, doing well in Grade three, shares his brother's interest in art. He is a quiet, sensitive boy who often plays alone rather than with a crowd. Doug is neat and tidy about himself and his belongings. He isn't greatly interested in team games. He will join in them but prefers individual sports like swimming and bike riding.

Kenny is a lively happy-go-lucky fellow whose appealing disposition wins instant friendship and perhaps a bit of spoiling. His progress in Grade two is considered satisfactory though his written and artwork are untidy.

The trio will bring great joy to a family. They need parents who can love all three while having time to give each his share of attention. In an atmosphere of warmth, stimulation and firmness, the brothers will be sons to be proud of. Kenny should be the youngest in their adopting family.

To inquire about adopting please write to Today's Child, Ministry of Community and Social Services, Box 888, Station K, Toronto M4P 2H2.

Ann Landers

Handicapped Deserve Top-priority Parking

Dear Ann Landers: I work at a nurse's aide in a hospital. Today it happened for the umpteenth time so I'm writing to you in the hope you will give my complaint the visibility it deserves.

Where are these people's heads at—the ones who park in spaces reserved for the handicapped? On my way to work this morning I saw this badly crippled woman being pushed in a wheelchair a whole block in a terrible rainstorm. The poor thing was soaking wet and the man who was pushing her chair had an awful time trying to hold an umbrella and manage the chair at the same time.

I know a lot of people who are able to be able to walk on two legs should be willing to park a block or two away and stay out of spaces reserved for the handicapped.

Tell it like it is, Ann. Thanks in advance.—Mad

Dear Mad: I'm addressing myself to every person who reads this column: Please try to imagine what life would be like if YOU didn't have the use of your legs. How would you feel if you had to be pushed in a chair in a rainstorm because some able-bodied hog took the parking space reserved for you? I hope you'll remember this letter the next time you see a sign that says "Reserved For The Handicapped."

Dear Ann Landers: I've been taught to respect my elders but recently you made a mistake. I apologize for correcting you. Mom always said a lady that nobody should have to work seven days a week because "Lincoln freed the slaves."

You are only partly right. Abraham Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation of 1863 stated: "All persons held as slaves within any State, or designated part of a State" rebelling against the Union, "shall be then, thenceforward, and forever free."

This did NOT free the slaves in the states of Missouri, Kentucky, West Virginia, Maryland and Delaware, nor did it free the slaves in the slave territories. It was the 13th Amendment to the Constitution passed in 1865 that freed ALL the slaves.

I'm not blaming you for the mistake. Most people are under the same false impression. I just happen to have a very smart history teacher. I'll sign myself—B.H. L.H.S. ('76)

Dear L.H.S.: Cheers to you and your very smart history teacher. I think he (or she) has a very smart student. Thanks for my lesson. I'll sign myself A. L. C. H. S. ('36)

Dear Ann Landers: I have an answer to "Better Fed And Not So Lonely." You forgot to mention the 20 years during which she was "too tired, too busy or not in the mood." Some women win a man's love and desire and they don't want any part of him until they discover that another woman does. Suddenly there's a great revival of interest.

As a man who has walked in those moccasins, I can tell her The Other Woman didn't steal my affections. My wife lost them and The Other Woman found them. Just sign me—Happy At Last

Dear Happy: Your story is one I've heard hundreds of times. But the one I've heard THOUSANDS of times is from the wife whose husband is too tired, too busy or not in the mood. Too bad there's no way to reshuffle the deck so everybody could be happy.

A Little Does a Lot

Dear Doris: When people hear "help the poor", they think it means a lot of money and because they can't afford it, they dismiss the thought. A dollar bill sent to Unicef or Save The Children or Oxfam or Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, and many more, of which I am sure you have addresses, can help so much.

Did you know that: (1) The price of one big dinner served for political funds would support a dozen families in South America for one year?

(2) The purchase of 10 boxes of UNICEF Christmas cards protect 600 children from T.B., and 15 boxes buy school books for 140 children?

(3) A package of gum represents vaccine to protect a child against T.B.?

(4) The cost of an eight-cent stamp will supply a needy child with a glass of milk every day for two weeks?

(5) The price of a mailed milk will provide the antidote to treat a child suffering from leprosy for a whole year?

(6) We are rich because we can afford a newspaper and have the education to read it?

And extremely rich because we don't have to wait for a special occasion such as Christmas to have a good meal?

(7) While you wash your car with no thought of water you use, a village stream in India serves as a community laundry, bathing spot, waterhole for cattle, and source of drinking water for people.

Aren't We Fortunate?

Dear Aren't we?: Yes, we certainly are. And even a small amount from each one of us, given in love and reaching out to a poorer part of the world, can do more in the way of encouragement than most of us realize. Thank you for giving us such striking examples.

Dear Doris: The Canadian Pen Pal Club is worth telling your readers about. Our purpose is to provide a source of friendly correspondence for all, particularly for senior citizens, the distressed and lonely, the blind, shut-ins, nursing home residents.

To cover the expenses of circulating information there is a membership fee of $1. per year.

Dear Reg: A fascinating hobby. Readers: If you want to learn more about the Canadian Pen Pal Club, write to me.

Continents Are Passengers On Globe-girdling Plates

OTTAWA (CP)—The continents are passengers on the backs of massive plates that slide slowly about the globe, says geologist Warren Hamilton, explaining his theory of continental drift.

After decades of scorn and years of heated academic debate, it seems the theory, now called plate tectonics, has finally gained scientific respectability.

A concept widely embraced by laymen because it seemed so logical, tectonics now appears to be the only mechanism that can explain how the earth is changing and what it has done in the past.

Plate tectonics "put geology together in a way that makes sense," said Dr. Hamilton, a geologist with the United States Geological Survey at Denver, Colo., during a visit here.

Geophysicists rejected the notion because they could not make it work mathematically. By 1960, Dr. Hamilton said, geologists were just groping.

"None of the ideas was any good, but they had no new ones."

The drift theory slowly approached acceptance when geophysicists began studying the ocean floor in the 1950s. Scientists discovered the ocean floor was much younger than the planet as a whole—about 200 million years at most—compared to the estimated 4.6-billion-year span of the earth in general.

Scientists also discovered huge trenches and a world-girdling undersea mountain ridge that runs through all the oceans, coming ashore in such geologically unstable areas as southern California.

It was proposed in the mid-60s that the sea floor was spreading outward from this ridge, constantly creating a new floor. At the same time, old sea floor was sliding under the earth's crust in the deep trench areas.

The annual rate of movement is five to 10 centimetres, three to five inches, and, Dr. Hamilton said, "that isn't much in one year, but it's 100 kilometres—62 miles—in a million years or 10,000 kilometres in a hundred million years."

The situation in California, where the plates slip visibly by each other at the San Andreas fault, is of more immediate concern to geologists. At the present rate of six centimetres a year California a will eventually collide with Alaska, which by that time, will be south of where it is now.

The reasons given for continental drift vary. Most geologists believe the motions are caused by convection, which occurs when heated air or liquid rises, loses some of its heat and sinks again.

Fossils and other evidence found in various parts of the world made sense only if the continents had once been joined in one land. Using these fossils and rocks, geologists were able to trace the movements of continents for the last few hundred million years or so.

Dr. Hamilton has been exploring the drift theory since his first visit to Antarctica in 1958, when he became convinced that certain geological formations were exactly what the drift theory had predicted.

Despite such obvious hints as the parallel indentations of the African and South American coastlines, no one thought seriously about the possibility of drifting continents until 19-15. Then a German meteorologist, Alfred Wegener, pieced together a mass of geological evidence into a drift theory that was scorned and promptly forgotten by the scientific community.

It's a phenomenon familiar to anyone who has ever watched a kettle of jam boil. In the comparison, continents are the foam that collects on the top of the jam, the ridges are where the jam bubbles up, and the trenches are where it returns to the bottom of the kettle.

Dr. Hamilton finds this theory "just doesn't face up to the geometry of the earth." He suggests geophysicists have welcomed it "because you can make beautiful computer models of it."

Unfortunately, he said, it would forbid such phenomena as trenches running into ridges, which happens in the real and untidy world.

Bylaw Highlights Allow City Residents to Get Home Grants

While Belleville's proposed minimum maintenance bylaw is having problems clearing local hurdles, highlights of the document have been approved by the province and provincial grants have been received to begin upgrading city housing standards.

The province announced several months ago that those communities with maintenance bylaws or at least highlights of intended bylaws could receive funding.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey at that time said Belleville could receive $100,000 from the province — provided the city could submit at least the "highlights" of a minimum maintenance bylaw.

The mayor said Monday the city has received an installment of the grant totalling $27,000 and that council will discuss the application process for the funds to be distributed.

Depending on the need and financial condition of the home owner, loans can be drawn from the provincial money at interest rates ranging from zero to eight per cent. "Principally, the money will be intended for plumbing and electrical renovation," said the mayor.

Locally, the proposed bylaw has met with broad opposition as too stringent a document.

The Quinte Home Builders Association — after receiving a copy of the bylaw — set up a committee to go through the document and make submission for changes.

Roy Breault said during an interview, the city should stick with maintenance and not get into land use in the bylaw.

A subdividers liaison committee will be meeting with the mayor and members of council soon to re-think portions of the bylaw, said Mr. Breault.

Report Shows Hospital Exceeded Initial Budget

1974 was "a year of militant union negotiations and supplementary budgets were needed to cover the cost of the settlements" says the report of the executive director to the Belleville General Hospital Board of Governors' annual meeting.

In his report, submitted to the board last week, Philip Rickard noted the hospital's net operating cost was $2,948,054 compared to an initial budget figure of $8,153,456.

Capital equipment purchases amounted to $186,678, he added.

In the area of planning, Mr. Rickard commented, "the Gordon Report proved a somewhat superficial study of the health needs and extremely disappointing in that it failed to recognize the need for more nursing home beds in the area".

Regarding staff, he remarked, "probably due to the economic climate and the financial restraints there was a greatly reduced turnover among all the staff".

Mr. Rickard said admissions to active treatment beds numbered 10,868, an increase of only 26 over 1973. However, the number of active treatment patient days increased from 96,717 to 101,023 and the length of stay went up from 9.03 to 9.28 days.

There were 405 admissions to general rehabilitation beds and 266 admissions to chronic beds. Admissions to the Queen's Self-Care Unit increased from 1,701 to 1,967.

Mr. Rickard pointed out "there was again a small increase in the number of babies delivered, 1,193 as compared to 1,174, but they used only 7,156 days compared to 8,340 in 1973 and the length of stay dropped from 7.05 to 6.05 days."

The home care department handled 1,847 patients compared to 1,572 patients in 1973.

Oil Rigs May Use Aluminum

LONDON (CPP) — Aluminum armor, which has already replaced steel in three British army combat vehicles, may provide the answer to the weight problem of giant oil rigs.

The super aluminum was developed in Britain by the Alcan group and now is a feature of Britain's Scorpion lightweight tank as well as the Fox armored car and a new combat engineering tractor.

Col. Richard Warren-Piper, Alcan Booth's international defence sales manager, said his company is investigating ways in which the alloy can be used to replace steel on oil rigs. Weight in the upper structure of the big new rigs has become a problem.

The super aluminum cuts the normal steel weight of armor in a combat vehicle by a tenth at a cost some 15 per cent lower than steel. Although it is much lighter than steel it must be three times as thick to provide comparable armor—and this gives a vehicle or structure much more rigidity so that bulkheads and stiffeners can be dispensed with. In terms of oil rigs, Alcan says this can lead to major weight savings.

Alcan is also to offer its advanced aluminum armor to other NATO countries that are planning new generations of fighting vehicles. A marketing team will this summer visit fighting vehicle designers, research and development establishments, manufacturers and defence ministries in West Germany, France and other European countries. The company is already supplying armor to French arsenals.

Too Little Alcohol Not Harmful: Clement

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — No one suffers if there is too little alcohol abuse and television violence, but everyone suffers if there is too much, Ontario Attorney-General John Clement said Monday.

He told the Chatham-Kent Progressive Conservative Association's annual meeting that Ontario decided against more liberal liquor laws and established a royal commission to examine media violence in order to protect personal safety.

The minister said the government refused after a two-year study of liquor laws to allow suggestions such as selling beer in supermarkets, longer drinking hours or drinking in parks.

One of the major reasons for the decision was that greater accessibility to alcohol leads to increased problem drinking, Mr. Clement said studies show a connection between problem drinking and violent crime.

He said a 1968 Ontario study showed 69 per cent of those sent to provincial training centres, reformatories and industrial farms were "intemperate drinkers."

"It would be nice to say that everyone should do as they wish and suffer their own consequences," he said. "But the fact is, we all end up paying, in one way or another. When applied to alcohol, greater freedom has a social price."

Commenting on criticisms by news media and opposition parties to the commission on violence, he said the important audience of such a study is that it will initiate debate on the issues.

"Strong recommendations are needed which are relevant to Canadian networks, producers and jurisdictional responsibilities. This is not a frontier where the fittest survive. It is a civilized society with the objective of eliminating violence, not learning to endure it."

Text of his speech was released in advance.

Beating Alleged

TORONTO (CP) — A 26-year-old prisoner testified Monday that he was stripped naked beaten by a group of Toronto jail guards and "left to freeze to death" in a segregation cell in the jail basement.

John Arthur Meagher, serving a five-year manslaughter sentence in Dorchester, N.B., penitentiary, said he was threatened by a superintendent, hit by a prisoner and refused medical treatment.

Meagher, flown here under guard, was testifying before the royal commission investigating allegations of brutality by guards.

He said the beating took place Oct. 27, 1973, while he was waiting for his trial to start.

Protest Fails

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Despite a protest march by 300 elementary school teachers, the Sault Ste. Marie board of education approved its 1975 budget Monday.

Placard-carrying teachers demonstrated outside the board office in an attempt to persuade the board to defer its elementary school budget for further consideration.

Earlier, Calvin Shaule, communications officer for the branch, said teachers wanted the board to take advantage of additional available grants to improve programs and that the demonstration was not related to salaries.

Youth Sentenced

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Wendell Ireland, 17, of London, Ont., was sentenced in provincial court Monday to a two-year probationary term for participating in the robbery last Jan. 21 of a supermarket in Thamesford, Ont., about 19 miles northeast of here.

Ireland was the last to be sentenced of four persons charged along with Donald Wayne Cline, 21.

Cline, from the St. Thomas, Ont., area, is awaiting trial on the robbery charge and charges of kidnapping and holding four children for ransom and attempting to murder two policemen.

Conditions Better

KENORA, Ont. (CP) — Chief Roy MacDonald of the Whitedog Indian Reserve near here says social conditions for Indians in northwestern Ontario have improved moderately recently but there is still need for employment among natives on the reserves.

Favor Gas Tax

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A key congressional tax committee voted Monday to impose higher car fuel taxes to increase the cost of motoring as a way to reduce United States consumption of foreign oil.

The House of Representatives ways and means committee approved on a 21-to-11 vote an extra three-cents-a-gallon gasoline tax next year and possible higher taxes later. The committee originates all tax legislation in Congress.

Cadets to Train

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 2,000 army cadets will follow training courses at 31 regular summer camps and at a special Arctic indoctrination course this year, the Army Cadet League headquarters says.

To Review Charges

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will review further information about alleged violence by members of the Seafarer's International Union (SIU) before deciding "what further steps should be taken," Justice Minister Otto Lang said Monday.

Replying in the Commons to Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West), Mr. Lang would not commit himself to an inquiry into the alleged SIU violence.

Jobs Lost

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — A potential 38,000 jobs have been lost in Ontario as a result of a $2.70-a-barrel increase in the price of domestic crude oil, provincial Energy Minister Dennis Timbrell said Monday.

How one pork cut can solve your dinnertime dilemma three times this week.

One of the most tempting advantages that fresh Ontario Pork has to offer besides being nutritious, is it's delicious versatility. It's easy to see why. With such a subtle, rich flavour it can be prepared in many, many different ways. And just to prove that point we offer as an example the economical pork shoulder butt cut you see here, from which you can make three totally distinctive recipes. All you have to do is divide about a 7 lb. roast into two pieces by cutting across it with a very sharp knife, close to the bone on the boneless side. The piece with bone will make a great one-meal roast. You can then cut 6 shoulder chops about ½ inch thick from the large end of the remaining piece and the small end can be cut into cubes. So with your roast, chops and cubes, you can give your family three exciting new dishes, all from one cut of pork. And the only thing repetitious about them will be the praise you receive.

Pork and Potato Scallop

1 tablespoon oil
6 pork shoulder butt chops
¼ cups sliced raw potato
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
Salt and pepper
½ cups hot milk

Heat oil in frypan, brown shoulder butt chops. Place a layer of potatoes and onion slices in 2-quart shallow casserole or baking dish. Sprinkle with some of the flour, salt and pepper. Repeat, ending with layer of potatoes. Pour over enough hot milk to almost cover potatoes. Arrange chops on top of potatoes. Bake, covered, in preheated 350° oven for 45 minutes. Uncover and bake 15 minutes longer until potatoes are done. Makes 5–6 servings. Great with buttered spinach, Waldorf salad.

Pork and Noodle Bake

½ pound fresh pork shoulder butt
1–2 tablespoons oil or drippings
1 medium onion, chopped
2 celery stalks, sliced
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dried thyme
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 (10 ounce) can condensed cream of mushroom soup
1 (10 ounce) package frozen peas
1 cup water
6–8 ounces dry egg noodles
½ cup bread crumbs
½ cup grated cheddar cheese
1 tablespoon melted butter

Cut pork shoulder butt into 1-inch cubes. Heat oil or drippings in frypan; brown pork cubes. Stir in chopped onion, celery slices, salt, thyme, pepper, mushroom soup and water. Cover and simmer for 30 minutes. While pork simmers cook noodles as package directs; drain.

Add noodles and peas. Spoon into shallow baking dish. Rub bread crumbs, grated cheese and butter together. Sprinkle over pork mixture. Bake in 350° oven for 30 minutes. Makes 6 servings. Serve with crisp celery and carrot sticks.

Apple-Glazed Roast Pork

4–5 pound fresh pork shoulder butt roast
1 small onion, grated
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 tablespoon soy sauce
½ teaspoon ground ginger
1 cup apple juice

Place fresh pork shoulder butt roast fat side up on rack in shallow roasting pan. Score fat layer in diamonds or squares. Insert meat thermometer into centre of meat without touching bone. Roast, uncovered, in 325° oven for 1 hour. While pork roasts prepare apple glaze: Melt butter or margarine in a small saucepan. Sauté shredded onion until soft. Thoroughly mix together cornstarch, brown sugar, soy sauce, ground ginger and apple juice. Pour into onions in pan; cook over low heat, stirring constantly until thick. Brush part of glaze over meat. Continue roasting, brushing pork every 15 minutes, 1 hour longer until glazed sparkling brown and thermometer registers 170° and pork is tender (allow about 35 minutes per pound roasting time). Let roast stand on warm platter 10 to 15 minutes to make carving easier. Makes 5–6 servings. Serve with potatoes au gratin, buttered green beans, celery cabbage salad.

Council Briefs

Church Lease Continues

City council Monday night extended for five years a lease on city property used by Tabernacle United Church.

Ald. George Zegouras said he had received a complaint about dust problems on the lot.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said the agreement contained a clause stating the area would be kept dust-free.

The lot is leased for $1 a year.

Planning Budget Approved

City council Monday formally approved its contribution of $81,700 to the proposed 1975 Quinte Planning Board (QPB) budget.

The city, as the largest member municipality, pays 53 per cent of the QPB budget, this year estimated at $173,000.

Other municipalities in the QPB are Trenton, Frankford, and Sidney and Thurlow townships

City Share Unchanged

Belleville this year pays about the same as in 1974 to the Hastings-Prince Edward Counties Health Unit budget.

The city's share this year was assessed at almost $66,900 — some 14 per cent above 1974. But the city also got a refund of $6,900 on funds not spent by the unit last year.

Thus, said Ald. Jean Smith, a council appointee to the board, this year's budget demand on the city treasury is almost identical to 1974.

Council approved payment of $59,966 to the health budget.

Grant Request Referred

Belleville and District Employment Committee Monday requested $250 from city council.

The amount sought by the committee — which promotes and monitors employment opportunities in the area — was unchanged from last year.

City council referred the request to the city manager's department.

Cheese Show Seeks Aid

The British Empire Dairy Show — largest cheese competition in Canada which has been held for years in Belleville — has asked for a $500 grant from city council.

This is up $50 from the 1974 city grant — used to help offset expenses of the exhibition held in late November.

City council Monday passed the request on to the city manager.

OFY Grant Lacking

A shortfall in an Opportunities For Youth grant has sent organizers at a project for pre-school youngsters to the community for funds.

The federal government allowed only $100 for supplies in funding the project, Alanna Watson wrote city council Monday on behalf of Hillcrest Head Start for Preschoolers. At least $600 is needed for supplies for the program which received a $6,250 OFY grant.

Council formally received the request. But Mayor Robin Jeffrey said she would write the project indicating another "possible source" of funds.

Truckers Protest Hiring

Independent truckers have protested against the city hiring outside operators, Ald. Jack Ireland told council Monday.

He said the truckers are "greatly concerned" and "complained quite bitterly" about hiring outsiders while they paid local taxes and are "overlooked."

"They seemed to be very unhappy with our system," he added.

He wondered if a report could be prepared to "show there is no discrimination."

Playground Week Approved

Playground Week will be staged in Belleville July 7-11 to focus attention on an integral part of the city's recreation program.

City Council Monday night agreed to officially proclaim the event.

Social Costs Up

Belleville's share of the Hastings County budget for social services is up for 1975, city council learned Monday.

The overall costs for all municipalities in the county system will be known this week as county council begins its annual budget session today.

The city's share of the overall cost is listed at $158,700 — compared to about $170,000 in 1974.

Resolution Supported

A council resolution, calling for amendments to provincial and federal legislation was adopted last month by the AMO board of directors, city council learned Monday.

Service to Continue

Transfer of control of the federal marine radio station from Kingston will still preserve the "integrity" of the service's safety factor, city council has been told.

Council earlier expressed concern over removal of manual control of the station in Cardinal. The Kingston Facility will be operated by remote control.

The ministry says the level of service — including local weather forecasts — will not diminish.

Maimen Back on North Sidney Soon

Home delivery of mail on a section of north Sidney will resume as soon as walking conditions on the roadway improve, Hugo Wainwright Belleville postmaster said today.

Mr. Wainwright said city reconstruction in the area now is excavating for installation of sewer pipes. As soon as excavations are concluded, the ditch filled and conditions are "suitable" for mailmen, deliveries will resume, said the official.

A recent letter from Postmaster General Bryce MacKasey expected home delivery of mail in the zone would restart in a few days. Mr. MacKasey's letter followed a protest from Mayor Robin Jeffrey after home mail services were suspended on a stretch of Sidney between Cascade Blvd. and Parkdale Baptist Church were suspended because of traffic hazards.

There is no sidewalk in the area, which involves about 30 homes.

As a substitute, the post office installed community letter boxes at the church parking lot where the homeowners could pick up mail.

Humane Society Pact To Outline All Services

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

City hall wants its new contract with the Ontario Humane Society (OHS) to clearly spell out what services the agency will provide in the coming year.

The move—the latest in a lengthy series of uncertainties over the OHS—city agreement — came Monday when Mayor Robin Jeffrey revealed the agency had never exactly outlined what it has to offer as services.

Council has been wrestling with the possibility of replacing the OHS with its own dog-control service after the society — facing a deficit — sought higher fees late last year. Two weeks ago council balked at the last minute from cancelling OHS services and evolving its own operation. While pondering alternatives it agreed to renew its contract with the agency for one more year.

But, said Mayor Jeffrey, she and city clerk Earl Dafoe had searched various bylaws governing the original contract dating back to 1968. They discovered there was no reference to the number of warrant vehicles to be used by the OHS in Belleville.

She said somewhere along the negotiating line with the OHS there was "a statement made" that a 24-hour service with two wardens would be provided. But "we don't have that in writing."

Mayor Jeffrey said she was "amazed" such stipulations were not part of the agreement.

Ald. Jean Smith said she'd had complaints that the OHS was a "nine-to-five operation" with service "hard to get" on weekends.

She proposed — and council agreed — that a bylaw ratifying the one-year agreement be approved in principle. But its endorsement would depend on the contract spell out that the OHS would provide two wardens and a 24-hour service.

The new contract boosts the cost of service in three stages from the last per capita fee of 75 cents. These are $1 from January; $1.10 from July 1 and $1.25 effective next January.

Killing Must Stop

Tom Hughes, executive vice-president of the Ontario Humane Society, urged Quinte Branch members to develop population control methods as opposed to killing unwanted animals. "Get rid of the problem (by spaying or neutering) before they are born," said Mr. Hughes. He was speaking at the annual meeting of the society in Belleville Monday.

Runacres Defends Closed Meetings

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

Director of education Eric Runacres defended board policy on closed meetings Monday night against what some board members felt was criticism from the press.

Although open to interpretation the new Education Act has virtually opened previously closed committee of the whole and committee meetings The board's policy firmly states that all committee of the whole and committee meetings are to be closed without exception.

Mr. Runacres said he believed the board's policy was in "counterbalance" to the new Education Act. He said the policy does not contravene the act.

"I suppose it would be a matter of test whether the courts would accept it," he said. He explained matters of property, personnel and some financial concerns must be dealth with in closed sessions.

Mr. Runacres said the board is making an effort to get as much as possible into the open session. Stirling trustee Donald Williams asked Mr. Runacres about the charges made in the press.

In March the Hastings-Prince Edward County Board of Education faced the same problem and that board did acknowledge its own policy was not in keeping with the new education act.

The separate school board revised its policy to concur with the new education act. A legal opinion obtained from the board indicated that the ministry of education intended a majority of committee of the whole and committee meetings to be open.

At Monday night's meeting there was no further discussion from other trustees.

Society Predicts Lower Loss in Current Year

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The Ontario Humane Society Quinte Branch will substantially reduce its operating loss this year, members were told at the society's annual meeting at the shelter Monday.

The society locally is primarily concerned with animal control in Belleville but also serve as an eastern Ontario holding centre for animals seized from their owners.

The society budget was $55,200 in the red for 1974 — a financial situation previously executive director Tom Tighe Hughes described as "disastrous."

"Obviously, we can't go on for long like that," he told the handful of members who attended the meeting.

To make matters worse for the society's books, the city of Belleville earlier this year announced it intended pulling out of the society — meaning a capital loss of $25,000.

Mr. Hughes, not remarked, "wisdom prevailed" and the city extended its contract with the humane society rather than building a municipal pound.

With a new rate structure based on an average of $1.85 per capita, the society anticipates a deficit 1975 of $14,000.

Society Take 2

"A loss of $14,000 is still more than we can afford and now the problem is to raise this money during the year," said Mr. Hughes.

On a provincial scale, he said the society was $250,000 in the red during 1974 and that "more governmental assistance is becoming a priority."

Mr. Hughes said Belleville is one of the few societies in the province that is losing money in a large way and that because a number of societies make a profit, the Belleville loss can be subsidized.

He said had council refused to agree with the per capita rate structure, the society would have pulled out of the city.

Citizens Bureau Now Has New Quarters and Name

It's now official — the former Citizens Bureau in Trenton has returned to Belleville to continue its operation as the new Quinte Information and Assistance Centre at 227A Coleman St.

Located in a former "cold" room of an old dairy, the centre is not exactly in plush surroundings. But extensive renovations will be made to upgrade the inside appearance and increase comfort, says Bill Hockley, centre representative.

"We didn't want something too costly but we wanted something where there were no stairs for older people," he pointed out Monday.

Office hours are from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and the new telephone numbers are 962-9218 and 962-8218. Services to the public are free.

Mr. Hockley said the centre will attempt to incorporate its name and has applied to the provincial government to have centre member Peggy Greenwell authorized as a commissioner of affidavits.

TAKE 2

Mr. Hockley said the centre has noticed a change in the scope of its duties. He explained in the past three or four weeks, whether because more people in the area are being laid off from work or due to changing economic conditions, there has been an increase in social problems.

Fish Net Missing

CONSECON — Police are investigating theft of a boom net valued at $400 from Consecon Lake.

The net owned by Bruce Cooper of RR 4, Picton was set last week and reported missing Monday.

Constable Douglas Cooke is investigating for the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police.

Officials to Discuss Future of Fairgrounds

The futuse, of the Quinte Exhibition and the Belleville Fairgrounds it uses for its activities is to come under scrutiny early next month.

City council Monday night decided to seek a round-table discussion May 14 with the Belleville Agricultural Society — organizer of the historic exhibition.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey agreed the society needs "some kind of plan" to define the future.

Debate among councillors was touched off after they granted a society request to sell off Sidney St. June 14-15 for its exhibition.

A problem posed is the pace of modern development which now places the Fairgrounds in the centre of a bustling city — Sidney St., for instance, has become a major traffic route.

Ald. Joe Cox said both the city and the society should develop "long-range plans" for the fairgrounds.

He said the city couldn't continue to close off Sidney St. "indefinitely — depending on how many fairs there are."

Mayor Jeffrey said the society already had proposed a study session with council to discuss such problems.

Council decided that parks director Lloyd Syer and recreation director Clifford Belch should also attend the meeting.

Tires Slashed

City police are investigating a tire-slashing incident at Kelly's Travel-Trailers at 845 North Front St.

Chief Douglas Corabie said today three tires were slashed for a total damage value of $184.00.

The incident occurred between Saturday and 8 a.m. Monday when discovery was made.

Postage Meter Damaged

A 23-year-old Belleville man has been charged with wilful damage following damage to a postage meter at Stanley Structures Ltd. on Wilson St. Monday.

Chief Douglas Crosbie of city police identified the man today as Robert J. Clarke of 71 Stanley St.

Council Debates Payment for New Park

City council Monday night presented personal gifts to city students involved in the past month in the Mayors-of-the-Week program. The project selects two students at a time to sit in on municipal meetings, thus discovering how local government works. Among recipients getting gifts from Mayor Robin Halloran were Lorraine McDonnell, Ontario Business College.

City council Monday night found itself unavoidably discussing land assembly for a park in east end Belleville — before negotiations have started with a subdivider.

The proposed development — west of Haig Rd., south of East Bridge St. — is in a sector where a community park is being planned.

Before council for its approval was a draft plan of subdivision from developers Kathis and Hallaran which originally proposed to build 10 houses in the area.

The draft plan will be recommended first to the province's housing ministry.

Council's stipulations included acquisition of six building lots from the scheme to add to its proposed park project.

Other developments are planned in the area which will make a community park setting ideal for the youngsters who eventually will be residents of the area, said Mayor Jeffrey.

Ald. Paul Russell, parks board chairman, said plans call for 3.25-acre park. Already about 1.75 acres have been acquired from an adjacent developer

Ald. George Zegouras worried about the possible cost of the lots since the developer would know the city would look them for the park development.

Ald. Arthur Keegan said the purchase could be made when the city treasury had the money available.

Council approved the draft plan for submission to the ministry.

Business as Usual

It's business as usual for Bill Hockley (left) and Bert Gerling as they work in their new office of the Quinte Information and Assistance Centre at 237A Coleman Street in Belleville. Formerly the Citizens' Bureau in Trenton, the centre moved into its new quarters Monday.

Council Won't Protest Metric Conversion

City council Monday refused a request that it protest the metric system.

City councillor Stu Meeks was only one vote for his call for the "grassroots" stand against a process he warned would cost billions.

Council turned down Ald. Meeks' plea 9-2 after Ald. Arthur Keegan cast the sole supporting vote after seconding the motion to have it debated.

Ald. Meeks said the metric system would adversely affect Canada's trade balance. The United States, the country's main trading partner, "was indicating reluctance to go metric by that date."

Adjustment by business and industry would cost billions of dollars — which ultimately would be passed onto the consumer.

Ald. Wally Dever, a school principal, said it seemed a "rather odd" time to introduce such a move since introducing the metric system was stated as government policy in 1970.

Fire Levels Cottage

SHANNONVILLE — Fire destroyed a one-room cottage on the Tyendinaga Mohawk reserve west of here early today.

Tom Maracle, chief constable of the reserve police department said the small building had burned to the ground when the department arrived shortly after 1.30 a.m.

Parts of fish were found in the area and the officer believes the fire may have been caused by anglers frying fish caught in the nearby Salmon River.

Soft Touch?—Not Islanders

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Jean Potvin says star centre Bobby Clarke of Philadelphia Flyers would be wise not to attempt any "cheap shots" against New York Islanders tonight.

The Islanders travelled by bus to the Spectrum for the opener of the best-of-seven semi-final National Hockey League playoff series confident they won't be intimidated by the Stanley Cup champions.

"We respect Bobby Clarke very much as a player," Potvin said. "He's a fantastic competitor. He loves to win and he'll do anything to win, and you don't see that in too many hockey players. But I don't think we've taken anything from Bobby this year."

Potvin, the older brother of Denis, recalled that in the second game of the season Clarke took what Potvin felt was a cheap shot at Islander Garry Howatt.

"But Garry turned around and dropped the 'gloves and went after Clarke. Benches emptied . . . and I think Clarke swallowed a few good licks that night and I'm sure he realizes he's going to be a little more careful about cheap shots."

Potvin believes Clarke is too smart a player to collect penalties in the playoffs that might cost a goal.

That doesn't mean the Flyers won't try to intimidate the Islanders.

"This is usually their style," the Islander defenceman said. "Then they settle down to playing their tight checking style of hockey."

Potvin also believes the Flyers will be a bit more cautious in attempting to intimidate the Islanders.

"We've had a lot of fights with them. They know we're not scared to drop our gloves and they respect us for it."

The Flyers, division champions, drew a bye in the first round of the playoffs, and waited a week before routing Toronto Maple Leafs in four games of their quarter-final.

Then they had to wait for the outcome of the series between Pittsburgh Penguins and the Islanders.

That was decided Saturday night when the Islanders won 1-0 and captured the series 4-3.

In the regular season, the Flyers had three wins, two ties and one loss against the Islanders. But the New York club has been coming on strong in the last six weeks. All but four of their games are in the playoffs for the first time.

"We have worked very hard," Potvin said.

But the Flyers, are overwhelming favorites against New York.

Few people gave the Islanders a chance of even making the playoffs which went down to the last two games of the season for them.

The Islanders have no superstars and no 60-goal scorers. Only their six 20-goal scorers, Bobby Nystrom tops the list with 27.

"I think this says a lot," Potvin said. "That's a great indication of a team that plays together. . . . We won't give the series away to anybody.—Philadelphia, Montreal or Buffalo."

BOBBY CLARKE

Meanwhile, Bernie Parent of the Flyers missed Monday's practice with a pinched nerve in his back and there was some doubt that he'll be in condition for tonight's game.

Dr. John Wolf, the team's physician, said that whether he plays or not will depend on Parent.

We've Matured—Shoenfeld

BUFFALO (CP) — Last year at this time, Buffalo Sabres had started their summer vacation early after finishing in fifth place in the National Hockey League's East Division, missing a playoff spot by 19 points.

The Sabres had a number of unfortunate thing a happen to them in the 1973-74 season injuries to key stars and the death of veteran defenceman Tim Horton in a car accident in late February.

But one member of this year's club says that last year's adversity has had a lot to do with this year's success.

"I think last year matured us," said captain Jim Shoenfeld on the eve of tonight's second game of their semi-final series against Montreal Canadiens.

"We learned to respect each other's talents. We have uniformity—20 guys are thinking as one. We all have one thing in mind and that's to win the Stanley Cup.

"When 20 guys are thinking like that it's hard to stop them."

The Sabres won Sunday's opening game of the best-of-seven series, beating Montreal 5-0 on Danny Gare's overtime goal.

In some pre-season polls, the Sabres were picked to finish third in the Adams Division behind Boston Bruins and Toronto Maple Leafs but Buffalo, under new head coach Floyd Smith, finished with a 113 points to easily win the division title.

"We didn't worry about the predictions," Shoenfeld said. "Every year you get predictions from some of the so-called experts . . . one guy even picked California ahead of us."

But the Sabres started off strongly and finished with the second-best record in the league behind the defending champion Philadelphia Flyers and just ahead of the Canadiens.

"Two years ago, when we played Montreal in the quarter-finals, there wasn't any pressure on us to win," Shoenfeld said. "They were supposed to beat us in four and we took them to six games. The playoffs were a new experience for us. I was awestruck. I couldn't believe the difference between the playoffs and the regular season.

"The pressure was all on them then, but this year it's different. We're expected to do well this time. We want to beat them four times during the season.

"It will never be a romp over them. We're going to have to work.

"Sunday, both defences were a little off. We were geared to Chicago and their style is completely different to Montreal's.

"Montreal played Vancouver and, like Chicago, Vancouver plays a defensive game So it took a little while for us to adjust to each other Sunday had a lot of quick breaks early.

"I think you'll find both defences will tighten up. I hope so."

The Sabres will have either Roger Crozier or Gary Bromley in goal tonight. Crozier replaced starter Gerry Desjardins in the opening game Sunday after Desjardins hurt his right knee in the first minute of play.

Forward Rick Dudley will also miss tonight's game with a badly bruised left knee and coach Smith said he did not know when the two would return to the lineup.

The Canadiens will dress the same players but coach Scotty Bowman plans some line juggling. Guy Lafleur is set to play on a line with centre Jacques Lemaire and Bob Gainey while Yvan Cournoyer will take Lafleur's right wing spot with centre Pete Mahovlich and Steve Shutt.

Tonight's game will be televised on the CBC national network starting at 8 p.m. EDT.

The series shifts to Montreal for the third and fourth games Thursday and Saturday.

Stamp of Approval From Lord Killanin

MONTREAL (CP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee (IOC), Monday put his personal stamp of approval on progress toward the completion of facilities for the 1976 Summer Olympics.

The IOC decided in February that because of a seven-week labor dispute and rising costs which inflated the estimated outlay to $653 million from $310 million, it would carry out periodic inspections.

Lord Killanin's visit was the first of the series of on-the-spot examinations the IOC will conduct between now and opening day July 17, 1976.

He spent Saturday touring outlying sites at Joliette, L'Acadie and Bromont—venues for archery, shooting, and touring the site of the main stadium, velodrome and Olympic Village.

He said he was "surprised" by progress on the main stadium site, where everything appeared to be moving ahead "according to plan."

"I was very much impressed with what I saw and there is no doubt in my mind—barring some world cataclysm—the Games will open on time next year," he said. "If I were a Canadian, I'd be proud of the work that is going into this complex."

He also expressed satisfaction with progress being made at the Bromont, L'Acadie and Joliette sites, as well as the cycling facility currently under construction at Rimouski, Que., 175 miles west of Montreal.

Hawley Will Stay

INGLEWOOD, Calif (AP) — Sandy Hawley, Hollywood Park's leading rider, says he'll race at the track this week rather than return to Canada.

Hawley had threatened to return to Toronto after the United States immigration department revoked the work permit of his agent, Colin Wick.

But he decided to remain at the track this week while friends and a lawyer work on reinstatement of Wick's permit.

The new Fiat 131. It's not a dream car. It's a reality car.

The way things are today, you'd assume that the dream car would have seen its end. But somehow it persists. Despite all the whoopla you've been hearing, in 1973 the average car made in Canada will weigh 4000 pounds and get 16 miles a gallon.*

At Fiat we've built our cars to deal with the world as it really is.

The new Fiat squarely faces the problem of survival. If you've gotten used to trading in your car every 2 or 3 years, the 131 should come as a pleasant surprise.

The engine was tested for over a million miles. The valves last twice as long as ordinary valves. The piston rings are plated with chromium. They last far longer than ordinary rings.

The 131 faces the problem of rust. Its entire underbody is sealed against the elements. The exhaust system is made of special steel, impervious to corrosion.

The 131 faces up to the inevitability of accidents. The passenger cell is protected by horizontal steel rings at the floor, waist and roof. The gas tank is tucked away against a pressed-steel bulkhead behind rear seat. The steering column collapses should there be a head-on collision.

The 131 gives passengers in the front seat more legroom than the Cadillac El Dorado. Yet it is shorter than a Vega. It deals very nicely with parking and traffic.

Last, the 131 faces the spiraling costs of owning a car. It's designed to be economical, not just on gas, but on day-to-day maintenance and repair.

In times like these, isn't the reality car starting to sound more and more like a dream?

Full-Size Chevrolet

Now, beautiful Impala Custom Coupe and Caprice Couple models are even more beautiful.

With these new padded vinyl Landau roofs, Chevrolet full-size creates an exciting new look. (Just like Landau roofs on Chevelle and Monte Carlo.)

And, going even one step further, Impala and Caprice include a complete Landau Styling Package.

Like accent stripes. Deluxe bumpers. Body-coloured wheel covers. And dual body-coloured sports mirrors, with remote control on driver's side.

Put all that together with the standard features you'd expect to get on Chevrolet...like power steering and brakes, automatic transmission, double-panel roof construction and you've got the perfect combination of function and elegance.

Some of the equipment illustrated is optional at extra cost. Seat belts—an idea you can live with.

No Shortage of Players

Early indications point to a bumper crop of talent in the Quinte Fastball League (QFL) for the 1975 season.

Most teams are busy taking a long look at players who are turning up by the number for early workout sessions.

Devolin Motors, with new coach Lyle Thompson calling the shots, has Bill Shaw back to manage the club.

Thompson, a proven QFL performer himself, has decided to try his hand at coaching and he's been more than satisfied with the response pre-season practices have received from prospective players.

Another QFL regular each season, Ellis Juniors are back and that club also has a new look.

Russ Soule is coach and may receive some assistance with that part of the operation later, from Bob Boyle. Ted Soule has accepted the manager's duties with the team.

Russ, while mildly cursing the cool weather which is prevailing lately, is impressed with the calibre of young players that have been showing their stuff in the early going.

Admitting that it's a little early to tell when assessing the club's possibilities Russ is more than happy with the way things have progressed to date.

Howard and Robert Printing is the other entry from back in the league for another season.

Playoff champion last season, the Printers have lefty Bob Ethier back and coach Don Dolan will no doubt field another strong contender.

Anger Men's Wear of Trenton, Horabeck Real Estate, Wellington, and Barden Supplies round out the six-team grouping.

League play will open May 11.

Ron Sedore will handle league statistician duties this year.

SLICES — Registrations for the girls' division of the Belleville Minor Softball Association continues through this week until Friday. Youngsters may register at the Recreation Centre on Pinnacle St. between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., daily.

Toronto, Barrie, Guelph and Whitby are mentioned as possible entries in a proposed "professional development hockey league".

Organizers, among them Toronto lawyer Joe Kane, say a number of communities in southern Ontario could support such a league.

Word is officials from at least nine cities have expressed interest in discussing the possibilities of operating such a league.

Still nothing official at press time concerning a decision on the the Oakridge Acres Charterways' protest to the Ontario Minor Hockey Association concerning the Juvenile AA final series with Trenton Birt's Handy Stand.

OMHA secretary - manager Vern McCallum said this morning that the committee handling the protest had not submitted a decision. He expects word on the matter later today.

Quick now. When was the first major league baseball night game played?

It will be exactly 40 years ago, May 24.

History was made in 1935 when Philadelphia Phillies met Cincinnati Reds at Crosley Field in Cincinnati.

Paul Derringer of the Reds threw a six-hitter to lead his club to a 2-1 win.

Belleville Minor Hockey Association president Ken Coates was awarded his varsity hockey letter recently at Northeastern University in Boston. Injuries hampered the winger's play through much of the season. He picked up nine points in 21 games. A graduate of Nicholson Catholic College, Mark is a business administration major at Northeastern.

Olympics Capture Indoor Soccer Title

Overcoming a determined bid by Cosy Grill, Olympics captured the Belleville Indoor Soccer League playoff championship Monday night at Loyalist College.

Olympics brought their point total to five in the round robin playoff with a hard fought 2-1 win.

Goals by Kevin Kirby and Nick Del Grosso gave Olympics a 2-0 lead in the first half. Cosy Grill battled back after the interval and made it close when Dave Langman found the mark.

Goalie Keith Lawday stole the spotlight in the second game He faced four penalty shots and came up with the save each time as he and his John's Variety mates battled to a scoreless tie with Moira secondary School.

Moira and Cosy Grill finished the playoff series with three points each while John's had one point.

Allan Cup Series Still Up in the Air

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — It was still anybody's guess Monday night as to whether there will be a fourth game tonight in the Eastern Canada Allan Cup hockey series between St. John's Capitals and Barrie Orlis Flyers.

Officials of the Barrie club, which lead the best-of-five series 3-1, said Monday night there would be a game only if a special observer of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) and new game officials show up in time for the face off.

Action in the series has been suspended since Sunday when a wild first-period brawl resulted in the suspension of five individuals—four players and a team executive—from the series. Following the brawl, the Flyers refused to return in the ice to resume play, although the team was ahead 2-1 at the time.

The CAHA awarded the game to the host Capitals and scheduled the fourth game for Monday night but the Flyers said they were going home and refused only when the CAHA decided to send Cecil Reswick of Cambridge, Ont., to St. John's along with a referee and two linesmen from Quebec.

It was the latest incident in the series between the two teams since it opened last Friday. The first game was marred when Jack Smith of Barrie charged Bob Lambert of St. John's from behind, injuring the popular St. John's player. Smith was suspended from the series for his action.

The Flyers won the opener 8-4 and took another fight-filled game Saturday 8-5 in overtime.

Reswick, CAHA vice-president of senior and intermediate hockey, said Monday that neither team complained about the officiating in the first two games and Sunday's abbreviated encounter.

However, the CAHA felt it would not be fair to ask referee John Kelley of Labrador City, Nfld., to look after the game scheduled for tonight.

"There was no criticism of the referee from either team but it would be difficult to ask the guy to go back in for a fourth game," the CAHA official said.

He and the neutral ice officials were scheduled to fly to this capital city Monday but for closed down the airport here and they were expected to try again today.

Gordon Coates, general-manager of the Barrie club, said in an interview late Monday that his club would not go on the ice unless the neutral officials were there tonight.

Coates and Darryl Sly, the Barrie playing-coach, have been suspended indefinitely by the CAHA for refusing to continue play Sunday, and Ken Knapton of Barrie and Brian Mulcahy and Bob Lambert of St. John's were also thrown out of the series for their part in the brawl.

The teams took their feud to St. John's city council Monday with Barrie receiving apologies from Mayor Dorothy Wyatt for the actions of unruly fans and the Capitals team continuing to get in their digs.

Sly complained that the small team bus had had its tires deflated and the Flyers couldn't use it to get back to their hotel.

Mayor Wyatt assured the Barrie club there would be adequate protection against unruly fans and said she had called Mayor Doreen Parker of Barrie earlier in the day to apologize for the situation.

Councillor Ron O'Neill said he attended Sunday and called it "one of the most distasteful exhibitions I have ever seen in this city."

Councillor James Fagan blamed the whole atmosphere on "70 or 80 people" and on what he thought were attempts by Barrie players "to intimidate the Caps."

Saints 'Home' for Game 5

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec Nordiques have little reason to rejoice as they return to their home rink tonight to meet Minnesota Fighting Saints in the fifth game of their World Hockey Association best-of-seven semi-final series.

Home ice has offered small consolation to both teams, but with the series tied 2-2, it appears the Saints may have a slight psychological edge playing here.

Each team has managed one win away from home during the current series.

"It's like going home to play," Minnesota goaltender John Garrett said.

"We play as well in Quebec City as we do in our own rink."

Coach Harry Neale of the Saints also believes that home ice offers little advantage to a team, especially in the playoffs.

"Home ice may give a team a mental lift during the regular season, but during the playoffs it isn't much of a factor," Neale said.

In five meetings here this season, including the current playoffs, the Saints have defeated the Nordiques four times against only one loss.

While home ice may not be a factor, league statistics show that the Saints have the best record in the playoffs for power-play goals and killing penalties.

Minnesota has scored nine goals in 34 attempts while enjoying a man advantage, including four power-play goals against Quebec.

On the other hand, the Saints have played short-handed a total of 34 times but have allowed only five goals.

HARRY NEALE

The Nordiques power play was of the best in the WHA during the regular season, has managed only one goal against Quebec.

Following tonight's game the series shifts to St. Paul, Minn., Thursday, with the seventh game, if necessary, back here either Saturday or Sunday.

Aeros Not About To Relax

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Aeros hold a 3-0 lead over San Diego Mariners in their best-of-seven World Hockey Association semi-final playoff series, but Houston centre Jim Sherrit says the Aeros cannot afford to relax in tonight's third game.

"We have the advantage now, winning two games in their building," Sherrit said. "But we aren't relax. We have to make sure. All year those guys have come back, so they aren't about to quit."

The Aeros hope to end the series here. Games four and five also are scheduled in Sam Houston Coliseum Thursday and Saturday. The Mariners must win two of the three games here to carry the series back to the West Coast for a sixth game.

Sherrit scored the winning goal late in the second period Sunday night and goaltender Ron Grahame and the Houston defence did the rest in a 3-1 victory. Houston won the first game 4-0 Friday night.

"We were hoping to come out of it with one game," Aeros' centre Gordon Labossiere said. "We outplayed them in the first game and Ronnie won the second for us."

Until Wayne Rivers scored at 19:23 of the third period Sunday night, Grahame had strung together more than 141 minutes in shutout time.

"Ronnie was the difference," said Sherrit. "He was terrific in the first period when they got 18 shots and that seemed to wear them down. And we just keep plugging away and finally put the puck in the net."

Grahame said he never believed he could limit the Mariners to one goal in two games.

"With scorers like Rivers and Andre Lacoin, I never expected to hold them like this," he said. "But I have to say I think I've been lucky."

Colonels Advance

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky Colonels, with Artis Gilmore scoring 29 points, rolled over Spirits of St. Louis 123-105 Monday night to win the Eastern Division playoff championship 4-1 in American Basketball Association play.

The Colonels will meet the winner of the Indiana-Denver series which Indiana leads 3-2.

Dan Issel hit for 28 and Louie Dampier added 17 as the Colonels dominated the Spirits' defence. St. Louis fell apart early in the fourth period, despite an outstanding performance by Marvin Barnes, who pitched in 25 points.

Trailing him was team-mate Maurice Lucas with 19, but Lucas got into foul trouble early in the game and sat out a good part of it.

When play began in the fourth period, Kentucky was ahead 86-82 and Wil Jones added two more points for the Colonels before Lucas hit. Barnes connected from the side to bring St. Louis within 10 points.

Kentucky now gets its third shot at the title which has eluded the team since they joined the ABA.

At half time Kentucky was of Gilmore and Issel.

ahead 57-46, mainly on the play

Title on the Line In Ali-Frazier Bout

LONDON (AP) — Promoter Don King says Muhammad Ali will meet Joe Frazier for the world heavyweight title in King, who promoted recent Ali fights, said the decision was made Monday. He also revealed a list of major business projects during a brief visit here.

The U.S. promoter said he was:

—Negotiating with a Muslim group in the Middle East to complete a multi-million dollar deal to buy New York's Madison Square Garden;

—Completing details for Ali to defend his European champion, Joe Bugner, in Malaysia, probably in June or July;

—Hoping to promote Britain's World Boxing Council light heavyweight champion, John Conteh, currently involved in a lawsuit with his manager and British promoters.

Nancy Garapick Coach Could See A Record Coming

HALIFAX (CP) — "It's simply a dumbfounding thought," a happy Mac Garapick said Monday of her 13-year-old daughter Nancy's world record smashing swim in the 200-metre breaststroke at Brazil's Oat, during the weekend.

"We find it hard to believe yet that Nancy actually broke a world record," she said. "The only thing we wonder now is where does she go from here."

The new whirlwind of Canadian swimming took more than a second off the world mark with her time of two minutes, 18.33 seconds. Nancy won five events and her Halifax Trojan Aquatic Club finished sixth in team standings.

"She has programmed herself quite well," her mother said, explaining that the Grade 8 student graduates four hours a day. "It doesn't leave her much time for anything else. But Nancy is more interested in swimming right now."

Trojan coach Nigel Kemp said in a telephone interview from Brantford that he saw the world record coming.

"The way she has been swimming for the past few months there was every indication she might break the world record. The strategy we used to help her execute the turns well, and keeps an even effort is paying the race."

Kemp will try for a place on Canada's Olympic team.

OLGA PREPARING

MOSCOW (CP) — Olga Korbut was not included in the team named to represent the Soviet Union at the European women's gymnastic championships in Poznan next month. Officials said she is rehearsing an unique program for the 1976 Olympics at Montreal. The Soviet will be represented at the European championships by Natalia Shaposhnikova, Lyudmila Tourischeva and Elvira Saadi, Soviet combined champion two years ago.

HILL OUT OF ACTION

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — Mike Hill, an eight-year veteran of the pro golf tour, is in hospital after undergoing surgery on his right leg and will be out of action for an indefinite period. It was announced Monday. Hill, younger brother of pro golfs Dave Hill, tore his leg muscles in a motorcycle accident Saturday night.

MOSES SOLD

CHICAGO (CP) — New York Mets announced Monday they had sold catcher Jerry Moses to San Diego Padres for an unspecified amount. The veteran will recall right-handed pitcher Hank Webb from Tucson of the Triple A International League. The National League baseball team purchased Moses from the American League's Detroit Tigers on Feb. 2.

SHOE RIDES 17TH

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (CP) — Bill Shoemaker's ride aboard Avatar in Saturday's Kentucky Derby will be his 19th trip in the Run for the Roses, more than any other active rider. Eddie Arcaro rode in 21 Derbies before retiring in 1961. Bill Hartack, who has won five Derbies, won't be in the 1975 running. He's currently riding in Hong Kong.

BAILEY RESTORED

MONTREAL (CP) — Outfielder-third baseman Bob Bailey has been restored to Montreal Expos' active roster, the National League baseball club said Sunday. Rookie outfielder Bombo Rivera was optioned to Memphis Blues of the class AAA International League to make room for Bailey, who suffered a broken bone in his left hand in a spring exhibition game against Houston Astros at Daytona Beach, Fla.

New Star Emerges

TORONTO (CP) — A new star has emerged on the gymnastics of Jennifer Diachun from Canada's women's national gymnastic team.

Jill Gibson, a 17-year-old Toronto high school student, dominated the Ontario interscholastic school gymnastic championships at York University Monday, scoring first-placed finishes in the balance beam, uneven bars and floor exercises to win the all-round championship.

Miss Gibson said she has no other sports interests and will continue with her 15-hours-a-week training program in preparation for the Olympic trial to be held in Toronto this summer. A good performance could earn her a berth on the women's national team to compete in the pre-Olympic meet in Montreal.

Miss Diachun retired from the team in February to concentrate her studies in physiotherapy at the University of Toronto.

Latest Soviet Film Sheds Light on Second World War

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Josef Stalin sits plunged in gloom while a gleeful Adolf Hitler orders his armies to seize and destroy Leningrad.

These are key scenes in a new epic war film about to be shown across the Soviet Union.

The film, Blockade, gives the Soviet people a fresh picture of the conduct of the opening months on the eastern front of the Second World War by their political and military leaders, but its main message is: "Comrades, it was you who beat the Nazis."

In the tradition of the big-budget war productions turned out regularly by the Soviet cinema industry, Blockade is based on the documentary novel of the same name by journalist Alexander Chakovsky about the 900-day siege of Leningrad.

Its release has been timed for celebrations in the Communist-country this year of the 30th anniversary of the end of the war, and the film has received a massive advance publicity backup.

So far its makers, the Leningrad State Film Studios, have only brought the action in 3½ hours of showing time up to the full capitulation of the blockade on the city in October, 1941.

The first two parts and two more devoted to the sufferings of the city under the siege and expected in 1977, cover the period from the eve of the Nazi attack in June, 1941, to Hitler's decision to switch attention to Moscow.

In a series of meetings with military chiefs, Stalin is shown insisting that no reinforcements be sent to the western frontier before the German assault for fear of giving Hitler an excuse to attack.

"Hitler will never turn on us before he has dealt with England," he tells an anguished Gen. Georgy Zhukov, who, on the night before the Nazi forces cross the border, reports that a German deserter has warned of the impending advance.

When the news of the Nazi blitzkrieg is telephoned to him, Stalin, sleeping fully dressed on an armchair in his Kremlin office, is stunned and is shown sitting silently with his hands clasped in apparent despair.

From that moment the film shows Stalin, played by Leningrad actor Boris Gorbyl, as always keeping his finger closely on the pulse of the war but giving his commanders room for initiative and ready to hear their views.

In contrast, Hitler is presented as posturing, frenetic little martinet who takes no advice from his generals and can only recommend "ferocity, ferocity and more ferocity" as a means to smash resistance on the Leningrad front.

Much of the acting in the film is stilted but veteran Mikhail Ulyanov, in outstanding as Zhukov, sent recently into Leningrad in September, 1941, when the city seemed about to fall.

Ulyanov perfectly captures the prickly character of the tough-minded general, later to become marshal as he curtly dismisses the first Leningrad front commander, the elderly Marshal Klimenty Voroshilov, and ruthlessly begins reorganizing the city's defence.

Earlier Voroshilov, later to become Soviet president, is shown leading troops into battle against German tanks on foot. This was a little-known episode in which, some historians say, he was hoping to be killed in atonement for his failings.

But the producers of Blockade have sought to show that the Soviet people themselves were ultimately responsible for the blunting of the German advance and tens of thousands of modern Leningraders joined in the shooting of the film to prove this.

Many of the action scenes in the film are devoted to the exploits of volunteer workers' units from Leningrad factories, particularly in destroying dozens of tanks with gasoline bombs when their ammunition ran out.

Thousands of villagers from Luga, south of Leningrad, turned out for the shooting of scenes of the building of the Luga defence wall, a civilian operation which held up the German advance for many days.

Field Marshal Wilhelm von Leeb, German commander of the assault on Leningrad, is shown anxiously pacing his office in captured Novgorod and asking: "Why don't they rise up against the Bolshevik commissars? Why do they fight to the last?"

But an individual act of resistance to the invaders by an elderly stoker-cleaner is probably the film's most effective illustration of the defiance of the ordinary Russian.

The stoker-cleaner trundles into a suburban Leningrad village just entered by members of a German unit who did not realize that here the city fight were. Chanting: "We are the first to Leningrad," they begin dancing on the lines.

The driver and his passengers gaze into disbelief, and then suddenly the old man realizes what has happened. He shuts the doors and with a clang of the bell drives the streetcar straight into the celebrating soldiers, even though a German officer's pistol is trained on his back.

The officer kills him and the passengers are massacred by the troops.

In Blockade, as in most Soviet war films, there is no such thing as a good German.

Soviet Ballet Sensation Shuns Celebrity Image

LENINGRAD (AP) — A 19-year-old Russian ballerina whose daughter has been acclaimed in the West as well as her native land says she does not like being a celebrity.

"Being famous is very difficult," Nadezhda Pavlova told Western correspondents.

Nadya, as she is known, has a dancing role in the movie Bluebird, the first Soviet-American production, now before the cameras in Leningrad.

As she rehearsed on the set, she demonstrated much poise, maturity and effortlessness in her dancing that it impressed even those who know nothing about ballet.

But off the set, the poise was replaced by a painful shyness and the sparkling, confident ballerina of stage appeared no different from 100 young girls one might meet on the street.

She wore no makeup and her hair was pulled back in a severe ponytail. She seemed at least five years younger than she is.

Dressed in a loose pink blouse, gold vest and slacks, Nadya sat with eyes downcast and hands folded, hesitating for a long time when asked a question. Occasionally, a slight smile flashed across her face.

"It's much easier for her to dance than talk," said Nadya's mentor Ludmila Sakharova, who answers most questions from reporters.

Miss Sakharova, who teaches ballet in the Urals city of Perm, discovered Nadya at the age of 10 when she was dancing in her native city of Cheboksary.

"When we first met, it was very difficult to say what would become of Nadya," Miss Sakharova said. "There are lots of gifted children. And in our art it's difficult to decide what will be the final result. Even if you have very good abilities, it doesn't mean automatically that you'll be a good dancer."

But she immediately noticed in the 10-year-old Nadya very good co-ordination of movments, understanding of rhythm and aptitude for the teaching process."

Nadya said it was difficult to leave her family and go by herself to Perm, where she has lived for nine years. But she knew she had to attend the school if she wanted to be a dancer.

At 16, while still a student, she won the grand prize in an international ballet competition in Moscow.

At 18, after graduation, she toured Austria, Italy and Yugoslavia with the Perm company and appeared in New York with a Bolshoi group, captivating audiences wherever she went.

She now is a member of the Perm Ballet and Theatre Company, concentrating on preparations for a leading role in Don Quixote and resisting attempts to recruit her for the Bolshoi.

"She still has some post-graduate courses to take and she doesn't want to cut them short," Miss Sakharova said.

"She has leading roles in Perm, and who knows what roles she'll be offered somewhere else?"

But asked whether she would some day like to dance with the Bolshoi, the young ballerina replied softly: "Of course."

Her days are filled with classes and rehearsals. She averages eight performances a month.

There are no immediate plans for more foreign tours, but her premiere at the Bolshoi Theatre in Moscow was scheduled for March 23, in the lead role of Giselle.

That part and the part of Juliet in Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet are especially important to her, she said, "because I have worked very hard on them."

LOS ANGELES—(Reuter) — Singer Andy Williams has agreed to pay his divorced wife $2.1 million over a 10-year period even though he has $2.2 million in debts, sealed court records released Friday show.

The property settlement between Williams, 48, and his wife, Claudine Longet, 34, a former Folies Bergere dancer, was reached in 1973 and entered into court records when they divorced last January after a four-year separation.

The property settlement was originally sealed by Santa Monica Superior Court Commissioner Jacqueline Weiss. She released it to the public after reporters protested about the sealing of the document.

In the agreement Williams said he would pay his wife 10 annual instalments of $100,000, a lump sum of $1 million in 1978 and an additional $165,000 in the early 1980s.

LONDON (AP) — Amy Shuard, the British soprano renowned for her performances of leading roles in operas by Puccini and Wagner, died in London Friday at the age of 50.

Miss Shuard began her career in South Africa after studying at the Trinity College of Music in London. In 1949 she returned to join the Sadlers Wells Opera Company where she gave outstanding performances as Madame Butterfly by Puccini and as Tatiana in Tchaikovsky's Eugene Onegin.

She joined the Royal Opera House at Covent Garden in 1955 and three years later became the first British woman to sing Turandot since Dame Eva Turner, a leading singer after the First World War and Miss Shuard's teacher.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Wednesday, April 30

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're quite capable today when it comes to handling your personal resources. However you won't make the most from a career opportunity.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20) Selling others on your ideas is not your cup of tea today. This it over first with a friend who's had a similar experience.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A goal you've set is within reach today, but you'll waste a lot of time before you zero in on it. Get started earlier.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You could easily be convinced by friends to do something against your better judgment today. Be careful—price tag could be high.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Before making commitments today, consult the interest of your family to ensure future harmony.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you listen to advice from outsiders as opposed to that of one you're closely associated with, you'll be led down the garden path.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't let others capitalize on your efforts. If you do, something that should be coming to you will be diverted to the Johnny-come-lately.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Avoid teaming up today with someone whose interests are not in tune with yours. This person will only delay what you hope to achieve.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're going to have to overcome stiff opposition to get something accomplished on your terms. Be persistent.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be rational and prudent before making loans today. Impulsiveness will minimize your chances of recouping your money.

To Your Good Health

Most Adults Have Ear Noises

By G. C. THORTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thorteson: What does an "eroded cervix" mean? What causes it? Would it prevent a healthy bearing a baby?—Mrs. C.F.B.

Be word "erosion" implies a wearing away, but in relation to the cervix the term may not be entirely appropriate.

In this type of the cervix looks raw, but this is thought to be the result of cell migration occurring during the child-bearing years. Although about 15 percent of women who have never been pregnant have had it at vitual erosion is most common in women who have borne children—often in women who have sustained a tear in the cervix from childbirth. A mild infection sometimes accompanies the condition.

It will not prevent pregnancy, although treatment is necessary (usually cauterization). While an erosion is not cancerous, the symptoms are similar and may raise suspicions. A Pap test is usually taken to rule out any malignancy.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: What would cause strange-sounding crackling in my ears? Your ear is involved. I also have dizziness.—R.S.

Low-level ear noises have been found in more than eight out of 10 adults, so you are not alone. In most cases it is not a serious matter. If it were, most of us would be in bad shape, because most of us have experienced such noises.

I would bet you are over 40, because it is at about that age most of these strange sounds begin to appear. Cause of excess wax is an obvious cause. Also, as we grow older we get more ailments that affect various medications. Certain drugs (quinine, for example) can cause such phenomena.

I had a letter from an earnoise victim, an elderly lady who told me how she dealt with her problem—which had been worse for her at night. She slept with a tiny transistor near her head and found she could fall off to sleep easily, her ear noises drowned in a sea of all-night music. She reported a subliminal spoof, humming bits of songs she'd never heard.

I don't recommend this necessarily in your case, but it worked for her.

However, your noises could be indicative of another problem in the hearing mechanism, or if you are elderly, of arteriosclerosis. This would depend upon the type of sound (a crackling would lead me to suspect the ear mechanism).

Dear Dr. Thorteson: I am taking diuretics, which I understand can deplete my body of potassium, causing blackouts, etc. To offset this, I am being given potassium chloride.

Does this supplement ever cause lesions in the intestines?—Mrs. E.A.

I would have to know why you were taking the diuretic to begin with, because that would have a bearing on any effects the potassium chloride would have on your body. I can only assume it was to promote urine output because of kidney inefficiency, heart failure or liver disease. In the potassium chloride supplement should be taken only with careful periodic monitoring by your physician. Taken in excess, tablets containing potassium can cause gastrointestinal distress or ulcers in the intestine.

Maintaining the delicate balance of potassium in the body is not something to be left to the individual patient to handle. It is interesting to note that either too much or too little potassium can produce the same symptoms—general muscular weakness.

So you will need a careful balance of your diuretic and potassium medication.

Two Pounds Of Gypsum Returned

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — White Sands Missile Range's information office has heard from an anonymous individual who apparently wanted to clear his conscience.

He returned two pounds of gypsum, presumably taken from nearby White Sands National Monument where approximately 147,000 acres of the stuff is spread.

The package, carrying $4.85 in postage stamps, was received at the missile range means test.

It was addressed: "White Sands Proving Ground, New Mexico."

The range's official redesignation from White Sands Proving Ground to White Sands Missile Range was made in 1958.

The pure white sand, packed in a double sack, was packaged in brown wrapping paper, without return address, carrying an Ohio post office cancellation mark.

"Since it is against park regulations to remove gypsum from the national monument, it seems plausible that this individual wanted to clear his conscience, or perhaps simply got the best of him," said Lt.-Col. Donald F. Kelly, information officer.

"To ensure that his conscience is clear, we'll see that this gypsum is returned to the monument."

America's Not Immune

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans may face epidemics of "yesterdays' diseases unless immunization of children and adults is intensified, warns the Medical World News. At the heart of the problem is parental apathy and a reluctance by some physicians in such vaccinations that provide immunity to such diseases as polio, measles, mumps; rubella (German measles), diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough.

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

There was never a greater rivalry than that between Ely Culbertson and Hal Sims in the early days of contract. It was a friendly rivalry. Sims called Ely the "Professor," Ely Called Hal the "Maestro."

The Professor, sitting South, won today's battle of wits. The play started normally enough. The queen of hearts was led covered by king and ace. Heart returned and third heart was led to force dummy to ruff.

The king of spades was led from dummy and the Maestro, sitting West, let it hold. Had the Professor lately led his last trump from dummy the Maestro would win, throw the Professor in dummy and score the setting trick with his last trump. But the Professor was not going to fall into that trap.

He cashed dummy's ace and king of diamonds and ace of clubs. His plan was to continue with the club king and then play the second trump. If that play went through he could go back to trumps and there would be no way for West to throw him in dummy.

Sims tried his last ploy. He dropped the jack of clubs under the ace. This caused Ely to think for some time. Finally Ely decided if Sims really had a singleton club, he would have opened it, so Ely continued with his original plan and led the king of clubs and made his contract.

LEVITTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — When someone asked Met bullpen coach Joe Pignatano who would replace Tug Tug McGraw in the Met bullpen, he replied: "Mac Scarce. He is the man we traded for." Scarce, a 200-pound, 6-foot-3 southpaw, appeared in 58 games for the Phillies last season. He finished 21 games, with a 3-8 record, five saves and 50 strikeouts in 70 innings.

NEW HARMONY, Ind. Harmon Killebrew Picks His Spots for McKeon's Royals

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wilbur Wood suffered his fifth loss of the season Monday night when Harmon Killebrew knocked a home run over the left field fence to break a tie and propel Kansas City Royals to a 7-5 win over Chicago White Sox in American League baseball action.

The home run, Killebrew's fourth of the season, came on Wood's first pitch in the sixth inning.

In Monday night's other American League games, Detroit Tigers beat Baltimore Orioles 5-3 and New York Yankees defeated Cleveland Indians 6-1.

In the National League, Los Angeles Dodgers topped Atlanta Braves 4-3 and Houston Astros downed San Diego Padres 4-1.

Chicago manager Chuck Tanner said after the game that he is not concerned with the 1-8 record of Wood, his pitching ace.

"I never worry about Wilbur Wood," he said. "He started three last year. Wilbur will get his wins."

Jack McKeon, manager of the Royals, shows the same confidence in Killebrew.

"Harmon is making a believer out of a lot of people who thought he was washed up," McKeon said. "What helped Harmon was a good spring training. He gets the big hits. That's the history of the guy. He's got to be the most popular player in Royals' history."

The homer broke a 3-3 deadlock and, in the seventh, Kansas City scored what proved to be the winning run. Fred Patek singled, Amos Otis walked, Terry Forster replaced Wood and walked John Mayberry and Hal McRae tripled to widen the lead to 7-3. Jorge Orta hit a two-run homer for Chicago in the ninth.

Detroit's Gary Sutherland hit two-run single off reliever Dave Johnson in a three-run ninth inning to keep the Tigers on top of the East Division.

The single off diving third baseman Brooks Robinson's glove came moments after Mike Cuellar had forced in the tying run by walking Aurelio Rodriguez.

Rudy May, a mid-season acquisition from the California Angels last year, holds the distinction of being New York's ace left-hander. He proved it again with a four-hitter against Cleveland while the Yanks bombed former team mate Fritz Peterson for four runs in the first inning.

Roy White, Elliott Maddox and Thurman Munson singled for one run. Alex Johnson tripled for two more and Craig Nettles' sacrifice fly finished the outburst.

May says he's learned a lot about pitching over the years.

"I learned that you don't have to throw the fast ball by batters to get them out," he said.

Getting the ball over and keeping it down—that's what pitching is all about."

Los Angeles, virtually hamstrung by Atlanta's Phil Niekro through seven innings, pounced on reliever Tom House for three runs in the eighth after Niekro's arm stiffened.

House walked Dave Lopes and Jimmy Wynn. Steve Garvey doubled for one run and clutch-hitter Manny Mota ripped a two-run single off the glove of second baseman Marty Perez.

With the victory, the Dodgers' fifth in a row, Los Angeles widened its National League West Division lead over the Braves to 1½ games.

Bob Watson's two-run single broke a sixth-inning deadlock and helped Dave Roberts and the Astros to beat San Diego. Roberts finished with a seven-hitter, the only damaging one being Dave Winfield's sixth homer of the year.

Watson's single, a punched bit off a tight pitch by Joe McIntosh, came after Larry Milbourne beat out an infield hit. Cesar Cedeno singled and Bill May bunted them into scoring position.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE with Major Hoople

Taylor-NDP Duel Brings Adjournment

TORONTO (CP) — Debate in the Ontario legislature came to a stop Monday and the house adjourned to allow an argument between NDP House Leader Ian Deans and Progressive Conservative backbencher James Taylor.

Fewer than 20 of the 117 MPPs appeared to answer a quorum-call forced by Mr. Deans after he objected to remarks made by the Conservative member for Prince Edward-Lennox during budget debate.

At least 20 members, including the speaker are required to maintain a quorum. Hansard, the official record of the house, shows "18 or 19" were present when the clerk took the count.

The row erupted during Mr. Taylor's criticism of NDP philosophy which he said "would job the biggest civil services that anyone would see in any place in the world outside of the eastern countries and the Soviet Union."

He also said NDP members "talk in terms of confiscation of the natural resources."

He said he was exposing NDP thinking and after several verbal exchanges with the NDP house leader he suggested:

"... the member for Wentworth (Mr. Deans) exposure is indecent indeed."

That remark drew a quick call for a withdrawal and an apology. Mr. Taylor refused and a quorum was called.

House bells rang for four minutes, but unable to raise a quorum the legislature adjourned until today.

Hydro Rate Hearings Will Start on June 9

TORONTO (CP) — A decision on a request by Ontario Hydro for a 30-per-cent rate increase will be made by the end of August, Energy Minister Dennis Timbrell said Monday.

Mr. Timbrell told the legislature that the Ontario Energy Board will begin public hearings June 3 into the proposed increase—the largest requested in Hydro's history.

If granted, it would mean increases ranging between $3 and $4 for the average householder's monthly bill.

Last year, Hydro asked for a 15.7-per-cent increase but that was trimmed to 13.7 per cent.

Outside the legislature, Mr. Timbrell said it would be "impossible" to say whether the request again will be reduced.

However, he said he agrees with Hydro's projected seven-per-cent growth rate to meet current and future energy demands.

Allmand Praised By Police

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand and representatives of policemen and prison guards from the Atlantic provinces traded opposing views on capital punishment and penal reform Monday night and both sides came out with words of praise.

Interviews with police spokesmen before the meeting disclosed apparent hostility and anger toward Mr. Allmand's stance on criminal law reform.

But afterward Mr. Allmand described the meeting as a "rap session" with a "good exchange of view."

"He's got guts," said Tom Fraize, president of the Police Brotherhood of Newfoundland. "He's the first politician I have encountered who has the coolage of his convictions. I came out liking the man, although that doesn't mean I agree with him."

"This guy can face any mob of angry policeman and stand his ground."

KNOWS ISSUES

Added Voe Ross, executive-director of the Police Association of Nova Scotia: "I believe he came out very well. He knows the issues in this country. He was successful in helping us understand the government's position, there's no doubt of that."

"I'm pleased with the way discussions went," said Charles Swain, president of the New Brunswick Police Association.

"He (the minister) was very candid with us and we were candid with him, although it got a little heated at times."

Chinese Said Ordered Out

OTTAWA (CP) — External affairs officials had no comment Monday night on a published report that a Chinese press attache has been ordered out of the country for security reasons.

The Toronto Globe and Mail says in a front-page story the attache has been asked to leave, but adds that the government is trying to hush up the incident to avoid harming relations with China.

"There's no comment I can make!" said information officer Glen Bolek. "I only heard about it tonight."

The dinner marked the end of his Arctic visit, as he departs for Winnipeg this afternoon. He is to leave Canada from Winnipeg Wednesday.

Compromise Solves Deadlock

Macdonald Agrees to Vote Whenever Oil Prices Set

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Donald Macdonald has turned down the burners under his long-simmering petroleum administration bill Monday, clearing the way for Ottawa to have the power to set oil and gas prices.

He and the Progressive Conservatives reached a compromise which would allow a Commons vote whenever the government used the power. This cooled a debate that has been raging since the bill first appeared more than a year ago.

But the government jumps into the fire today when the Commons resumes debate on the contentious bill to boost parliamentary salaries by 33 1-3 per cent.

Both bills have had rocky rides, the salary increases mainly because of a public outcry; the petroleum bill because western PCs maintain Ottawa has no business telling the provinces what to charge for petroleum products.

The last-minute amendment in the oil bill basically provides for a two-day debate and a vote when Ottawa moves to set prices. However, given the Liberals' majority in the 264-seat House, any vote virtually is a foregone conclusion.

Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin said his party "fell back to a prepared position" because it was obvious the government would not back down on its bid for pricing power.

The Conservatives oppose giving Ottawa the power to set prices if agreement cannot be reached with the producing provinces.

Dredging Charges Hearings to Start

OTTAWA (CP) — Fourteen executives and 13 corporations go to court here Wednesday to work out a date for preliminary hearing of charges against them of bid-rigging in federal dredging contracts.

Among the accused are practically all the major dredging companies in Canada and their well-connected executives, including Jean Eduard, an in-law of Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa.

Informed sources said the preliminary hearing, at which the Crown will try to establish that it has a case for trial against the accused, probably will take two or three months.

It may not begin until autumn and it certainly won't begin until the trials of Reginald Fisher and former Hamilton Harbor commissioner Kenneth Elliott are completed. Their trials, expected to last six weeks, begin in Hamilton Monday.

St. Thomas Burns

Fire Leaves Church Shell

Fire of undetermined origin has destroyed one of Belleville's oldest landmarks.

The 108-year-old St. Thomas Anglican Church lies gutted today, the result of an early morning blaze which was out of control by the time firemen arrived on the scene at the corner of Church and East Bridge streets, shortly after the alarm was turned in at 5:15 a.m.

All equipment and about 30 firefighters, many of them off-duty, from both of the city's fire halls responded to the alarm, raised by city police constable Bob McAlpine, on patrol.

Fire Chief Leo Culhane said it is believed the fire was burning for about half an hour before inside the church before it finally broke out through the windows and doors of the stone structure, through pressure.

He explained if the fire actually did begin near the bottom it would take hours before it could fill the church and build up pressure.

"I went by there at about a quarter to eleven and I'm always attracted by the (church) lights but I didn't see anything wrong," he related.

Chief Culhane said the church was insured for $250,000 "but that won't build it. Those beautiful stained glass windows, you can't replace them."

A strong wind from the east carried burning embers onto Front Street, two blocks away, setting an awning ablaze at Dwyer's Ltd. but the fire there was quickly extinguished before any damage could be done. Black chunks of ash, some as big as a fist, littered the downtown area today.

Smoke and ashes also drifted into the lower at Bridge Street United Church, said Chief Culhane, but no fires resulted. Firemen took a line of hose into that church in case anything came ablaze.

At the height of the blaze, flames shot high above the steeple and, with the church located on a hill, they were visible to an Ontario provincial policeman on patrol about 15 miles northwest of here.

TAKE 3

No discernible cause of the blaze was apparent right away, said Chief Culhane. A full investigation was to begin today, conducted by Paul McKerracher of the Ontario Fire Marshal's office here.

Nothing was recovered from the structure, which will likely have to be rebuilt from scratch. Chief Culhane said there is danger of a portion of the walls collapsing.

St. Thomas also was the regimental church for Belleville militia units throughout the years. Lost in the blaze were regimental flags from all regiments which were overseas from her during the First World War, the second-last set of colors from the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, which were retired recently, and a flag from the Northwest Rebellion in the last century.

Historic Old Church in Ruins

St. Thomas' Anglican Church, which has been a centre-city landmark for a century, today is a shell. Firemen survey ruins of the gracefull old building — erected more than a century ago — after their efforts to control blaze were fruitless. It's the site of one of the earliest churches in Belleville, and was a centre of worship for several hundred families and, historically, the regimental church for local militia units.

New Church Could Be Different

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The graceful Gothic structure of St. Thomas Anglican church that has topped the Bridge-Church streets area for nearly a century may not be rebuilt in its original style.

The indication came today from Canon Peter Tetl, rector of the church, in the wake of the early-morning blaze that gutted the old stone church, a centre of worship for about 400 families.

"Until we call the congregation together there's not much we can do," said the rector as he viewed the charred stonework of the building which stands on the site of the first Belleville church.

The fire may give new impetus to long-standing congregational discussions on the future of church property on both sides of Bridge St.

Canon Tetl said parishioners might even have to decide whether if rebuilt at all on the present site, although he believed this would be the case since the congregation would want it.

"I don't think we can even attempt to restore that structure," he said. Instead, believed the Canon, it might be replaced by "something modern" — perhaps a building containing a ground floor church with other structures above it.

The fire means the congregation must now "take a good, hard look at the future."

A church was first built on the site in 1820. It burned in 1878 and the present church was erected.

The blaze came hours after Canon Tetl's sixth anniversary as rector. He came to Belleville April 29, 1969.

He believed the cause of the fire may have been faulty wiring, since the fire broke out well away from the furnace area. The building was locked each night, he said.

Regular church services will now be held in the parish hall on East Bridge, directly across from the ruined building.

A Losing Battle

Firemen fought a losing battle against the blaze which gutted St. Thomas' Anglican Church early today. Here firemen climb a ladder to aid a colleague training a hose onto the dying flames inside the church.

IRA Hunts Killer Of Leader

BELFAST (AP) — Gunmen of the Irish Republican Army's Official wing continued their efforts today for the killer of their commander and the leader of a rival faction escaped death when his wife wouldn't let him out of the bathroom.

Jim McCorry, one of the best-known leaders of the Irish Republican Socialist party, was in the bathroom when three gunmen drove up to his house Tuesday night.

"They had machine-guns," his wife, Esther, told reporters. "I held the bathroom door and wouldn't let Jim come out. If he had they would have shot him. They panicked and ran away."

McCorry said the gunmen were IRA Officials, the Marxist group from which the Republican Socialists split because the Officials weren't radical enough.

The Republican Socialists defied they killed Billy McMillan, veteran commander of the Officials Belfast Brigade

Dredging Case Defendants Are Remanded

OTTAWA (CP) — Twenty-four of the 27 defendants in the dredging case, which involves charges of bid-rigging on federal contracts, were remanded today until June 9 in Toronto.

Chief Prosecutor Clay Powell of Ontario indicated that a date for a preliminary hearing will be set then. Mr. Powell also asked for the shift from Ottawa, where the charges were placed in March, to Toronto.

Saigon Surrenders

Viet Cong Victorious

SAIGON (AP) — The Saigon government surrendered unconditionally today, and Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops occupied the South Vietnamese capital.

Many of the South Vietnamese troops in the city turned in their arms and tried to lose themselves in the civilian population. But there were periodic outbursts of gunfire—some from pockets of resistance and others from celebrating Viet Cong and North Vietnamese firing into the air.

Loud explosions were heard in the late afternoon. They were reported aboard an ammunition barge burning in the Saigon River, but they were causing no damage to the city.

Otherwise life returned to a semblance of normalcy in the city. People strolled the streets, greeting the arriving Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops with smiles and handshakes. Motorbike traffic picked up. Viet Cong flags appeared on many buildings.

After 112 years of French colonialism, Japanese occupation during the Second World War and United States military intervention, the Indochina peninsula was free of foreign domination.

President Duong Van Minh announced his government's unconditional surrender in a broadcast at midmorning and ordered the South Vietnamese armed forces to turn in their arms.

Four hours later a leopkoad of North Vietnamese soldiers brought the 51-year-old retired general back to the microphone, and he appealed again to government forces to give up.

Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, the foreign minister of the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG), said in an interview in Hanoi Tuesday that Minh "might still have some role to play in the future of Vietnam."

The Viet Cong took over the government radio station and announced that they had raised their flag over the presidential palace and occupied all strategic points in the city.

"We representatives of the liberation forces of Saigon formally proclaim that Saigon has been totally liberated," the broadcast said.

"We accept the unconditional surrender of Gen. Duong Van Minh, president of the former government."

A curfew was ordered from 8 p.m. to 6 a.m.

The broadcast also called on all government employees to return to work and on students and other youths to participate in a demonstration at a time to be announced later.

A crowd of several hundred watched as five North Vietnamese tanks, 12 armored personnel carriers and truckloads of troops drove into the grounds of the palace from which President Nguyen Van Thieu and the last President Tran Dinh Dieu had directed the war against the Communists for nearly two decades.

Communications from Saigon to foreign countries were interrupted about 1:30 a.m. EDT but resumed about four hours later. There was no explanation of the break.

Saigon's Silence Turns to Cheers

SAIGON (AP) Scores of North Vietnamese tanks, armored vehicles and camouflaged Chinese trucks drove down Unity Boulevard to the South Vietnamese presidential palace shortly after noon today.

Several hundred South Vietnamese applauded as the North Vietnamese troops waved their blue and red flags with a yellow star in the centre and stepped down into the broad boulevard.

Meanwhile, in front of the National Assembly building, a police colonel walked up to an army memorial statue, saluted and shot himself in the head. He died a short while later in a hospital.

Shots rang around the city hall. A North Vietnamese infantry platoon, dressed in olive drab uniforms and black rubber sandals, took up positions in the square in front of the building.

They exchanged shots with a few holdouts somewhere in the vicinity. A few people on motorbikes rode by and looked apprehensively to see where who was firing. In a week while it subsided.

Between President Duong Van Minh's surrender broadcast and the entry of the Communist forces into the city, South Vietnamese soldiers and civilians jammed aboard several coastal freighters tied up along the Saigon River, hoping they could escape.

They left the ships as the Viet Cong drove along the waterfront in jeeps and trucks, waving Viet Cong flags and cheering.

Knots of civilians stood in doorways and watched the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese drive past. At first they showed no emotion.

Later the people began cheering as more North Vietnamese troops poured into the city.

A few explosions were heard in the late afternoon. They apparently came from exploding ammunition on an ammunition barge burning in the Saigon River.

But no damage in the city was reported except to the U.S. embassy and other American buildings which the Saigonese cleaned out after their former occupants were evacuated.

Reporters Safe

TORONTO (CP) — Spokesmen for the CBC and CTV television networks said today that reporters and a cameraman on assignment in Vietnam are safely out of that country aboard United States ships.

A CBC spokesman said reporters Gerald Carter and Peter Kent are safe aboard the U.S. aircraft carrier Midway, while a CTV spokesman said reporter Henry Champ and cameraman Louis DeGuise are aboard either the Midway or the carrier Mobile.

Guarantee Incomes Plan Ready

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will pay about 70 per cent of the $1-billion-plus cost of introduced a guaranteed annual income for the country's poorest and provided income supplements to the working poor, Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde said today.

Mr. Lalonde told his provincial counterparts at the opening of a federal-provincial welfare ministers' conference here that Ottawa is ready to underwrite a major portion of the scheme and to redefine a broad range of other social assistance programs run jointly with the provinces.

He said Ottawa is willing to pay 50 per cent of the cost of the guaranteed income program and 66.6 per cent of the cost of providing income supplements to the working poor, the poorer provinces.

This share would be as low as 33.3 per cent in the richer provinces such as Ontario and Alberta but, together with the guaranteed income payments, would in every case exceed 50 per cent of the over-all cost. He said over-all Ottawa's contribution would be close to 70 per cent when extra payments to poorer provinces are taken into account.

The offer was Ottawa's response to demands by the provinces at the last federal-provincial meeting in February for further discussion on how a guaranteed income plan and other welfare reforms would be financed.

Dockers May Face Charges on Friday

OTTAWA (CP) — A two-hour meeting Tuesday between Labor Minister John Munro and leaders of striking Quebec longshoremen ended inconclusively and dock workers are expected to continue to defy back-to-work legislation passed last Thursday.

"The next step is to have the law officers of the Crown conduct the necessary investigations and to decide whether charges will be laid," Mr. Munro said after the meeting. There are already investigations under way in Montreal, he added.

The minister expects to have information on which charges might be based by Wednesday. The maximum charges could be laid Thursday or Friday, Mr. Munro indicated.

Norman Quigley, Quebec International vice-president of the International Longshoremen's Association, said the union will hold meetings at the local level to try to convince its members to return to their jobs. But he doubted they will be successful.

"They would rather go to jail than go back to work under those terms," Mr. Quigley said, referring to a conciliation board report that is in dispute.

More than 1,200 dockworkers at three major St. Lawrence River ports have been on strike since April 1. The government passed a bill last week ordering them back to work.

Inquiry Opens

MONTREAL (CP) — The inquiry into a $16,000 payment to Liberal Montreal travel agent R. Y. McGregor opened here today with his counsel stating there was nothing dishonest in the payment.

The suggestion that Mr. McGregor be a consultant to the airline was Air Canada's idea, lawyer Richard Holden said.

Mr. McGregor has said the irregular $16,000 payment was "seed money" for a string of travel agencies across the country.

Music Man: Enjoyment for All Ages

The Belleville Theatre Guild lifts the curtain on the Music Man in Belleville Collegiate Auditorium tonight Wednesday.

The musical comedy, set at the turn of the century has a universal appeal to all age groups. Ornamented with delightful music and lyric, the two-act play follows the crooked path of a salesman named Hill who outfits young peoples bands.

Harold Hill is being played by Dave Smith, community education co-ordinator with the Hastings County Board of Education. Mr. Smith's last appearance with the guild was for the part of the immortal Faran in Oliver.

The leading lady, Iris the Librarian, is played by Iris Sinderson.

Hill, a salesman shunned by townfolk and fellow salesmen alike, meets his downfall with the pretty miss.

For director Liz Marshall, the play has meant overcoming some terrific staging obstacles — including 11 scene changes in the first act.

Along with the scene changes, director Marshall has had to handle a cast of 44, of which 21 are children.

"The play has tremendous life and vigor and its very essential the play move quickly to maintain tempo and pace," said Mrs. Marshall.

Finale to the musical is Beethoven's Minuet in G.

"Our all-children band makes the most God-awful, dreadful noise," said Mrs. Marshall. "So dreadful, its quite funny — quite beautiful."

Tickets for the production are available at the door with curtain at 8 p.m. Advance tickets can be arranged by calling 967-3442, Thursday and Friday between 7 p.m. and 9 p.m.

Behind the scenes, the play is run by a majority of women. Stage manager and producer is Nancy Mohan, choreography is done by Heather Storms, costume by Fern House, props controlled by Mary Simmonds and Fern House, makeup direction by Roslyn Fraser, box office coordinator Barb Kneisel, costume creation and set painting was done by a score of women and one man. Assistants to the director and stage manager are Sandra Kidd and Rosemary Farmer.

Stolen Van Recovered

A Juvenile has been charged with taking a vehicle without the owner's consent following the theft of a van loaded with electrical equipment worth several thousand dollars from the parking lot of Towers Department Stores Ltd. on Dundas St. W. Monday.

Constable Dan Garlick of Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville said Tuesday the van was reported stolen at 1:18 p.m. by William McDevery, 31, of 85 Wilson St. in Kingston, the driver. The van is owned by Hobart Mfg. of Ottawa.

At about 1.50 p.m., Constable Garlick said he was westbound on Highway 401 when he noticed the van eastbound. The van turned south on Wallbridge Rd. and he stopped it at the Moira St. extension where he found two juvenile occupants. The other juvenile was not charged.

Trenton Awaiting Word On Arbitration Decision

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — No word on the results of a mid-February arbitration board hearing over a wage dispute between the town and its 11-man fire department has yet reached Trenton.

Local 1338 of the International Association of Fire Fighters and town officials have been waiting for a settlement of a 1974 contract since Feb. 15.

The board met in Belleville that day to hear the town offer a 12½-per-cent wage increase to firemen who countered with a demand for an across-the-board wage hike of 24 per cent.

Lack of a settlement is holding up the start of talks on the 1975 contract, since both sides have indicated no realistic negotiations can begin until a 1974 wage agreement is known. Currently, the town firemen are working under 1973 wages scales.

Town treasurer Brian Fagan said Tuesday he is hopeful that the arbitration award will be known within the next couple of weeks.

"I'd like to hear about it before we strike the mill rate."

Any award to firemen could affect the town 1975 budget said Mr. Fagan.

Money has been set aside in last year's budget to cover an anticipated award of approximately 12 per cent, he said. But if the board awards more than what he termed the "reasonable settlement" the additional funds will come out of the 1975 budget.

As a result, said the treasurer, "We may have to reduce other expenditures somewhere, but we feel what we've allotted (in 1974) will take care of a great chunk of it."

Funds have already been set aside in the 1975 budget, now under study by councillors, for what he called a "reasonable" settlement of the 1975 one-year contract between the town and firemen.

He would not predict what award he expected from the Ottawa arbitration board chairman E. L. Gillin, but said the firemen have been "hedgy" in previous arbitration awards.

In their third hearing in February, firemen asked for a 24 per-cent increase that would bring the bench-mark wage of a first-class fireman up to $13,001 from $10,482 in 1973.

Chamber Plans Drive To Recruit Members

TRENTON — Trenton Chamber of Commerce directors will make a two-week-long push to add 31 new members and enrich its treasury by $600 in an effort to help defray an anticipated deficit of about $8,000 this year.

The final push for members was organized Tuesday at a director's meeting in which it was agreed businesses and individuals not already on the Chamber rolls will be personally contacted. The drive ends May 15, when it is hoped a target of 150 members will be reached.

To date, the Chamber has 119 members, two more than in 1974. A total of $6,400 has been collected in dues.

Chamber treasurer Gary Birt said the need for new members is urgent since it would give town council an indication the Chamber is serious in its attempt to increase its revenue.

The group went to council recently with a request for an $8,000 grant for 1975. The town set aside the request until it enters budget talks.

Mr. Birt said Tuesday the funds are needed to meet mortgage payments, offset a 1974 operating deficit and pay off debts accumulated in 1974. The Chamber's total 1975 budget stands at $14,072.

PECI Student To Study United Nations in Work

PICTON — A Grade 11 student at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, Linda Hofford, will visit New York City this summer as part of the United Nations Pilgrimage for Youth Program.

This program is sponsored by the local Odd Fellows Lodge and Rebeccas and permits a student to participate in UN activities.

A large number of students from Canada and the United States will join in the week-long program and attend the assembly and committee meetings of the UN.

In addition, the students will tour the city visiting Radio City Music Hall, viewing a broadway play and attending the opening night of a new film.

Miss Hofford was one of a large number of PECI pupils to apply for the visit to New York. Criteria for selection include scholarship and school and community involvement.

Constable Transferred

PICTON — Constable Ian Knox of the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police has been transferred to duties with the special service branch, Toronto.

Constable Knox has been a member of the Picton OPP detachment for several years.

Band in Picton

Under the sponsorship of the Picton Kiwanis Club, the Salvation Army Toronto Danforth Citadel Band made a number of guest appearances in Picton on the weekend. They performed at the H.J. McFarland Memorial Home and in the town's Free Methodist Church. Here Capt. Len Pearo introduces as upcoming congregational song.

County To Hire Students

BLOOMFIELD — The Prince Edward County Board of Education has received a $2,600 grant to employ two or three students this summer in Program SESK (Student Endeavor for Educational Knowledge) says business administrator E. A. Shortt.

Mr. Shortt said the maximum grant for the program was $5,200. A total of 27 submissions for grants have made and the Prince Edward County Board of Education was among 12 boards receiving grants.

He added that the students hired will participate in a transportation survey and assist with the new County as a Classroom program being introduced in Prince Edward this spring.

Roll Reviewed

Chamber of commerce treasurer Gary Birt and membership chairman Lee Johnston Tuesday in preparation for a final two-week membership drive. The chamber hopes to boost its membership from the present 119 to 150 by May 15. And thus help defray an anticipated deficit year in 1975.

Wilson Seeks Clarification On Government Dock Fees

TRENTON — Trenton's Chamber of Commerce will ask town council to clarify the fee structure that will face boaters using the federal government docks in Trenton this summer.

The action by the Chamber comes in response to repeated inquiries from area boat owners who plan to use the docking facility this year.

Jack Wilson, Chamber manager, said Tuesday he has been unable to respond to the questions because he is unaware of the fee structure that has been imposed by the government for the first time this year.

Responsibility for dock operation rests with Trenton council.

In urging the move, Mr. Wilson said he is worried over the potential loss to the town of tourist dollars and the poor impression of Trenton the current ambiguity creates on boat owners planning to sail the Trent River.

He said the Chamber has no authority to investigate the fee structure or become otherwise involved with dock operation.

To counter the existing grey, area, he suggested an information booth could be set up at the dock to inform boaters of the new fee schedule as well as provoke information on the newly — established lockage fees imposed along the Trent Canal this year.

In conjunction with the latter, the Chamber will ask to meet with town council to discuss further the fees to be charged at the docks.

Tournament Popular

TRENTON — Only 20 places are vacant for the Trenton Chamber of Commerce annual Chamber Pot Golf Tournament and organizers are urging duffers to book reservations for the May 14 tourney immediately.

Only 60 golfers will be allowed on the links at the Trenton Country Club. Already, 40 men have booked places for the tournament and steak dinner after the duffer's-dream event (All golfers get prizes).

Entry fees are $10 for golf and dinner and $7 for dinner alone.

The Promise of Spring

It's spring all right: the sun is shining, the air is brighter and warmer, the book shops are displaying books on gardening, the seed firms are urging us to buy their products — and the still very much alive minikirt is appearing again as a front runner of the women's fashion scene.

It's a time to think of plans for the outdoors, the beach, vacations and all. And it's also a time at the political level, to think of the need for unity within diversity that is a hallmark of this land, at a juncture in our development when there are differences on the subject of immigration and on how much more of that diversity should be permitted at this stage.

There are some reflections of this nature in the annual report of the Ontario Advisory Council on Multiculturalism for 1974. On the cover is a picture that is the essence of innocence and of childhood — two little Indian girls in a meadow, small long grass and wild flowers; and with it there is the quotation of an Ojibway mother.

"As a child my mother told me that when picking flowers in the woods to make a bouquet, don't just pick the most beautiful, have some of each kind of flower to make up the bouquet. This is the way I feel about the Canadian cultural mosaic."

It is Ben Crowder's first report and it is accompanied by pictures of the minister responsible, Provincial Secretary for Social Development Margaret Birch, chairman Ernie Checkers, and vice-chairman Jeanne Sabourin and Mary Louise Clements.

Mr. Checkerts speaks in a foreword of the new Canadians who "have brought with them the richness of the culture of their former homes," and who are "anxious to preserve the cultural, spiritual, religious and artistic values which added so much to their lives before their emigration."

Of late there has been some degree of friction and of intolerance vis-a-vis the arrival in Canada of growing numbers of people of races other than the Caucasian or white peoples who were more dominant in the not too far distant past.

The chairman acknowledges this growing multiculturalism and recognizes the difficulties that can come in its train.

"The work of the advisory council is firmly grounded in the conviction that diversity within a community can be an exciting and inspiring experience. But if diversity is to find acceptance, if it is not to encourage suspicion and hostility, if we are, indeed, to live in harmony with our fellow-Canadians, we must constantly emphasize the truth — that we live with others who are in many significant ways the same as we are but who are, in many significant ways, different."

As the Ojibway mother wisely noted, a bouquet is made up of many different flowers. Each has something to contribute to the whole.

Rights of the Public

Who stands up for the rights of the public these days, in the midst of strike situations?

Kitchener insurance agent Tim Dineen is one. Postal pickets reportedly refused him an opportunity last week to sort mail so he could get his business correspondence.

"The unions wouldn't like it," he was told. The pickets were also said to have fired insults at him, and one member gave him an application for employment at the post office and said: "If you don't damn well like what we're doing, why don't you try for our job."

Tim Dineen is only one of countless citizens and business groups who have been inconvenienced by recurring instances of non-service by Canada Post — a government entity which lately has been advertising how efficient it is.

It's the old "I'm all right Jack" syndrome at work in our midst.

The exchange cited above explains a lot about the latest-looking, or rather non-functioning, of society today. True, there is the right to strike, but isn't it being a little overdone? Tim Dineen is one of those who, without denying others the right to withold their labor, also has a job to do and prefers to get on with it. He is also willing to stand up and be counted. Perhaps if more members of the public stood and stand with him in situations such as this the rights of the public at large would be better served.

Primary Schools' Charm

School is a great place for the very young — in kindergarten and the primary school grades.

The human touch is still there, as a visit to one such establishment during Education Week proved.

A school in a rural setting with a view of the bay, with happy youngsters and a kind, considerate staff.

An Old Story

There is nothing new under the sun.

A search of files in recent days revealed a February 1970 picture of then Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey (now Postmaster-General) and a report that he was threatening action if west coast longshoremen and their employers failed to resolve their differences within a few days.

Again from the file of that year, there was a cartoon showing Treasury Board and Postal Union representatives sitting across a table glaring at each other, above them a sword and it was captioned, "Sword of Damocles."

It's an old story, and it has come to the point now that Canada has one of the highest work stoppage rates in the Western world.

Viewpoints

One year ago, the Canadian dollar "peaked." In relation to the U.S. dollar, the Canadian dollar was worth $1.04. Now it is worth 97.6 cents. In relation to major overseas currencies, the decline has been even more pronounced. In the final six months of 1974, the Canadian dollar depreciated 21 per cent in relation to the Swiss franc.

Is Well-Armed Israel Preparing for Pre-Emptive Strike?

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

If the long Yitzhakness was ends her life battle against the long postwar conflict, Arabs versus Israelis, flare up yet again?

Reports from Israel suggest that country is determined to fight again, regardless of the Kissinger failure to bring both sides together and the delay in delivery of new U.S. weapons.

Surely Israel more than any other nation in the world, (except the beleaguered Vietnamese themselves), is influenced by quickly-moving events there.

The Israeli philosophy, given the odds against her both in the region and internationally, is undoubtedly based on the use again of the pre-emptive attack which Israel used with total success in 1967, but with mixed results in the so-called Yom Kippur War of October, 1973.

The Israeli military establishment has an understandable self-confidence, revealed a few days ago in the showing of a 1-Israeli-built Jet tactical fighter following the pattern of the French Mirage fighters.

A few days ago, the Israeli defense ministry also announced it had developed and put into service a new sea-to-sea missile, better than the French-developed Gabriel and in an area where the Israelis are weapons-sensitive.

They will not forget that their destroyer "Eilat" was sunk suddenly and disastrously by a Soviet sea-to-sea missile fired with unerring accuracy from a Soviet Komar class motor torpedo boat of the Egyptian Navy.

Sea-to-sea, of course, means a missile fired from one warship into another or a one-shaot ship with an accuracy which cannot be met by defensive weapons on the victim.

On land, the Israelis are still confident their armored units are a match for anything the Arabs jointly or individually can put up against them.

This could be over-confidence, given the fact the Six Day War produced the second greatest tank battle in history (in terms of number of units) after the Soviet-German tank massacre at Kursk in central Russia in 1943 during World War Two.

But above all hangs the issue of whether Israel has a tactical nuclear weapon and if she does, whether she has the delivery apparatus to use it? But above all, would she bring nuclear weapons into the inflammatory Middle East conflict?

Given the high technological capability of the Israelis and the growing domestic weapons development of the Israeli Defence Industry which is a state corporation, no one doubts that Israel could deliver a nuclear weapon on her own timetable.

But behind all this push in Israeli weaponry, there are serious political and international considerations which outwardly buoyant Israelis know they cannot overlook.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's ministry government is not popular with many Israelis who fear that it is a strong "dove" element, previously kept in check because their views were considered "unpatriotic."

The United States desperately involved in the Vietnam debacle, might not have the will to listen to another plea, albeit the Israeli one, for more weapons, more involvement in blood and Israeisgrace.

Is Tel Aviv really whistling in the dark?

Davis and Nixon Active

The Appearances of an Election

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

The election may not have started - yet but some of the electioneering has.

For the past few weeks both Premier Davis and Opposition Leader Bob Nixon have been going all out.

They have been rushing about the province, speaking every night and generally setting a pace that one expects to see only at election time.

NDP leader Stephen Lewis hasn't been driving quite as hard but he has been doing steady campaigning.

From the way things have been shaping up some observers see some quite bitter times ahead.

They sense that a deep personal animosity is building between the premier and Mr. Nixon.

The enemity has been running down the Liberal ranks and the party mainly through ridicule. He says, in essence, that they don't know what they are doing and have no policies.

Mr. Nixon has his touchy side and this attack apparently has been getting to him.

He on his part has been questioning the integrity of the government.

And though he says specifically that in this he is not questioning Mr. Davis's personal integrity it apparently is really upsetting the premier.

He has made this apparent publicly on various occasions.

Strangely, neither of the two men are paying very much attention to Mr. Lewis.

Their campaigns, to date at least, have had the ring of a personal feud between the two of them.

This could change, of course, when the election actually is called and Mr. Nixon finally releases his program.

This might turn out to be quite a document.

Financial critic James Breithaupt gave a hint of one possible point when in his budget criticism he mentioned the possible doing away of health insurance premiums with the government paying the whole shot.

If the Liberal leader produces a program with much meat such as this the premier will have to turn his attention to it.

But pending that it appears that the campaign will be a personality contest, and probably a bitter one.

Law of the Sea Conference Searches for Consensus

By KEVIN DOYLE

LONDON (CP) — The outcome of the International Law of the Sea conference in Geneva appears likely to fall considerably short of the original hopes of the 110 participating states.

Nevertheless, sources say, any documents produced at the close of the meeting May 19 will be of major importance since they will give a strong indication of whether it is worthwhile continuing efforts to draft a new law governing the use of the world's oceans.

A reliable conference source in Geneva said in a telephone interview Tuesday that the 1,700 delegates now are concentrating on developing a unified text which basically will outline the main areas where agreement is needed.

There are strong suggestions, not yet confirmed, that not enough progress will be achieved to warrant holding another session of the conference later this year as had been originally planned.

Instead, the next meeting may be convened in New Delhi in 1976 with the objective again of trying to reach a consensus on a basic package of new legislation which would then be ratified sometime later in Caracas where the current round of talks started nearly a year ago.

The Alternative to drawing up some forms of unified text in Geneva would be to take each issue separately listing list say on which there was agreement and leave the remainder for future consideration.

But the Soviets, especially backed by the Canadians and Americans, are strongly opposed to this approach, arguing that they must be able to see the shape of a final package before agreeing to any specific items.

So far, the conference, which opened March 17, has been able to reach a tentative agreement on only a few of the main issues under discussion.

The 7 appears to be a consensus that coastal states where distant-swimming fish, such as the Canadian salmon, are spawned should be recognized as having some form of regulatory right over their fishing wherever they are found.

There also seems to be general agreement on the establishment of 200-mile offshore economic zones where coastal states would have first claim over fish and mineral resources.

But Canada and many other countries which have continental margins stretching beyond 200 miles want jurisdiction over oil and minerals extended to cover the whole seabed. This question remains unresolved.

There now is widespread acceptance of proposals for extending coastal state sovereignty to a 12-mile limit from three miles where this has not already been done unilaterally.

However, the right of free passage through straits which fall under national jurisdiction because of this is still in great dispute.

Nor is there any agreement on preventing marine pollution, the protection of fast-fested straits such as the Northwest Passage or the establishment of an international authority to mine the vast mineral resources on the deep sea bed.

The mood of the talks now appears to be that large ocean-spanning firms from the United States, Canada and other advanced countries will refuse to wait for a new session of the conference and will go ahead with the unilateral exploitation of mineral deposits in the seas.

There seems little doubt that this would render further attempts at sharing more fairly the great riches of the ocean between the poorest and the most developed countries, the ones which least need the additional wealth.

Sweet Mystery of Life!

Montreal Gazette —

Senator William Proxmire doesn't think it is worth $84,000 to find out why Eskimos fall in love. He thinks people do not want to know that they prefer a mystery. The senator should go back to picking on the Pentagon.

Nobody, not even Dr. Ellen Berscheid at the University of Minnesota is going to find out about love for $84,000. If she did, it would be a bargain, because, if discussion is any indication, people do want to know. Love is probably the most time-planetary-record talked about activity. It sure beats baseball and hockey.

The Oxford Dictionary of Quotations has 832 entries under love, and that is just even counting headings like love, love's labour's lost, love and so on.

So much as they like to talk about love, no one seems to know much about it. The Encyclopedia Britannica, Americana, and Canadiana do not even mention it. Chicken, probably.

'Touch as a Communicator

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Reading "The Intelligencer" about Belleville's recent visitor Bruce Blackbird prompted the replies,he suggests touching as a means of touch, he can identify with these creatures.

I suppose a generation can be applied to the rest of the world of the blind person.

A subject which has intrigued me for many years. My experience has shown that the seeing person who does not touchwill, in a sense handicap himself severely.

Realizing that of teaching clay modelling to students in nightschool, we had to give them exposure to "seeing form", I learned to apply this idea of "Blind Touch" to the clay.

As a result the student would experience the tactile, thus producing a level of work he or she did not consider themselves capable of, and any art teacher would recognize the surprising and natural understanding of proportioning and balance in work done by all students, a characteristic which is supposed to be a weakness in all art students.

Realizing that the combined information supplied by the senses can produce a confusing effect to the untrained mind, maybe we should consider teaching in a manner which trains the use of one sense at one time.

Once trained, the student would show an increase in perception and would realize more of his inborn talents.

All this at no added expense, except for the earplugs, blindfolds. Also the idea is so simple all teachers could use it without special training.

RONALD VANDERVELDE.

Metric

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

I would say to T. Svoboda and "Ex boarding Morning Star" (Letters, April 17) that their system to stick to it or return to it.

Our elderly might even surprise both. Not all are confused, the younger generation may find it harder to cope with.

I'm all for progress and new ideas but this is downright ridiculous.

"And when she had so said she went her way, and called Mary her sister secretly, saying The Master is come, and calleth for thee. As soon as she heard that, she arose quickly, and came unto him." John 28,29

He is calling — always, to repentance, regeneration, reality, remembrance, to service. Sometimes He calls through sorrow or reverses, yet He calls. As in the case of this one, our strength, he also is also in arising quickly and coming to him.

Students Get OFY Grant

MARMORA — At least three, and possibly four, area young people are sure of a summer job this year as word has been received that their application for an Opportunities for Youth grant has been approved.

One of the students, Jim Airhart received a telephone call late Monday afternoon from the office of Hastings MP Jack Ellis that the Marmora application and 15 others in Hastings County have been accepted.

Jim was hesitant about naming the other three students involved in the project as there seemed to be a mixup in the notification. An official letter is expected later this week which should clear the matter up.

The grant, valued at $4,500 will pay the students from June 9 to August 30 while they gather information for a local history and also operate a tourist information booth.

A submission last year by the Marmora students for a grant to operate a tourist information booth did not receive funding, nor did a proposal the previous year for funds to clean up the banks along the Crowe River.

Following last year's turndown, a local resident, Erwin F. Innis contacted Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner, pointing out that Marmora students had made two applications and been refused. Mr. Faulkner replied in a letter to Mr. Innis that he would do everything he could to assist Marmora in obtaining OFY funding in 1975.

The idea of compiling information for a local history was added this year in order to make the applications more attractive.

Hastings Highlights

Co-authors Congratulated

MADOC Madoc Township has extended official congratulations to Alma Moorcroft, Blanche Sandford and Alma Blackburn on the publication of their book entitled Pilgrimage of Faith about the history of churches in both the township and the village. In a letter to the three co-authors, the township said it recognized "the great deal of research and effort that has been put into this publication — we are proud of you for having written the first and only book in the township."

Coon Protection Refused

Raccoons are destructive creatures as far as farmers are concerned.

So much so, Hastings County Council decided Tuesday, it should not support a suggestion that certain measures for their protection become law.

Council took no action on a resolution from Perth council that the Game and Fish Act be amended to protect breeding and pelt conditions of raccoons by introducing a hunting season.

Reeve Jack McKenzie, Faraday Township, described the animals as "very destructive" — particularly to corn crops.

"They ate all mine last year — and I've no use for them," he tersely told council, successfully requesting the resolution be filed.

Summer Brings Dollars

Marmora does not have any local manufacturing industry and relies upon a solid farming community for year-round support of its business community as well as local residents. Summer is when business swells and the economy is boosted. Jack Reynolds, pictured here looking over the downtown area, has been reeve for five years and on council since 1947.

County Welfare Caseload Up

Statistics for Hastings county welfare during the bleakest months of this year have yet to be reported.

But county council learned Tuesday the caseload from July to December 1974 showed a 10.9 increase over the same time in 1973.

Total number of general welfare assistance cases during the period was 3,435 compared to 3,188 in 1973.

However, reported council's social services committee, the caseload for the last half of 1974 dropped 15 per cent from the first six months of that year.

Reg Tucker, social services director, said later statistics for the first, and traditionally the worst, two months of this year — January and February, when unemployment peaks, have yet o be reported.

Provision of prescription drugs by the provincial government also was a major cause for a drop in the amount of supplementary aid. Supplementary aid is assistance to those drawing government benefits and used to include payment for drugs.

The result: A drop of 42.5 per cent over the first six months of 1974 and 22.9 over first six months of 1973.

But the number of people being serviced by the agency's homemaker and nursing service continues to increase—now up 45 per cent over the first six months of 1973.

One reason, believes the committee, is the result of the Gordon report — a survey of medical needs in the Belleville area commissioned by the provincial health ministry.

This heightened further attention on easing pressure on hospitals and other care institutions.

Statistics for foster child allowances more than doubled in the first six months of last year — to 99 from 41.

Regimental Reunion Planned

The Mad Midlands will invade Lindsay, May 10, for the purpose of unveilings cenotaph to the memory of former members of the regiment who died in Italy, Hong Kong and Northwest Europe. The reunion committee has corresponded with 1,800 former members of the regiment. The cenotaph has been completely paid for by members of the association.

The regiment was mobilized in July 1940 with companies at the following communities: A, Cobourg; B, Campbellford; C, Port Hope; D, Bowmanville and Headquarters Company at Lindsay. The recruiting area was Northumberland, Durham, Victoria and Haliburton Counties.

Reunion headquarters are at 1 York Street, Lindsay. The chairman is Lieut. Laird Gamble; Lt.—Col. John Leuty, Port Hope will command the parade and Ralph Hodgson, Lindsay will be master-of-ceremonies at the Regimental dinner. The reunion will conclude with a dance in the Lindsay Legion.

BEST NUTRITIONAL BUY — THE WHOLE OF THE GRAIN

From wheat to oats, you get the most nutritional value when you use all of the grain, whether as a cereal, in a meat accompaniment or in flour mixtures.

B vitamins, iron and other important nutrients are concentrated in the bran and germ of the grain. That's why Canada's Food Guide recommends at least one serving of a whole grain cereal daily. Second best nutritional buy in cereal products are those which though refined, are enriched with vitamins and minerals, as clearly set on the package. Enriched flour and bread also have most of the nutrition which was removed in refining, put back.

For desserts, replace cakes and pastries made with refined flours by sweet loaves, muffins, cookies and yeast mixtures made from recipes developed for whole grain products. Or try replacing up to half the white flour with whole grain flour or rolled oats. The product will be more dense, but deliciously flavored.

Connie Ellis likes new fabrics

Sewers Will Like These New Fabrics

It's no news that home sewers are way ahead of their non-sewing counterparts when it comes to saving money.

But Connie Ellis of the Quinte Sewing Centre thinks they're even ahead in other ways if they use a new fibre called Visa.

New in Canada, the knitted and woven fabric produced by Milliken, is a polyester that does something most polyesters won't — it breathes. That makes it ideal for warm weather clothing, Mrs. Ellis says.

The fabric will absorb and transport perspiration, like natural fibres, as well as release soil in the washing machine. And it won't do what a lot of synthetics do — pick up soil from other articles of clothing in the washer.

The fabric, which is 60 inches wide, is slightly more expensive than some other polyesters: $4.98 to $5.98 a yard.

"I'm more enthused about this fabric than I have been about anything in home sewing for a long time," Mrs. Ellis says.

She recommends that home sewers use an ordinary straight stitch with the fabric and a No. 9 needle.

Other fabric news for home sewers this spring season is mixtures of natural and synthetic fibres in "blending" fabrics. Linen, acrylic and polyester are mixed for example in many neutral toned fabrics. Cotton is popular.

"More and more people are sewing all the time," Mrs. Ellis says. "I just don't had to understand why."

She added that her own daughters began sewing when they entered high school and by graduation, she prepared them with new top-of-the-line sewing machines.

And figure they saved me at least that much money."

Tweed Seniors Hold Meeting

The second meeting for the month of April of the Tweed Senior Citizens' Club No. 399, was held in St. James' Anglican Church Hall, recently.

A letter was read from Dorothy Potter, Secretary of Zone 18, telling the club that the Senior Citizens Annual Picnic, which was to have been held at Zwicks Island, has been changed, will take place at the Ben Bleecker Auditorium in Belleville.

There will be a Zone meeting to be held in Campbellford on June 9, which two delegates, previously appointed, will attend. Maggie Wilson and several officers will be in attendance.

Albert McTaggert reported on the Senior Citizen Housing in Tweed. He said the footings are in and the walls progressing for the new units, which are for the township of Hungerford and Elzevir.

Senior Citizens' Week will be celebrated in June, and it was moved that this year's Church Service for Senior Citizens would be held at the Tweed Pentecostal Church, on June 15.

An anniversary cake adorned the head table, and the film "The Monk of the a "bride and groom" of 50 years ago, were Don and Hilda Severs.

Nursery Renovation Approved for Hospital

The Belleville General Hospital board of governors has decided to revise the BGH nursery setup before a tragic incident occurs.

The board Friday approved the expenditure of $44,585 to renovate the nursery which will generally open up the viewing area for better visual supervision of the infants.

Following the meeting, board member Gerry Joyce explained a hall at present cuts the nursery into two sections with babies on both sides.

He said the small size of hall windows and other physical characteristics of the nursery prevent nurses from keeping an eye on babies in one portion while working in the other.

Mr. Joyce said the renovation will basically involve increasing window size, moving cupboards and opening up the viewing area.

During the meeting, Mr. Joyce pointed out the hospital architect recommended the construction o' a new unit and a new building but the provincial ministry of health has refused to provide funds.

Dr. Bruce Morgan reminded the board of the urgency for renovations. "One of these days we're going to lose some babies," he remarked.

Mr. Joyce noted the practice by Trenton Memorial Hospital in sending its premature baby cases to BGH has added to the problem. He said this is probably done because BGH has more specialists.

"Everybody wants to go to the head office," he commented. "Babies used to be born in mangers".

British Doctors Believe Miscarriages Frequent

LONDON (Reuter—Two British doctors have suggested that as many as three-quarters of all human conceptions end in spontaneous miscarriages without the woman even realizing she is pregnant.

The theory is that most of these embryos are abnormal. The women's body is able to detect that something is wrong in the early stages of the development of the fetus and arranges a natural abortion.

It has been known for some time that this is nature's way of keeping down the numbers of severely deformed babies born. But it has never been suggested that it happens on such a vast scale.

A woman may not realize she is having a spontaneous miscarriage. Alternatively, all she may know about it is a heavier flow in her menstrual period which may arrive a little later than usual.

The hypothesis is put forward in August issue of the British medical journal by Dr. Colin Roberts and Prof. Charles Lowe of the department of social and occupational medicine at the Welsh National School of Medicine.

Confirmation of their findings would have far-reaching implications—particularly for the lobby favoring surgical abortions.

"If nature resorts to abortion to maintain genetic stability by discarding as many as three in every four conceptions, it will be difficult for anti-abortionists to oppose abortion on moral and ethical grounds," experts wrote.

They built their case largely on studies of human embryos removed during surgical abortions and other operations.

But they also estimated the number of births there might be to married women aged between 20 and 29 if spontaneous miscarriages did not take place on a large scale.

Sexual intercourse twice a week by the 2½ million women should result, according to their statistics, in just over two million cases of fertilization. In fact, only half a million births occur.

They question is "what happens to all the other conceptions?"

They quoted a Japanese study of surgically removed embryos which indicated that for every baby born with the crippling disease of spina bifida, nine fetuses with the disease were lost naturally in early pregnancy.

An investigation of more than 3,000 fetuses at London's Royal Marsden Hospital showed malformations to be three times as frequent in spontaneous abortions as surgical ones.

The nature of the problem makes it difficult to undertake a systematic survey but studies of cattle, sheep and pigs have shown prenatal losses ranging from 15 to 60 per cent, the article said.

What this suggests to Dr. Roberts is that birth of a baby is in fact abnormal.

"In the long term, society may come to regard abortion as a natural function responsible for the control not only of quantity, but also of quality," he said in the article.

"The moral, ethical, and legal rights of the embryo, the fetus, and the mother will be very different from those which now seem to apply."

Take Stock, Enjoy Life

All too often people wait until they are in danger of dying before they take stock of their lives.

When Phyllis was told she had only six months to live, she took all her life's savings and went on a luxurious around-the-world cruise. She discovered that travel was definitely "her thing" and when she returned — far more alive than dead — she went to work as a clerk in a travel agency. That was 10 years ago.

Phyllis is now leading tours for women's clubs. As medical science has proved, despair and hopelessness can cause physical illness — and flight into living can cure it.

— excerpt from "Life Is To Enjoy", by Eda Lesham, in Women's Day.

It does seem that if we believe in life, continuing to do some positive thinking, our bodies react with positive improvements.

Just as, in the same way, the constantly pessimistic person is likely to suffer physical aches and pains.

Dear Doris: Something you said in the column started us discussing if there really is as much divorce on the farm as in the city. Being farmers we don't think so, mainly because farm couples are teams.

The woman feels fulfilled, she has her valued work and he has his. We asked one another, is there the same marriage failure in the country as in the city? We think there is not — but we don't know.

Who does? Do you?

Rusty.

Dear Rusty. My first reaction is to reflect on the number of letters I get from farm women who describe neglect, frustration, boredom, or husbands who take off by themselves and never give a thought to providing some change in the daily routine of their wives.

I don't doubt but what there are many who do have the fulfilment you mention, as a team. And city living may indeed create tensions which develop into battles; whereas, it may be that good physical fatigue, with peace at the end of the day and near to nature, may provide satisfactory relaxation to the country homemaker which the city dweller doesn't dream of.

Maybe our readers would like to tell us what their experience is — or offer other comments.

Dear Doris: I have just lost a nephew, age 21, and his mother is a very close cousin of mine, so I would like to send "God's Loan" to her and her family.

I am enclosing 25 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope, if you would be kind enough to send this poem to me.

I am a great fan of yours — read all your articles. Your answers are so full of common sense and good Christian morals.

Another helpful book for the bereaved is "Angel Unaware" — author, Dale Evans Rogers, which you probably know about.

Dear Sad: It does seem particularly depressing for a family to lose one of its young people, seemingly unfulfilled.

The poem "God's Loan" is comforting, pointing out that the family did have their child for a time, to love and to care for. This in itself is a great comfort.

Yes, I have read "Angel Unaware" and I am sure it would be a comforting and helpful book for anyone who has loved and lost a young person.

Starving Children Can't Learn

VANCOUVER (CP)—A nutrition expert at University of British Columbia says the 200 million children in underdeveloped countries the go to bed hungry every night suffer from grossly retarded physical growth, sickliness and listlessness and the effects of malnutrition can be permanent.

Dr. Jill Desai said recent research shows that children raised on starvation diets mature with irreversible defects in their physical and mental capabilities.

Mr. Desai said in many cases the mother may also be the victim of malnutrition and related illness.

"Rickets, anemia and scurvy are deadly diseases but they are expected to be the way of life and they are not given much consideration," said Mr. Desai, who noted the effects tend to snowball.

"Learning time is lost because the malnourished child is listless and unresponsive. In school he falls further behind because of nutrition-related illness."

Mr. Desai said million in some Latin American countries as much as one-third of each school year because of illness and the failure rate is high.

An adult on a continued subpar diet would have 30 per cent less muscular strength and poor co-ordination.

Mr. Desai said that the vicious circle is closed as the affected population is less able to produce the food needed for the next generation. To reverse the trend, incentive programs and food supplies from other countries were needed.

He noted that governments interested in quick results, often direct food-supply effort to areas with the best food distribution systems.

"These are not always the areas that need help most."

Ann Landers

Rules for a Happy Life

Dear Ann Landers: A long while back you printed Rules For a Happy Married Life. We moved recently and I lost that column. Will you please run it again? I want to have it hand-printed by a professional and give it to my as Super-Dame. If she is "only" a mom and his wife for their first anniversary. Thank you, Ann.—Lesbian Reader

Dear Reader: Here it is—and thanks for asking.

Rules For A Happy Married Life

1. Never both be angry at once.

2. Never yell at each other unless the house is on fire.

3. Yield to the wishes of the other as an exercise in self-discipline if you can't think of a better reason.

4. If you have a choice between making yourself look good or your mate—choose your mate.

5. If you have any criticism, make it lovingly.

6. Never bring up a mistake of the past.

7. Neglect the whole world rather than each other.

8. Never let the day end without saying at least one complimentary thing to your life's partner.

9. Never meet without an affectionate welcome.

10. Never go to bed mad.

11. When you've made a mistake, talk it out and ask for forgiveness.

12. Remember, it takes two to make an argument. The one who is wrong is the one who will be doing most of the talking.

Dear Ann Landers: Here's a suggestion for "Desperate Wife" whose husband considers himself a "controlled alcoholic" and continues to drink. Having been married to one, I know what a distorted image those people have of themselves. They are in no position to evaluate their behavior—nor do they have the faintest notion of how they come across to others.

I have "Desperate Wife" will get or borrow a tape recorder and turn it on when her "controlled alcoholic" becomes sarcastic and argumentative. When he is sober she can then play it back to him. Maybe THEN he'll get the message.—Been In Her Boots

Dear Boots: Thanks for a good suggestion. It might make the difference. Let's hope so.

Dear Ann Landers: Please print the Rules Letter to the Women's Libbers. It's time somebody spoke up.

There are approximately 100 million women in the United States. Some of them MUST be traditionalists.

I am licensed because of the discrimination against the housewife. The woman who handles a job at an office as well as one at home is viewed as Super-Dame. If she is "only" a housewife and mother, she is made to feel that somehow she is inferior, lazy or copping out.

If a woman wishes to choose a job at home, let her be allowed to do so with pride, not shame or a feeling of inadequacy. There are plenty of rewards in being a good wife and the mother of three children. I don't want an outside job. So please, Libbers, leave alone.—Content With My Lot

Dear C.: Thanks for your letter. I've had several from others who said the same thing, but you said it best.

Just a Bag of Wind

Motorists at the Milan Trade Fair will receive a suggestion that sounds like a lot of hot air — and it.

This gadget, known as the Bull Bag, is designed to help motorists who have breakdowns on the road. The bag, which weighs about a pound folds flat when not in use and can lift 3 ½ tons when inflated from a tube to the car's exhaust pipe. (AP Photo)

U.S. Diplomats Protected From Latin American Terror

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—The United States government, reacting to terrorism in Latin America, is surrounding its diplomats with armor plate, hired guards, radio checks and marines in civilian clothes.

Although security measures vary widely, an Associated Press survey revealed these points:

—Few chances are taken with U.S. ambassadors in Latin America. Many travel in convoys, live behind locked gates and select their appearances carefully.

Lower-level diplomats often say they feel exposed, particularly since attacks are sometimes made on the most vulnerable officials rather than the most important.

—The U.S. Marines, whose traditional mission has been to hold off attackers while diplomats burn documents, have taken on active bodyguard roles in some cases and have generally added to their firepower.

The embassy here is better protected than any except the U.S. mission in South Vietnam, officials say. Ambassador Robert C. Hill plays tennis in his backyard while a uniformed marine with a periscope scans neighboring windows.

Hill's black Chrysler, reportedly costing $52,000 and now standard issue in risky areas, is armored from the bottom, sides, top, front and back.

Marines in civilian clothes are known to be among the ambassador's guard, which also includes Argentine federal police, U.S. security experts and sometimes locally hired former policemen.

Other embassy officers here, if not guarded, are restricted in their travel and their housing. Each has a two-way radio with the embassy, and all are schooled in such techniques as varying their schedules. Tight security is not restricted to Argentina.

In Santiago, Chile, the reception desk marine watches over thick glass doors operated by push-button combinations. In Managua, Nicaragua, two Nicaraguan soldiers with M1 rifles eye each visitor to the embassy compound.

The U.S. ambassador to Brazil gets a fallow eye full of guards and a blue van, the same as Brazilian cabinet ministers.

Five U.S. officials have been executed by terrorists in Latin America since 1968 — the latest Feb. 28 in Cordoba, Argentina. In that period, eight were kidnapped for periods up to seven months.

Of those 13, two ambassadors, in Brazil and Haiti, were kidnapped and released. Ambassador John Gordon Mein was assassinated in Guatemala on Aug. 28, 1968.

Regularly, anonymous mail and telephone calls threaten someone in a U.S. mission somewhere. Intelligence reports say that, although many threats are hoaxes, there is often cause for concern.

The latest U.S. victim was not protected by anyone, and he was not even a diplomat.

John P. Egan, a retired auto plant executive, agreed to be consular agent in Cordoba for a $3,000 yearly honorarium while he settled down to retirement.

Egan was the only U.S. citizen in Argentina representing his country outside of Buenos Aires since April, 1974, when guerrillas kidnapped and wounded the U.S. information officer, Albert Laun. Provincial police were assigned to guard him.

Three days before Egan was kidnapped, the Argentine police guard was removed. Authorities said later that officers had been attacked, and all men were needed to track down the guerrillas responsible.

"It doesn't really make any difference . . . our reports show that the kidnappers had expected guards and were prepared to deal with them," said one police source.

"If they really want to make the effort to get us, they probably can," said a U.S. ambassador in Latin America. "But we can take a lot of precautions and make it very hard for them."

A few more U.S. Marines are being added to key posts as part of a world program to beef up security, particularly in missions which have had no marines.

Once-attractive Casbah Dangerous for Tourists

ALGIERS (AP) — The handsome stranger so eager invites you to com vis me to me Casbah. The teeming, ancient Casbah of this Algerian capital has become a place of ill repute and tourists are advised to enter the maze of narrow alleys only in groups—and to keep a close watch on their wallets and purses.

More than 100,000 inhabitants are crowded together in the crumbling, white-painted houses on a steep hill overlooking the Mediterranean Sea. Most of them are undoubtedly honest and honorable citizens—but they complain they are getting crowded out by those who are less so.

The exotic smells and sounds still float in the air. White-veiled women and turbaned men fill the marketplaces as they did in the pre-war movies. But the peasants has disappeared with the massive influx of thieves, pimps and tough youths carrying knives in their pockets.

Casbah means citadel, and it is here that the Barbary Coast pirates who terrorized Mediterranean sailors for centuries had one of their main lairs.

The pirates are forgotten. In their place are pickpockets, prostitutes and small-time dealers in stolen goods.

In what used to be Algiers' red-light district, dark-eyed Algerian girls in outmoded miniskirts and shiny plastic raincoats smile hopefully at the rare motorists who venture into th area. The old brothels of French colonial days are officialy closed, but the trade seems brisker than ever.

The busiest street in the heart of the Casbah is Rue Ali Amar, named after Ali la Pointe—the nickname refers to the point of his knife—who boasted that he stabbed a Frenchman a day during the Independence war in the '50s and early '60s.

In the end, Ali himself was killed by the French at the climax of the battle of Algiers, when the French army briefly resisted its control over the rebellious Casbah.

The street named after Ali, now an Algerian national hero and martyr, runs through what used to be the Casbah's Jewish quarter. Inhabitants say not a single Jew lives there any more.

The synagogue has been turned into a Moslem mosque and devout men kneel on the rugs, bowing toward Mecca. But the Star of David remains part of the decoration, and the little square still is named after Rabbi Bloch, who presumably once ruled over the building.

Crowds of young men stand in the middle of the street and make stop-for-cars with a show of reluctance. They gather in groups to buy and sell watches, cameras, radios—many of the expensive consumer goods difficult to obtain in socialist Algeria.

All that stuff is stolen, an old man in a cafe said. Everybody knows it, even the police, but no one does anything about it.

A shopkeeper on Rue Ali Amar wrote to the government newspaper El Moudjahid to complain that conditions in the Casbah were getting out of hand and driving away tourists and other honest folk.

Early Woman Doctor's Work with Crees Told

By GAIL HELGASON
The Canadian Press

The Doctor Rode Side-Saddle is the inspiring story of one of Canada's first women doctors, Elizabeth Matheson, who established a hospital for Saskatchewan Cree Indians at the beginning of the century and fought tirelessly in her bleak outpost to remove discrimination against women in the medical profession.

It is painfully well-documented by her daughter, Ruth M. Buck, who brings to the book the knowing detail and insight of a daughter writing about a remarkable woman who also happened to be her mother.

Mrs. Buck recounts how her mother abandoned medical training in 1891, after a brief stint in a mission field in India, to accompany her teacher husband to an Anglican mission at Onion Lake, Sask. Her horror at lack of medical care in the area, and her decision to complete her training at whatever cost, led Mrs. Matheson into a far-flung pioneer practice while raising nine children and assisting her husband at the mission.

Tackling the problem lawn sensibly

John Bradshaw

Most lawns run into trouble now and again; despite the care you lavish on them.

Ants or grubs move in; crabgrass rears its ugly head: broadleaf weeds, such as dandelions pop up everywhere.

Faced with these problems, do as I do. I find the best treatment for the lawn with crabgrass, insect and weed problems is CIL Lawn Doctor 5 which not only controls grubs, ants, wireworms, but prevents crabgrass, kills broadleaf weeds and also feeds your lawn a rich, long lasting, non-burning lawn food.

It's just about all you need for a problem lawn. Apply CIL Lawn Doctor early when weeds are in leaf but before the lilac flower buds open. Follow the directions carefully, and you'll get good results. What's more you won't need to feed the lawn again until August: an extra bonus.

For a straightforward step-by-step guide to lawn and garden care, pick up a free copy of my 1975 CIL Lawn and Garden Guide at your CIL Lawn and Garden Products dealer. Happy Gardening! —J. B.

Restoration of Historic Road Would Re-create Pioneer Days

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

It's called The Road.

An imaginative project, it would tap Hastings County hinterland heritage for cultural — and spinoff commercial — enhancement.

County council heard about it Tuesday.

The scheme — the inspiration of the Hastings County Historical Society and its museum's curator Marion Lewis — is hinged on an historic route in the county's north-central township. It's the Old Hastings Road.

The Road was pushed north through the county in the mid-1800s as a colonization route for settlement. High hope for its potential were never totally realized. Much pioneer optimism perished on the rocks of the north country bush.

Today The Road, flanking Highway 62, still is in use in varying degrees, where it hasn't been abandoned.

What Mr. Lewis proposes is to:

— Restore sections of the road to its earlier environment, lined with rougher amenities of pioneer life, from cabins to corduroy roads.

— Have local residents encouraged, or taught, to practise the skills of the original inhabitants.

— Have visitors, not just as passing tourists, but to stay one or two weeks, totally immersed in pioneer life in re-wived way of life.

It would include period stores and hotels along the route for tourists; demonstrations of pioneer industry.

Financing mainly would come hopefully from senior government funds available for programs tailored for such creations — including Local Initiatives Program, Opportunities for Youth.

It would be open to school programs and archaeological expeditions.

The result would be prolonged contact with a way of life that is integral in the pioneer tradition, said Mr. Lewis.

It's a novel concept — there's nothing quite like it anywhere in Ontario, he said.

Of necessity it's a long-range project, taking perhaps 15 years, requiring much preliminary plotting.

Although not specifically a profit-making venture, it could become so if it didn't prove financially viable it should be cancelled, he admitted.

This would be easy since the scheme would be plotted in stages. One suggested time frame is to (1) develop Crown land between L'Amable and Umfraville, south of Bancroft, or Oldwell, in Limerick Township and Umfraville; (2) develop the remainder of the route between L'Amble and Bannockburn in Madoc Township.

Reeve Jack McKenzie of Faraday Township warned that such an undertaking could be too costly. He said a walking trail in the area — without naming it — has turned out to be a "white elephant."

However, county council voted 15-7 to approve the project in principle.

$7.56 Million Budget Gets County Approval

Hastings County council today moves toward what may be the most distasteful decision forced on it for years.

Up for debate — and final approval — is the county's 1975 operating budget, a document which has been produced after much agonizing by council committees and staff in recent weeks.

BULLETIN

Hastings County Council early this afternoon approved a 1975 budget of $7.56 million, this compares with $5.7 million last year and is the biggest budget in the county's history.

Council members came to the session knowing they'll be asked to endorse a large increase.

And Warden William McCrea, Hungerford Township reeve, could give little reassurance in his formal opening speech Tuesday morning.

"Everyone has tried to give the budget as much as they could," he said. "But it seems quite fruitless. We couldn't keep it down."

It will be the first marked increase asked of council in the past three years.

Last year's budget was $5.7 million.

Councillors were conscious of the situation.

"It doesn't seem to be the year for increasing grants," cautioned Reeve Ritchie Wells of Marmora-Lake Township as council debated donations to various community groups.

And county's roads committee feared increased provincial subsidies and over-spending last year will cause a "substantial increase" in the levy.

But the presence of inflationary problems making an increase inevitable was to be seen in some committee reports.

For instance: the homes for the aged committee cited "a major increase in expenditures" caused by higher salaries and supply costs has necessitated an increase in the original daily per diem charge for elderly resident at county homes in Belleville and Bancroft.

Residential care is up 23.45, $11.30 extended care at Belleville is up from $10.85 from $9.19 and to $20.07 from $17.12 at Bancroft.

Bus Driver Top Educator

A school bus driver in the Centre Hastings area, Arie Bateman, has been selected as this area's educator of the year during a banquet Friday night at Madoc.

Mrs. Bateman drives students to the Bridgewater School in Actinolite where she teaches balance and coordination skills to students. Mrs. Bateman also assists with a skating program and helps with an OY project in the summer.

She has the longest bus route in Hastings County and has been known to take students to her own home to wait for their parents.

During a recent stay in the hospital Mrs. Bateman received over 600 cards from well wishers and had almost 900 visits to set a possible record.

Bancroft Hospital Among Grant Requests

Hastings County council Tuesday adopted the report of its finance committee — which included proposed grants of $7,500 to Bancroft Red Cross Hospital and $5,000 to the Deseronto Community Centre.

The grants will be included in the county budget discussed today for approval.

The request from the Bancroft hospital was for assistance to a renovation project and improvements to its physiotherapy department costing $54,000. Federal and provincial governments paid $36,000 while the remaining $18,000 must be raised locally. The Deseronto centre has received $150,000 in federal winter works funds and a total $100,000 in provincial community centre grants. Its total cost is estimated at about $400,000.

Other grants with the amount in brackets where increased included: Victorian Order of Nurses, $1,000 (Madawaska Valley Tourist Council, $1,200; Trenton Memorial Hospital $2,000; Bancroft Rockhound Gem-Shop $250; Land O'Lakes Tourist Council $250.

Land-use Standards Vary Across Province

Ontario Housing Minister Donald Irvine believes an overall plan for housing land use higher density housing be feasible, a Hastings County councillor said Tuesday.

The indication came at a meeting between the minister and the county's planning board over Hastings official plan.

A lingering issue has been the plan's allowance that home-building on one-acre lots in certain rural areas is permissible. Indications have been that ministry staff want a 35-acre minimum and this has created an impasse in recent months with the board.

But, Reeve Felix Browne, of Rawdon township, who is board chairman, reported his committee met in March with Mr. Irvine to discuss official plan policies. While no commitments were made the board at least made its concerns felt over rural development.

When discussion of the minimum land-size came up, said Reeve Browne, the minister indicated — that he is of the opinion that an overall policy for the province of Ontario is not feasible.

"He would rather see individual policies for individual areas — which we feel is the way to do it," said the reeve.

MORE

He said he is hopeful the minist y would accept the official plan as presented.

Critics Acclaim City Native

A native of Belleville, Jan Marsaskas of Belleville has received critical praise for her latest production for the Children's Repertory Group in New York City. When in Belleville Mrs. Kormendi appeared in many recitals and plays at Albert College and BCI. This, her fourth production for the new New York group "How the Grinch Grew Rich — is also written, and directed by her. Mrs. Kormendi is the sister of Mrs. Florence Lewis and Louis Marasskas of Belleville.

Insurance Reviewed

Hastings County council has been cautioned to review its insurance on its homes for the aged because of "startling claims" against such institutions.

The advice came Tuesday from council's committee supervising county homes for the elderly in Belleville and Bancroft.

Gerald Caldwell, administrator of Centennial Manor at Bancroft, recently had raised the issue about liability insurance after hearing a speech on the subject.

He indicated "some startling claims for damages" had been made against home for the aged.

Committee to Study Early Levy Payment

Hastings County council's finance committee will study the possibility speeding up payments of tax levies from member municipalities in a bid to reduce financing costs.

New provincial legislation now permits counties — by a majority vote of its local governments — to collect the levy in instalments starting March 31.

Currently the county levy — the sum contributed by townships and villages to pay for county government annual operations — falls due Dec. 19 in Hastings.

This means the county must arrange interim financing until the money starts coming in.

Such costs last year reached $70,000 — before all municipalities had met the deadline.

Reeve Frank Robbins, Limerick Township, agreed Dec. 19 was "too late" a deadline.

Reeve Ritchie Wells, Marmora-Lake suggested two instalments — the first falling due by July 1st.

Heritage Project

Marten Lewis, Hastings County Museum curator, outlines proposal to county council Tuesday for historic development along Old Hastings Road. The long-range project, approved in principle by council, is aimed at recreating pioneer environment on old colonization route.

Bridges Main Priority For Roads Committee

So far this year Hastings County council's roads committee has spent $762,000.

OHRP Program Defined

It's possible for a householder to work on rehabilitating his residence under the Ontario Home Renewal Program (OHRP) — and pay himself union rates, Hastings County council was told Tuesday.

OHRP loans can be up to 50 per cent forgivable.

Two officials from the Ontario housing ministry were given time by council — now in its annual budget session — to explain the OHRP program which makes loans available through municipalities for residential rehabilitation.

One reeve wanted to know if he could apply for a loan to upgrade his house, do the work personally and pay himself from the OHRP loan.

"That's right — and charge a union rate," Dan Saunders, a senior community renewal officer with the ministry.

Mr. Saunders also gave council some serious statistics: The current housing need is for about 120,000 units a year in Ontario. New buildings now produced about 78,000. Megaline another 100,000 until a year are being lost as homes deteriorate.

Hence the OHRP program he said.

(Belleville recently received 26,000 from 1974 fiscal year OHHP funds).

Mr. Saunders estimated that under the OHHP formula the county's 30 municipalities would be entitled to apply for up to $700,000.

County council decided to have its municipal reform committee study the OHHP program for future recommendations.

It told council Tuesday it is about 30 per cent of proposed budget of $2,526,400 for roads and bridges this year.

Major items in this expenditure are the completion of county road schemes carried over from last year.

But a large slice of this year's funds also will go to local bridges, costing an estimated $279,500.

The bridges: Deer River, north of Cordova; Allan's Mills, north of Hoare's Station; Tweed and Squires Creek.

Three other bridges have been designated for design — at Lonsdale, Wellman and Shannonville.

Now in the design stage are bridges at Latta and Glen Ross.

Pre-engineering on County Road 16 through Deseronto has been completed and construction awaits completion of a town water works system.

On County Road 19 reconstruction from Mitchell's side-road to Road 7 just north of Shannonville is being completed. On Road 7 from Belleville to Mitchell's property negotiations may involve expropriation.

On Road 21 from CFB Trenton to Road 22 the way has been cleared for property appraisal and acquisition. On Road 18 from Springbrook to Highway 62, surveyors have completed work which will allow grading and drainage. New engineering work has started on Road 5 from Frankford to Suburban Road 1; on Road 9 from Highway 37 to Chisholms Mills; on Road 11 from Highway 7 to Delora and on Road 22 from Aikens sideroad to Suburban Road 1.

A property request plan is being prepared on Road 13 west from Marlbank.

Recognizes Red Cross Volunteers

The Belleville Branch of the Ontario Red Cross recognized more than 600 volunteers Tuesday in a special ceremony at St. Thomas' Church Parish Hall. From left to right, volunteers are Winnie Leslie, a 20-year veteran of the women's work committee, Merritt Hackett, chairman of the blood donor's committee, Bessie Miller, a 14-year veteran of the women's work committee and Josephine Tickell, a retired volunteer who put more than 35 years service to the Red Cross.

Principals Agree Supply Teachers Fill Needed Role in Schools

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

Supply teaching has its problems but plenty of principals have decided the problems may be better than the solutions.

That's the consensus of elementary and secondary school principals who participated in recent meetings dealing with the problems and solutions to supply teaching. The results of the meetings were handed down to the Hastings County Board of Education this week, board of Education this week.

The reports was initiated last fall by Belleville trustee Donald Thrush who expressed concern about supply teachers who would exercise choice and in some cases reject daily assignments. He also expressed concern over principals wasting their time organizing supply teachers from day to day.

Through the meetings it was learned most principals accepted the fact that supply teachers reject certain teaching assignments due to inadequacy in subject matter and an inability to deal with classes in which the students come from lower socio-economic backgrounds.

The principals agreed that teachers, both permanent and supply, have the right of choice to select an assignment, of competency. They also agreed most supply teachers reject teaching jobs on the basis it would be in the best interest of the students.

The principals also expressed a desire to retain accountability and responsibility to develop their own list of supply teachers rather than rely on a central clearing house system. They viewed any effort to force assignments on supply teachers as unrealistic.

Although the principals complained about the time spent each day in finding supply teachers they viewed the procedure as essential to finding the right teacher for the right job. "Placing teachers in a classroom with a job for amateurs and requires a careful matching procedure," said the report.

In conclusion, the report said that a supply teacher assignment bureau is not appealing and that the present procedures should continue. The board agreed the report without discussion.

Campaign Under Way

The official kickoff for the Salvation Army's Red Shield appeal during May in Belleville will be Friday, 12:15 p.m., at the entrance to city hall conducted by Mayor Robin Jeffrey. The appeal's blitz night will be Monday. Also on Friday, Mayor Jeffrey will declare the week of May 5-9 as Salvation Army Week in Belleville.

Council Defers Action On EMO Budget Issue

letter from the organization outlining its situation.

The action came after Carl Bateman, county treasurer-administrator noted Hastings municipalities will pay 41 per cent of the QEMO budget. To date this has amounted to less than $1,000 because of major provincial support.

"This year the province announced it was withdrawing its 75 per cent support of local emergency measures operations as of the end of the year.

On a proposed QEMO budget of $26,000 this could mean about $12,000 for county municipalities, estimated Mr. Bateman.

Reeve Ritchie Wells, Marmora-Lake township, said larger urban centres would be the biggest beneficiaries of such organizations.

"If we can't get government assistance we might better drop it," he said.

"I think the premium is too great for the benefits we get from it," added Reeve Calvin White, Huntingdon Township.

If emergency measures organizations are to survive the loss of provincial subsidies, it will mean spiralling costs to local governments.

This was the indication given Hastings County council Tuesday as it heard a letter from the Quinte Emergency Measures Organizations (QEMO) outlining its plight.

Hastings County municipalities — members of QEMO along with Prince Edward County governments — deferred the issue as they filed a

Parking Bylaw Approved

A request from the city's traffic committee to prevent parking in front of eastend Belleville Plaza property adjacent to the Unemployment Insurance Commission's UIC regional office, has passed into bylaw.

The committee recommended the move after hearing protests parked cars obscured vision for drivers exiting from the shopping centre onto busy East Dundas St.

Deaf Awareness Week

Mayor Robin Jeffrey gives the city's official approval to Deaf Awareness Week (May 4 to 10) while Ken Roberts, a member of the Speech and Hearing Month committee looks on. May is Speech and Hearing month and the local committee is planning a three-day exhibition May 8, 9 and 10 at the Quinte Mall. Regent Street

Regent Street, the only main thoroughfare in London planned and executed as an entity, is 150 years old this year. The street took almost 15 years to build and more than 700 houses were demolished to make way for some 300 new houses and shops. Liberty's, one of the streets most famous stores, marks its centenary this year. It was opened in May, 1875, as a small drapers shop. (CP Photo)

Prince Planned Regent Street

LONDON (CP) — Regent Street, the only main thoroughfare in London planned and executed as an entity, is 150 years old this year, a monument to its architect and to the prince who gave him his commission.

The Prince Regent, later George IV, planned to build a new palace beyond the fashionable West End in the royal park of Marylebone, now Regent's Park, to replace his Carlton House residence in Pall Mall which was the centre of the contemporary version of London's jet set.

A new thoroughfare was needed as a link and the prince chose 60-year-old John Nash to design it. Nash was a member of the Carlton House circle but also an architect of considerable standing.

Ironically, the prime reason for the street disappeared before its completion. Carlton House was pulled down and the prince ran out of money to build his new palace. Instead, he moved into Buckingham House which was later enlarged into the present royal residence.

Nash's plans, calling for a triumphal procession avenue in the style of the Paris boulevards and a shopping centre for the wealthy, ran into parliamentary opposition because of expense but were finally accepted.

The street took almost 15 years to build. More than 700 houses were demolished to make way for some 300 new houses and shops.

At Piccadilly Circus, Nash's Quadrant still sweeps in a quarter-circle. Originally it included colonnades to shelter shoppers on rainy days but they were removed in 1848 as being too convenient for streetwalkers.

The street ran up to All Soul's Church, providing a dramatic visual culmination point. Its width was designed to provide room for horses and carriages to wait outside the shops without impeding traffic.

The first major change in the street occurred in 1910 when many of the old buildings were replaced by higher ones faced with stone instead of the previous stucco. But Nash's unity of facades was retained.

The official anniversary is being celebrated April 30 with a procession starting from Langham Place at the top, where a wreath will be placed on the architect's bust under the portico of All Soul's Church. The street will be decorated with flags and banners for the occasion.

Liberty's, one of the street's most famous stores, marks its centenary this year. It was in May, 1875, that 22-year-old Arthur Lasenby Liberty opened a small draper's shop.

He came to know the famous artists of the day and became interested in fine print fabrics. But he found many prints lost the delicacy of their coloring and developed what now are known as Liberty prints.

The present premises, a rabbit warren of departments with a central court and galleries, date from 1924 and are in the style laid down by the city planning board at the time. The store has a distinctive facade, standing out from its more modern neighbors.

Italians Studying Italian

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto's Italo-Canadians are proudly independent but they have no language about borrowing words.

For 25 years, Italian immigrants have been raiding the English language to solve their communication problems.

It often started at work where early immigrants borrowed words and added Italian-sounding endings to deal with the boss on the globba whether they worked as leburas or foremmin, drove a buldosa or crena or laid briccia on pisipuoro (piece-work).

Now their children are at university and are starting to unlearn the mixed language, or at least learn how to say the same things in standard Italian.

There are between 1,300 and 2,000 Italian-Canadian students at University of Toronto, most of them enrolled in the department of Italian studies.

One course teaches the difference between Italo-Canadian Italian and pure Italian and gives them practice in using the language without the English borrowings.

Domenico Pietropaolo and his wife, Laura Sprinzolo, both teachers in the department, made the course possible.

Mr. Pietropaolo ... more than 1,000 "man weeks" while working at the Centro Organizativo Italiano, a community organization helping working-class Italians.

Now he and his wife teach the course and wrap Italo-Canadian students away from the language they grew up with.

When finished, they will not talk about taking a bacco off the berchesifi to read in the barchi-iarda or the bassamento.

They will not talk about starting the day with breechifesi of bacon or ammna with a slice of cipo. When they go to the driasa, they will not discuss whether to cut grevi or chopsticks on their frescifrai or order a bag of cappucorna or pinozze.

When shopping, they will not visit the dreghistore or go to the berchet to buy a lots. When driving, they will not fare un retri (make a right-hand turn) at the end of the stritto.

Neither will crimmi or wearing bluejeri or putting erpinsi in their hair or mecappa on their faccia.

Mr. Pietropaolo said the students do not mind relexing their vocabulary, although old habits sometimes die hard.

New Windmill

Raj Rangi, who developed the new, light, vertical-axis windmill with Peter South in two years' full-time effort at the National Research Council in Ottawa, says the machine is expected to have applications as a supplementary power source in isolated district where good steady winds are available and electricity is expensive.

The windmill is in the testing stage at six sites in Canada to see how it works under actual field conditions. (CP Photo)

African Stinkwood in Demand

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (CP) — It's a wood with one of the least attractive names, but its demand has spanned a century and still is growing.

All over South Africa furniture made from the wood of the stinkwood tree is proudly owned—some if it valuable antiques.

Its botanical name is Ocotea bullata, but more commonly it's stinkwood, or black stinkwood, it gets its name from the obnoxious smell it gives off when freshly cut.

This indigenous tree grows best in humid, densely-vegetated areas and is rarely found in the inland areas.

It may grow as high as 120 feet, but it's a slow grower and after about 75 years averages between 55 and 65 feet in height.

In the early days of settlement the stinkwood tree was the subject of large-scale destruction. Cutting and fire saw large areas of the tree destroyed.

But eventually the settlers found that the wood had magnificent shades and was easily cut and durable.

Recycling Hits Snag

By GORDON LEGGE
The Canadian Press

Not long ago it was fashionable to bundle up old newspapers and leave them on the front porch for pick up once a week.

The old newspapers would be recycled into usable forms and householders felt as if they had made a contribution to enhancing the environment.

Now, in most areas of the country, the papers are no longer being picked up. And if they are, the papers are either being burned or buried as sanitary landfill or stored at an exhorbitant cost in some local warehouse on the outskirts of town.

The market for old newspapers is in shreds.

Whereas a year ago scrap newspapers were selling for close to $40 a ton, in many places now a collector is lucky to get $5 a ton.

Analysts claim much of the problem has to do with the economic recession which has sent the demand for paper products plummeting.

For example, with the housing industry in a slump paperboard and all sorts of wall and roofing paper aren't needed.

Paper mills that normally operate seven days a week are working four or five days a week.

At the time that the topic of recycling old newspapers was popular at city council meetings, there was a severe shortage of waste paper and prices shot sky high.

Many promoters moved into the recycling business and soon found their warehouses full and no customers.

London and Ottawa were among the cities that invested heavily in the newspaper recycling business. Now they are seeking markets as far away as South America and Japan.

Elliott Krever is one Toronto paper broker who has been highly critical of consumer recycling efforts.

He says the pulp and paper industry, without any fanfare, has been recycling waste products for decades.

He says newspapers account for only three per cent of the total wastepaper industry. There are some 70 different grades of waste paper, obtained as a byproduct from other industrial processes.

Many people have a misconception that old newspapers, once recycled, become newsprint, school exercise books, shopping bags or wrapping paper.

But that is not so, say the waste paper experts.

It is used mainly to make shoe boxes and certain building materials.

The larger packaging companies that rely almost solely on waste paper recycle corrugated boxes obtained largely from supermarkets. It is mixed with virgin fibre and some newsprint.

Indians Get Edible Fish

TORONTO (CP) — Indians on the Grassy Narrows and White Dog reserves in northwestern Ontario are being encouraged not to fish in waters off their reserves and take up logging to replace incomes lost due to pollution, Resources Minister Leo Bernier said Tuesday.

The Indians had been advised not to eat contaminated fish from waters flowing through the reserves. The government recently decided to place freezers stocked with edible fish on the reserves.

Mr. Bernier and Allan Grossman, secretary for resources development, visited the reserves during the weekend and brought back a report for the legislature.

In response to the report, NDP Leader Stephen Lewis urged that commercial fishermen on the reserves be fully compensated for loss of income due to pollution, but Mr. Bernier replied that it was not government policy to compensate people for loss of income resulting from pollution.

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon called on the government to help the Indians finance legal action against companies polluting waters running through their reserves.

Attorney-General John Clement suggested such legal action would be a civil matter and said the government would not undertake civil litigation "on behalf of one particular group in this province."

Mr. Grossman told the legislature that the program to assist the Indians "provides a clear alternative to the consumption of mercury-contaminated fish and, if followed, should eliminate the health hazard associated with this problem."

Mr. Bernier added that commercial fishing in the region of the reserves may be limited to alternative years or particular species.

Sales Tax Reduction Means Little to Poor

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario families on incomes of $10,000 a year would save an estimated $52.50 from a two-per-cent reduction in provincial sales tax, NDP Leader Stephen Lewis said Tuesday.

But the cutback to five per cent from seven per cent announced in the April 7 budget would mean a saving of only $18.38 to families on $5,000 incomes in the nine months it will be in force, he said.

And for those earning over $15,000, the saving would be $91.49, he said citing NDP research into 1973 calculations from the ministry of treasury, economics and intergovernmental affairs.

In a 10-point onslaught on the budget, Mr. Lewis said the sales tax reduction, which he described as "the centrepiece of political grandiose terms," was another method of penalizing the poor.

CP News Roundup

Palestine Delegates To Attend

OTTAWA (CP) — A delegation from the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) is to attend a United Nations criminology conference in Toronto at the invitation of the UN, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Tuesday.

"When Canada undertook to host the conference, we took the obligation of receiving members invited by the UN," he told Allan Lawrence (PC—Northumberland-Durham) in the Commons.

Arms Sold

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has issued three permits this year for export of military equipment to Turkey without restriction on using the equipment in Cyprus.

Drop Exact Fares

TORONTO (CP) — Riders on Toronto's transit system will be spared the necessity of presenting exact fares until next fall, the Toronto Transit Commission (TTC) announced Tuesday.

The commission decided to delay requiring such fares until Sept. 15, because of administrative and equipment problems connected with transition to the new system.

Ask Evidence

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Leo Parsons, chairman of Peel Region, demanded Tuesday that Mississauga Mayor Martin Dobkin give police any evidence of official misconduct in that city just west of Toronto.

Mr. Parsons said in a news release that he will suggest to Mississauga council that it defer action on a judicial inquiry into city affairs until a police investigation is concluded.

Council voted Monday to seek a judicial inquiry after Dr. Dobkin reported "serious and startling allegations" of bribery, assault, obstruction of justice and other malfeasance of conduct over several years.

Search Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative justice critic Eldon Woolliams suggested Tuesday that the RCMP search Morton Shulmans property for missing police files the NDP member of the Ontario legislature says he has.

RCMP Commissioner Maurice Nadon said Mounties have visited Dr. Shulman several times and know he has some documents. The question was "exactly where."

Meeting Sought

TORONTO (CP) — Negotiators for 1,000 striking Toronto Hydro workers said Tuesday a solution could be reached if the union negotiated directly with the city's hydro commission.

Ken Rosen and William Helliwell, members of the bargaining team for Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 1, told a news conference that a face-to-face meeting with the commission was requested but the union received no reply.

A Hydro spokesman said Tuesday that "if such a request was made, it apparently was not received."

Cases Pending

OTTAWA (CP) — Charges still pending against convicted abortionist Henry Morgentaler will not be withdrawn, Crown prosecutor Louis-Guy Robichaud of Montreal said Tuesday.

But there is no urgency in processing the charges in court, he said in an interview.

Mr. Robichaud said the priority, with Dr. Morgentaler already in jail, is to deal with four others, three doctors and a nurse, who face similar charges.

"Why should we let the others stay free? . . . It would not be fair to have a big expensive case against him (Morgentaler) and not have trials for the others."

Diplomat Ousted

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen confirmed Tuesday that the People's Republic of China was "asked to withdraw" a diplomat from Canada but he refused to give many details.

However, the diplomat's activities "did not involve the attempted collection of classified information about Canadian security," Mr. MacEachen told the Commons.

Protests Delay

TORONTO (CP)—The provincial government has taken too long to introduce French as a second official language in the province's courts, Albert Roy (L-Ottawa East) said Tuesday.

In an exchange with Attorney-General John Clement during question period in the legislature, Mr. Roy complained that the government has been proposing for four years to implement French in the courts.

Mr. Clement said his ministry has encountered two major problems—difficulty in translating some phrases used extensively in the courts from English to French so that the meaning would be known to the reader of the document, and the necessity of training court interpreters or stenographers.

To Discuss Crime

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario will launch open meetings on crime to determine how the public can be more directly "involved and consulted in the whole process of justice," Attorney General John Clement said Tuesday.

Stephenson Comes Up Big

Layoff Doesn't Hurt Flyers

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — What could Bobby Clarke most is that there are lots of people who still refuse to accept the Philadelphia Flyers as being worthy of the Stanley Cup.

If New York Islanders were among those doubters, the Flyers should have corrected that Tuesday night.

The Flyers made the Islanders look like boys playing a game game as they defeated them 4-0 behind the solid goaltending of Wayne Stephenson in the opening game of their best-of-seven National Hockey League semi-final.

The 30-year-old Stephenson was outdueling for Vezina Trophy winner Bernie Parent, who may be just for the series.

The Flyer victory came on goals by Don Saleski, Bill Barber, Clarke and Jack MacLellan. None of the scoring plays were spectacular.

"I think a lot of people don't think we're as good as we have shown," said Clarke. "It's been 19 games without a loss (since March 9). That's not too bad.

"But it is was Montreal Canadiens or New York Rangers, I would be written up like the second coming.

"A lot of people think the Islanders are going to beat us. If they beat us, they're going to have to work a hell of a fight, because we're a pretty good hockey club."

Coach Fred Shero of the Flyers said he had worked the team harder than ever for the semi-finals after eliminating Toronto in the opener, because he felt all along the players were ready as they ever would be.

The Flyers didn't waste time proving they were the better club, outshooting the defending champs. Saleski fired one down from the blueline early in the first period and Philadelphia had the goal it needed.

New York goalie Glenn Resch said he was not as sharp as when he blanked Philadelphia 1-0 Saturday night.

"I didn't play well at all," said Resch. On Saleski's goal, he said he missed the shot as he went under his blocking glove.

"It happens," he said. "He beat me with a bad shot."

Philadelphia's strong forechecking game bothered the Islanders who already had been exhausted by a gruelling seven days.

Parent, obviously upset by the injury, still appeared in the Spectrum and watched the Flyers win on television in a private room.

After the game, he said he had a "bleeding tendon" and that he was wearing a light cast on his leg. He injured it in a Gary Dornhoefer on his right leg in practice.

Parent said the puck apparently hit an uncovered part of his leg. He always wears his pads loose in practice.

Shero said he would go with Stephenson again Thursday for the second game if Parent's injury keeps him from playing.

The Flyer coach and his players did nothing to bolster the opening performance of the Islanders.

"You get into the playoffs on teamwork and talent, which they have and we have," said Shero. "I think right now they're playing as good as any body in professional hockey professionally, and with chance everything else.

"They didn't give us much. We had to earn everything."

Stephenson said the victory was less charitable about the performance of his team, which he said had lost some of the spark it showed against Pittsburgh.

"Our passing wasn't good and our skating wasn't good," he said. "We know if we played that bad or they played that good."

Final Series Tied

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Fincups defeated Toronto Marlboros 7-3 Tuesday to tie the eight-point Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A final series 6-6.

The seventh game will be played Wednesday in Toronto and if the teams are tied after 60 minutes, an eighth game will be played to a finish Thursday in Hamilton.

Leftwinger Glen Richardson paced the winners with three goals before 3,704 spectators. Archie King scored twice and Dave Norris and Dale McCourt added single goals.

John Anderson scored two goals for the Marlboros with Mark Napier scoring once.

Fincups scored twice in the first period, the Marlboros once in the second period and twice in the third period, the Marlboros threatened to make a comeback, when Napier and Anderson scored within two minutes. But McCourt's powerplay goal and Richardson's third goal with less than three minutes remaining cemented the victory.

The teams split 20 minor penalties assessed.

The Fincups outshot the Marlboros 47-28.

Indians in Front

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Phil Hoene and Dennis Abgall scored two goals each and Springfield Indians defeated Hershey Bears 4-3 Tuesday night in the opening game of their best-of-seven final series for the American Hockey League's Calder Cup.

New Haven, which finished fifth in the Northern Division, will play host in the second of three game Friday night, with the third game returning here Saturday.

The Indians took a 2-1 lead in the first period with a tip-in by Abgall and with Hoene's first of the night, coming in just six seconds left. Hershey's Jean Pronovost and New Haven power-play goal in 18:54.

Fergie Picks Up a Win but It Hurts

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
It wasn't when he laughed that it hurt, only when he threw his curve ball.

But even though stretched out on a training table Tuesday night with a stiff back after the Texas Rangers' 3-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox, Ferguson Jenkins had reason to smile.

The Chatham, Ont., native had gone to work scattered nine hits for his third win in a row after losing his first two starts of the American League's baseball season, and now is due for a vacation.

"He developed a stiff back in the second inning and just couldn't throw a curve ball," said Texas manager Billy Martin.

"We had somebody warmed up all the way, but he kept getting them out with his fastball. "The cool night may have hurt him, but I don't think he's got him a six-day rest to heal."

Jenkins, who hit a two-run homer in the third inning to give himself a 3-2 lead, was winner last year after getting off to a 7-4 start.

"I could throw the fastball without pain, but the curve hurt when I tried to throw it at the kins. "I don't know what causes it.

"It comes and goes. I'm not worried. It's even going to help."

In other American League games, Detroit Tigers beat Baltimore Orioles 4-2 in 10 innings, Cleveland Indians nipped New York Yankees 3-2 and California Angeles whipped Kansas City Royals 13-1. Wet grounds forced postponement of a game between Oakland A's and Minnesota Twins at Bloomington, Minn.

Willie Horton hit a two-run homer in the eighth to tie it up, and Aurelio Rodriguez and Ron LeFlore homered in the 10th for the Tigers win.

Mickey Lolich started for the Tigers but gave way to Tom Walker with the score tied 2-2 in the ninth.

Detroit manager Ralph Houk said the Tigers' depth in pitching was one of the factors in their success—the Tigers now have five in a row, beginning with a three-game sweep of Boston.

"Ordinarily last year, we couldn't have brought in anybody except (John) Hiller in that situation," said Houk. "But we've been getting the pitching and the kids have been playing good ball for us."

Don Hood had faced only one batter this season until starting for the Indians, going the distance and pitching a four-hitter against the Yankees.

Frank Duffy drove in all of Cleveland's runs with a pair of singles.

Andy Hassler scattered eight hits over the distance for the Angels and Tommy Harper clouted a three-run double that sparked a nine-run third inning for California.

Jerry Remy scored two runs and drove in a pair in the third inning. Orlando Ramirez had four hits in five times at bat, including a double, scored two runs and drove in two more for the Angels.

Down 2-0 to Buffalo Sabres

Habs Hurry Home to Forum

BUFFALO (CP) — Montreal Canadiens couldn't wait to get out of this city Tuesday night.

The Canadiens flew home immediately after losing 4-1 to Buffalo Sabres on Tuesday night to fall behind 2-0 in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final.

"I'm glad to get out of here," said Peter Mahovlich. "I never play well here.

"But whether the switch to Montreal will help, I'm going to help the Canadiens is questionable. Montreal lost twice to the Sabres there during the season and the fickle Forum fans have been known to turn on the Canadiens when they are losing.

Don Luce, Jim Lorentz, Craig Ramsay and Richard Martin scored for the Sabres while Yvon Lambert and Henri Richard replied for Montreal.

The Canadiens did little offensively in the first 20 minutes, managing only five shots, four of them from long range on Buffalo netminder Roger Crozier.

"We tried to play it tight in the first two periods," said Lambert. "We don't care about the shots. I don't think they counted all our shots."

Buffalo coach Floyd Smith did not think the Canadiens tight-checking strategy would work.

"Montreal came out hitting and checking. It's not their game. We do that and you don't get any shots.

"In the second period, they started to skate again and got us trouble."

Don Luce was involved in a first-period fight with Marie Vervelde, at least the second of the playoffs at 17:20 of the opening period to give the Sabres a 1-0 lead.

Lorentz got his first goal of the playoffs to put the Sabres ahead 2-0 at 9:53 of the second period when Luce left unguarded in front of the Montreal net to take Peter McKay's centering pass.

Lambert then got his first goal of the playoffs, tipping in a goalmouth pass by Peter Mahovlich at 11:22 and the goal seemed to upset the Canadiens while the Sabres seemed to sag.

In the third period the Sabres came out hustling and persistent forechecking resulted in Ramsay's game-winning goal at the 1:17 mark. Gary Sabourin, who scored the winning goal in Buffalo's 6-5 overtime win Sunday, took the puck from defenceman Pierre Bouchard and centred it to Ramsay, who was uncovered in the slot.

Ramsay then fired a high shot past a screened Ken Dryden into the side of the Montreal net. Richard kept the margin to 3-2 when he poked home Steve Shutt's rebound with 11 minutes left.

The goal gave Henri 127 points in Stanley Cup play, one more than his brother Maurice.

The Canadiens tried for the equalizer but Crozier, making his first action in this year's playoffs, held them off, aided by outstanding saves on Doug Risebrough and Lambert with three minutes to go.

Gare scored with 10 seconds to play when Dryden was lifted for a sixth attacker.

The third game is scheduled for Thursday in Montreal at 8:05 p.m.

Barrie Wraps It Up

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Barrie, Ont. Flyers edged St. John's Capitals 4-3 Tuesday, winning their stormy Eastern Canada Allan Cup final three games to one.

Barrie's only loss came by default in the third period when coach Darryl Sly took his team off the ice in the final period following a bench-clearing brawl, one of several which marred the series.

And the fighting wasn't over for the Flyers after Tuesday's series closer. A brawl broke out in the motel where the Flyers were staying after the game. No injuries were reported, however, several windows were broken. Police were called but there were no arrests.

Both Sly and coach Bob Badcock of the Capitals criticized the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) for, "inaction" which they said was responsible for most of the "bad feelings" during the series.

"I'm not taking anything away from the local referee," Badcock said. "But there should be a wide definition for all Allan Cup play no matter where it is held."

Sly, now under an indefinite suspension from the CAHA for taking his club off the ice during Sunday's third game, agreed. He said he hopes the suspension will be lifted for the final against Thunder Bay, Ont.

Reflecting on the fights and bench-clearing brawls, both coaches said they were happy with the way the series ended, pointing to the standing ovation the 4,100 fans gave the Barrie club and the traditional team hand shakes at the end of the series.

Nordiques Lead Saints

Mariners on the Ropes

By NEIL CAMPBELL

San Diego Mariners picked a bad time to run into a scoring slump.

The Mariners have appeared fairly proficient how to score goals and their memory lapses has them on the brink of elimination from the World Hockey Association playoffs.

Saturday night, when the struggling Mariners 6-0 Tuesday night to take a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven series.

Quebec Nordiques downed Minnesota Fighting Saints 4-2 Tuesday night to take a 3-2 lead in the other semi-final.

During regular season, the Mariners were the fourth-highest-scoring team in the 14-team WHA and they scored often enough in the quarter-finals to eliminate Toronto Toros but Houston goaltender Don Rivet has been shaky.

Grahame Gardner 2 at shots in a 4-0 Houston win in the series opener at San Diego. He had another 34 saves as the Aeros shutout in the game in the California city 3-1.

Tuesday night a Houston crowd of 8,627 saw Grahame Gardner 2 shots over his goals against average to 0.33.

The scoring slump seems to have affected almost all of the Mariners. Wayne Rivers, who had 54 goals during the regular season, has only three.

Rick Seelen, a 44-goal scorer, has only played goals, Andre Lacroix won the scoring title with 41 goals and 106 assists, but his playoff production is only three goals and nine assists.

As a Grahame weren't enough of a problem for the Mariners, the Howe family got to work on them in Tuesday's game, picking up six scoring points.

Mark had a goal and two assists, defenceman Howe had an assist and Gordie, their father a goal and an assist for the Aeros.

Andre Hinse added two goals and Gord Labossiere and Larry Lund one each for Houston, which scored twice in each period.

Real Cloutier, who scored twice for the Nordiques before a disappointing crowd of 4,846 fans, figures the Saints might not have a chance against his club in the sixth game at St. Paul.

"They'll never stop us Thursday if we play in the first period as we did today," the goalier said after Quebec took a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series.

The Nordiques had a big edge in shots on goal in the period while they were building a 3-0 lead and led 4-0 after the second period. Cloutier had two of Quebec's first three goals.

"It was one of our better periods," said Michel Marc Tardif, another Quebec scorer. "We were loose and the whole team was skating well."

Robert Guindon, Christian Bordeleau and Ronald Leclerc also scored for the Nordiques while the Fighting Saints got two goals from Wayne Connelly and one from George Merrion.

Both series resume Thursday night with games at Houston and St. Paul.

Jim Lonborg In the Groove

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Pitcher Jim Lonborg of Philadelphia Phillies says he has found himself at last.

"I finally know myself and I know what I have to do to be effective," he said Tuesday night after beating Montreal Expos 5-0 with a three-hitter in a National League baseball game.

"Now I throw all my pitches for strikes, not just speed," he has said. "I'm not a power pitcher, I'm aware of that. I can do so I relax and try to do it.

"I got hurt my first year here in the National League because I tried to throw like the power hitters. I'm a pitcher now, not a thrower—and that's the difference."

Lonborg, who came over to the National League in 1973 from Boston, as a Cy Young Award winner in the American with Boston Red Sox, has been tough for the Expos in 1975.

Tuesday night's shutout was the second in a row for Lonborg's over the Expos—he blanked them less than two weeks ago in Montreal.

The shutout extended Lonborg's scoreless string over Montreal to 18 innings over two seasons. Still Lonborg, who extremely hard on himself and keeps a diary of his mistakes, wasn't satisfied with his performance Tuesday.

"I didn't have a real good curve (Tuesday night) and my change-up wasn't as good as I'd like it to be, he said. "But I kept working on it."

In Tuesday's other National League games, New York Mets blanked Chicago Cubs 5-0, St. Louis Cardinals trimmed Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0, Los Angeles Dodgers walloped Atlanta Braves 10-2, San Diego Astros whipped San Diego Padres 6-2 and Houston Astros nipped Cincinnati Reds 4-3.

New York Yankee Catfish Hunter, pitching for Philadelphia, Greg Minaski and Jay Johnstone did the Mets' bidding. Jerry Koosman, 2-1, was never in trouble.

The veteran right-hander gave up his first hit in the fourth when Bob Bailey was awarded a single on a bounced to deep short that Larry Bowa bobbled before throwing to first.

John Milner drove in four runs, three on his first homer of the season, and Joe Torre slammed home two more, leading New York over Chicago.

Lynn McGlothen, who entered the game with a 9.49 earned run average, pitched a five-hitter for Pittsburgh, ending the Pirates' game losing streak by defeating Philadelphia. Lula Mckelvey gave McGlothen a 1-0 lead in the fifth inning with a home run off losser Ken Brett, 1-1.

Mike Wallace scattered nine hits for his first shutout of the season and also drove in two runs as Los Angeles won its sixth consecutive game by beating Atlanta.

Willie Crawford slugged a two-run homer in the fifth inning and Steve Garvey hit a three-run blast in another inning when the Dodgers scored four uncarned runs.

Biltmores Knock Bears Out

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Guelph Biltmores scored three goals within 1:44 minutes early in the third period to defeated Smiths Falls Bears 5-3 and take the Eastern Canada Centennial Cup final series four games to two.

The Biltmores, who won the Centennial Cup in 1973, now go west to meet Spruce Grove, Alta. for the Canadian championships next week.

Spruce Grove won its series opener night with a 4-3 win over Selkirk, Man., to take the best-of-seven Western final 4-2.

Guelph took a 2-1 second-period lead after a scoreless first period and jumped into a 5-2 lead early in the third period before a crowd of 2,500.

Guelph goals were scored by Gord Duncan, Wally Hogg, Mike Hammill, Tim Holder and Zane Forbes.

Randy Pierce and Terry Fournier scored for Smiths Falls.

The Biltmores outshot the Bears 36-18.

Sheffield Tripped Up

LONDON (Reuter) — Sheffield United missed a good season's European Football Union (UEFA) Cup when they were held to a goalless draw hom in an English Football League second division match Tuesday night.

It was a rugged game that provided little entertainment but plenty of ill-feeling on the field, the referee booked six players.

The result meant Sheffield finished sixth in the Third Division and gave fifth-placed Stoke a place in the UEFA Cup.

Charlton Athletic made certain of promotion to the Second Division by beating Preston 3-1 at home.

'55 Cementmen A Hit

What was happening on the sports scene 20 years ago?

Stroud-second, Tidy Lemon had just recorded his fourth win of the season for the Lake Cleveland Indians; Toronto Maple Leafs of the International Baseball League were crowding first place Havana Cuban Sugar Kings after winning their home opener at the old Fleet St. Flats, 6-3 over Syracuse Chiefs; Kitchener Waterloo Dutchmen won the Allan Cup; Toronto's Sid Smith was named the National Hockey League's Lady Byng Trophy winner.

But the big news on the local beat was the Pistol Anne Cementmen Hockey Club.

Cementmen, under the direction of manager Keri Anderson and playing-coach Tim Williams, were busy capping a great season by capturing the Ontario Hockey Association Intermediate C crown.

The Point Anne squad knocked off Wallaceburg Electric Furnaces for the Intermediate C honors.

Earlier, Anderson's skaters took the Trent Valley Hockey League championship, both north and south divisions, and received the Thomas Bata Cup.

There are plenty of familiar names on the 1955 Cementmen roster. Among them are Don Bates, Bobby Hunter, Jud Smark, Leo Goyer, Williams, Gerry Goyer, Pete Green, Pat Gilmour, Bill Strahan, Joe Scott, John Green, Jack Stewart, Bernard Bennett, Duke Doran, Gord Graham, Bill Hurst and Pat Marsden.

Claire Faulkner was the equipment manager and stick boy was Gary Anderson.

Man, was it 20 years ago?

Records don't lie but they sure like to play tricks with the memory.

Montreal Expos have a young team this season but it is not the youngest club in the major leagues.

San Francisco Giants are No. 1 in that category.

Average age of the Giants is 25.49 years.

The Expos' average is 26.04. Expos' collection of hitters is the youngest, with an average age of 24.88.

Refreshing the off-season acquisition of lefties Dave McNally, 32 and Woodie Fryman, 35, the average age of the club's pitching staff is 28.12.

If you want to match National against American League, the NL average is 27.80 and the AL, 28.20.

Bay of Quinte Country Club pro George Balazs, says the Bakelite layout is in good playing condition. To soak up some of the spring rains, a drainage tile has been installed.

The club's new clubhouse is under construction, with the south side of Highway 2, with completion date set for late July.

Belleville Golf Club at Marysville opened last week with heavy weekend play. Manager Bruce Jones says the course is in good condition. Facilities include an enlarged clubhouse lounge.

Bayview Golf Centre, just west of Belleville on the north side of Highway 2, has its official opening set for Thursday. Manager Gary Goyer says the greens are in fantastic shape. Fairways at the executive par 3 course are still a little damp.

OMHA Decision On Weekend

If officials of Oakridge Acres Charterways and Trenton Hill's Handy Stand hockey clubs are losing any sleep while awaiting the outcome of a protest lodged with the Ontario Minor Hockey Association (OMHA) they'll have a few more battles with insomnia.

OMHA secretary-manager Vern Meallum said this morning that no decision will be made until the weekend when an executive meeting is scheduled in Toronto.

Oakridge Acres, loser to the Trenton team in the OMHA Juvenile AA playoff final, filed the protest, in which the Handy Stand team's practice of alternating coaches for series games was questioned.

Charterways' officials contend that the wrong man sat out the final game of the series after the Trenton team had exceeded the 36-minutes in penalties limit in the sixth match.

Frank Chard, an assistant coach with the Hill's team, signed the OMHA game report in the sixth game. Charterways claim Roger Drake is the coach of the club and should not have been running the team when Trenton took the series with a 6-3 win in Game 7.

INTRODUCING A NEW BEER

WHO'S GOING TO DRINK IT?

Cool Spring is a new light beer brewed especially for the person who likes the refreshment of a beer but wants a lighter taste. Cool Spring contains less alcohol than other Canadian beers. (For example, most beers offer around 5% alcohol by volume; Cool Spring's content is 3.9%). It's brewed for the person who enjoys a light beer, now and then. But who is that person? It could be a couple of guys relaxing after a game of squash. It could be some friends out for a light lunch. Or it could be a couple enjoying an evening at home together.

"Charlie, that's the lightest serve you've ever given me."

"Four beers? Is this part of the revolution?"

Choosing a beer is a personal thing. And there are just as many reasons to drink Cool Spring as there are people who enjoy it. But wherever or whenever, we think that Cool Spring has a unique lightness which will appeal to people who enjoy the refreshment of a light beer. Now and then.
Cool Spring by Labatt's. Maybe it's for you.

"Let's make the next move a light one."

Als Lose Ed George

George, the Canadian Football League's offensive lineman-of-the-year in 1974, has been removed by Baltimore Colts of the National Football League, Bob Canary, assistant manager of Montreal Alouettes, said Tuesday.

Geary said he, Montreal lawyer Robert Leclerc, and Balti-

Lacrosse Takes One

Cats Sign Three

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats announced Tuesday the signing of three Canadian defensive halfbacks, but one may have forsaken a football career for lacrosse.

The Canadian Football League team said it had signed Ted Greves, a 24-year-old former quarterback at Ithaca College, Ithaca, N. Y., out after 19 games in the 1974 season.

Signed along with Greves were two newcomers—Ernest Palango, 20, an ex-Dan Medwin, 22, both promising prospects from Sheridan College in Oakville, Ont.

Greves, a native of Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., admitted in a telephone interview from Boston, where his Tomahawks played Boston Rolls Monday night, "the Cats don't know about this."

He said he signed a two-year contract with the Tiger-Cats last December, but a subsequent offer to play lacrosse for more money and his disenchantment at the treatment he received by Hamilton last year helped him decide to switch careers.

"I wasn't played very much and I'm they put me on waivers halfway through the season without telling he." Greves explained. "I felt of his action, I wasn't exactly what you could call a steady job."

Greves said he signed for $10,000 a year over the next two seasons with Hamilton. "Ten grand is not an awful lot of money for playing sports, particularly when American players start at $16,000 or more," he says.

Greves has opted for lacrosse, a game he played at the senior level in Ontario with Brantford Warriors and Toronto Shooting Stars, but the Ticats aren't shooting up any flowers flares to force his return.

"But I would think he'd have the common courtesy to let us know of his plans," said Ticats administrative assistant, Dennis Cuccia. "If he wants to play lacrosse all summer, I'd like to talk to him about it.

"There's a clause in the contract that says if a player wants to engage in another sport that could endanger his ability to play football, he needs written approval from the club.

"But you don't want to deprive him of his livelihood. If Greves or any football player is going to be unhappy here, it won't help anyone."

Last to First In Derby Trial

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Round Stake raced from last to first place and scored a narrow victory over pace-setting Rushing Man in the $21,900 Derby Trial Stakes at Churchill Downs Tuesday.

The victory probably earned a Kentucky Derby start Saturday for Jack Dreyfus Jr.'s son of Jean-Pierre and could send J.W. Mecom's Rushing Man into the lists for the Roses as well.

However, it all but eliminated any Derby hopes for Naughty Jake, finishing third. Henry Clay, fourth, and Dr. Abs, last.

The Derby Trial, first run in 1924, has produced 11 Kentucky Derby winners but none since 1958 when Tim Tam won it.

The best Derby finishers the Trial than produced in recent years were No Le Hace in 1972, Barb's Delight in 1967 and Hill Rise in 1964. All three finished second in the Derby.

The victory for Round Stake was worth $13,650 and brought his career earnings to $66,640.

Round Stake was timed in 1:38 2-5 for the mile and paid $2.60, $2.20 and $2.20, while Rushing Man returned $2.80 and $2.20 and Naughty Jake paid $2.20.

Whitecaps Searching For a Bobby Orr

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Whitecaps' front office knows it has a selling job to do.

And Denny Veitch, vice-president and team manager of the North American Soccer League entry, knows what kind of a salesman he needs.

"What we need is a Bobby Orr of soccer," Veitch said Tuesday. "We've got to convince our audience and the people of this country that Canadians, given an equal chance, can compete in soccer on an international level."

"We're trying a Canadian experiment," he said. "The majority of our players are Canadian and if our nucleus is home grown, we think the team will have great stability."

Whitecaps, one of 20 teams in the four-division NASL, have an 18-man roster, including 15 Canadians.

Veitch said the Whitecaps had a three-year plan when they gained entry to the NASL: "On the field, we're right where we hoped we would be. Financially, we're behind schedule."

player they may help direct toward us."

Geary said no specific player was mentioned, because the, defending Grey Cup champions do not need anyone "right now."

The six-foot, five-inch, 260-pound George came to the Alouettes in 1970 out of Wake Forest despite being the second-round draft choice of Pittsburgh Steelers.

George, 29, a four-time Canadian all-star, was waived out of the the CFL earlier this year in a deal originally set to deliver him to the Steelers, who 10 days ago traded their rights to George to Baltimore for undisclosed draft choices.

WINS CHUNICHI EVENT

NAGOYA, Japan (AP) — Japanese veteran pro Isao Aoki came from behind Tuesday to win the $133,783 Chunichi Crown international invitational golf tournament by one stroke over a field of 64 players. Aoki fired a two-under par 68 for an eight-under-par total of 272 and won $33,333 plus a Japanese-made car worth $8,000.

PLAYERS DETAINED

MEXICO CI TY (AP) — Frew McMillan and Bob Hewitt, South African tennis players who were to compete in the $100,000 world doubles championships which start Wednesday, were detained by police and then flew to Dallas, officials said Tuesday. Pancho Gonzales, president of the Mexican Tennis Federation, said the has no diplomatic relations with South Africa—would have permitted the players to remain as tourists but not to compete in the tournament.

Canadian Open Back to Essex

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Re-spending to pressure from a persistent Windsor lobby the Royal Canadian Golf Association announced Tuesday the 1976 Canadian Open is being given back to the Essex Golf and Country Club.

The RCGA awarded the tournament to Windsor earlier this year but then declared in April 4 it was pulling the Open out because it felt that economic conditions in the Windsor-Detroit area might jeopardize chances of financial success.

"The Windsor community . . . reacted in such a way as to present an overwhelming case to ensure the success of the championship in every way," R. Bruce Forbes, executive director of the CGA, said in Toronto.

"This strong support from the entire Windsor area has resulted in the Royal Canadian Golf Association reviewing its decision. It now has become apparent that the economic environment of the area will support the tournament."

That seemed to be about as close as the RCGA would come to admitting that the RCGA was wrong in its original statement about the weakness of the area's economy.

"I'm looking forward to them coming out and admitting they did not survey the area properly and they grossly underestimated the vitality of the community," said Gord Ellis, a Windsor realtor.

Ellis spent 10 days working 16 hours a day to obtain support from the Windsor and Detroit community to present a convincing case at an April 15 meeting with RCGA officials in Toronto.

Explaining that the club has given the RCGA a financial guarantee, Ellis said local business pledged $140,000 but that it is hoped they won't have to contribute any cash.

Organizers of the tournament hope to sell $300,000 worth of tickets before the end of this year and will do their best to exceed the $350,000 grossed by last year's Open.

Originally the $200,000 tournament was to have been held at the reconstructed Glen Abbey course at Oakville, but was given to Windsor when officials found the course wouldn't be ready in time.

In an effort to give Canada something to do in the Masters in Augusta, Ga., Glen Abbey will become the permanent site of the Open, but not until comments in other eastern sites are completed in 1980.

Run Total Nearing Million

NEW YORK (AP) — On Mark Sackler's third birthday, one of his presents was a calculator.

That gift has ballooned into a giant baseball promotion and is expected to culminate this weekend when the one-millionth run in major league baseball history will be scored.

"I was just looking for something to test it out on," said Sackler. "I had a baseball encyclopedia and I thought the number of runs scored would be a good category."

Sackler, a sportscaster from Westport, Conn., began punching the totals from each year in both leagues into his calculator. The 10½" estimate showed that through the end of the 1973 baseball season, 961,823 runs had been scored in the major leagues.

"Based on previous years, I estimated that between 18,000 and 18,100 runs would be scored in 1974," said Sackler. The actual figure was 18,046, making the total to 997,869.

All but 644 of the last runs required had been scored by Tuesday when a computer-line Centre opened in mid-Manhattan, designed to pinpoint the moment. No. 1,000,000 crosses the plate.

Equipped with electronic clocks and digital timers, telephone lines to 34 major league stadiums and recording equipment, the centre will be staffed by veteran baseball broadcaster Mel Allen.

Each time a run scores, the information will be relayed instantly to the centre and the clock will "draw another digit." The calculators say the magic moment will occur this weekend, probably Sunday.

When it happens, the player who scores No. 1,000,000 will set off a string of awards.

A candy company will present a $10,000 cheque to the Professional Ball Players Association of America, an organization of baseball oldsters.

The player scoring run-No. 1,000,000 will have his shoes sent to the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., and will receive a $1,000 watch. Watches also will be presented to his teammates, coaches, manager and even the umpires on duty in the game in which the run is scored.

Pele Turns Down Millions

SANTOS, Brazil (AP) — Pele, the former undisputed king of soccer, Tuesday turned down a $4.5-million offer from New York Cosmos of the North American Soccer League. Pele confirmed the offer, but said he turned it down because "I have to take care of my family and my business negotiation."

KRAUTZUN RESIGNS

OTTAWA (CP) — Eckhard Krautzun has resigned as Canada's national soccer coach effective June 30. The executive committee of the Canadian Soccer Association said Tuesday it would start looking immediately for a replacement to help prepare a national team for the 1976 Montreal Olympic Games. Krautzun, who joined the association in November, 1973, from far West Germany, cited personal reasons for his resignation.

BEEF: THE CANADIAN FAVOURITE

Whether it's for stretching the food budget, satisfying the family or delighting dinner guests, beef is Canada's all-around favourite meat choice.

Beef differs over 40 different cuts for your enjoyment. While these cuts vary in taste characteristics, all can be prepared to produce a delicious, tender and juicy when prepared properly. For the greatest eating satisfaction, buy quality beef and familiarize yourself with the wide variety of beef cuts available.

BUY QUALITY BEEF

Loblaws makes it easy to buy high quality beef. Loblaws offers only Canada Grade A Beef, assuring you of excellent flavour, tenderness and juiciness.

KNOW THE CUTS

Select beef cuts according to your intended use. Since beef cuts vary considerably in their natural tenderness, be sure to match the cut to the proper cooking method. If you are unfamiliar with the wide variety of cuts and the recommended way to prepare these cuts, see our Beef Chart.

The primal (wholesale) cuts of beef, as indicated on our Chart, include chuck, rib, loin, hip, flank, plate, brisket point and foreshank.

The Chuck is the forequarter offering delicious, tender and juicy when prepared properly. For the greatest eating satisfaction, buy quality beef and familiarize yourself with the wide variety of beef cuts available.

The Rib section contains very tender and flavourful steaks and roasts. Use dry heat, such as oven-roasting or broiling, to prepare these cuts. Plan on 2/3 servings per pound from rib roasts or steaks (bone-in). Braising beef is a one section of the rib that is less tender, so prepare this cut with moist heat.

The Loin section includes the short loin and the sirloin sections. It provides the choicest values of the carcass. These cuts are all tender and should be prepared by dry heat: broiling, frying or pan-broiling. Allow 2/3 servings per pound from these steaks (bone-in).

The sirloin tip is cut partially from the hip and partially from the hip section. This is a less tender cut. Use moist heat such as pot roasting or braising to prepare cuts from this section. Plan on 3 servings per pound from sirloin tip roasts or steaks.

The Hip is the hind leg of the animal. The hip cuts are generally not as tender as the rib or loin cuts. Generally use moist heat in preparing steaks from the hip section. Roasts may be oven roasted, but they are not recommended. Plan on 3 servings per pound for boneless roasts.

The Flank, Plate, Brisket point and foreshank are sections of the carcass that contain less tender meat. Generally, these cuts are ground or used for stew meat.

Delicious and nutritious, beef is an excellent source of protein, important for growth and good health. It is also a good source of the vitamin, niacin and a good source of the minerals, iron and phosphorus.

Scenic Camp

Sheep Creek Camp, one of 20 pipeline construction camps on the trans Alaska pipeline project, is located about 20 miles north of Valdez. The camp will have a bed capacity during 1975 to accommodate 1,0008 workers. The start of Thompson Pass is shown at the top of the photograph. (AP Photo)

Cycle Safety Drive Planned

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP) — The RCMP in Corner Brook will be keeping a close eye on cyclists until September, hoping to catch them doing something right.

Of course, cyclists who are spotted doing something wrong during the force's season-long bicycle safety campaign will earn their share of attention too, along with the occasional traffic ticket. But that's not the aim of the program.

What the police really want is to find someone to whom they can give a trophy, said Inspector Murray Evans, officer in charge of the RCMP's Corner Brook detachment.

Letters listing basic safety rules were sent to about 5,000 schoolchildren in the city and RCMP officers will make personal visits to all schools. A trophy will be presented every month until September.

Private Planes Main Problem For Search and Rescue Teams

EDMONON (CP) — The Canadian Forces search and rescue unit has a respectable success record but all too often it's no thanks to the pilots of small planes.

Capt. Jack Froese, officer commding the Edmonton rescue co-ordination centre, said 95 per cent of the major searches his group undertakes are for small, light aircraft.

Most aircraft searches, he said, take place between spring and fall and in his area of responsibility, roughly from the Canada-United States border to the North Pole and between the Alberta-British Columbia border and a section just east of the Ontario-Manitoba border. They take place in sparsely populated areas.

What frustrates Capt. Froese, a former air-traffic controller, is the resistance of pilots to taking precautions that would either prevent trouble or make searches easier.

In 1974 the centre was successful in 29 of 30 major searches and in the last 10 years 91 per cent of the searches in Canada turned up what they were looking for, he said.

Capt. Froese said many pilots set out in conditions they are inprepared to handle. This was especially true of pilots south of the Northwest Territories. In the High Arctic, pilots were of necessity better prepared to cope with difficult weather conditions.

Capt. Rob Barnes, an operations pilot for 435 Squadron who spends much of his time looking for downed aircraft, would like to see planes, or at least the tail section, wing tips and propellers painted fluorescent orange and equipped with survival kits and electronic location transmitters (ELT).

Pilots should have a good knowledge of navigation and map reading, file flight plans and take defensive flying courses offered by search and rescue. Frequently, Capt. Barnes said, none of these conditions is met.

Capt. Froese has available a Hercules aircraft from 435 Squadron and two Twin Otters from 440 Squadron. He can also call on additional aircraft from other western bases and, if a search is large enough, setup a searchmaster's headquarters at a landing strip near the missing plane's destination.

An electronic search-listening for location transmitters broadcasting on emergency frequencies is the first step.

The transmitters often set off false alarms because they are turned on accidentally or a hard landing sets the shock-sensitive device humming. The false alarms mean extra flying time as search and rescue planes try to track them down.

If the electronic search fails, a track crawl is begun as search aircraft follow the route the plane was supposed to have taken.

The crawl begins in a circle 10 nautical miles in radius from the point of departure, then goes into another circle 10 nautical miles in radius or 10 per cent of the track length at the point of destination. The area of the circles are joined and the search begins in what is known as the first area of probability.

The areas of probability are increased as the search continues and the searchmaster may also assign squares if there are ELT leads or the track crawl fails.

The best search conditions are over flat terrain with few trees in good weather with no bodies of water to hide downed planes. But there are always mountains to circle, oil slicks to be sought on lakes and glints of metal to be ferreted out of dense bush. If the plane gets covered by snow it's that much tougher.

The search process has recently been aided by the development of wrap-around plexiglass doors installed in Hercules aircraft. As well, special units of parachutists can jump into crash sites to aid survivors with first aid and survival equipment.

Searches may last anywhere from a few hours to more than a month, said Capt. Froese, with the decision up to the searchmaster.

North Is Costly to Visit And Tourist Season Short

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — The sun is free for as much as 22 hours a day in summer but tourists will find most other things in the Northwest Territories more costly than at home.

Hotel rooms, meals and other services run sofewhat higher than in southern vacation spots, says Philip Cove, who promotes tourism for the N.W.T. department of economic development.

In spite of the high costs, Mr. Cove said, 22,000 vacationers came to the territories in 1974, a 15-per-cent increase from the year before. They spent about 6 million to give the N.W.T. its most lucrative industry other than mineral extraction, worth 10 times as much.

A breakfast costing 1.50 in the south runs 2.50 in Yellowknife with supper a minimum of 5 and a pint of beer 1 to $1.25. In the city's two major hotels, single rooms start around $25 a night.

The tourist traffic is about 40 per cent from the United States. At the 20-odd fishing lodges on Great Slave and Great Bear Lakes, ownership is almost 100-per-cent Canadian and 95 per cent of the clientele comes from the U.S.

Mr. Cove said he has two related problems in developing a tourist industry. He must develop a year-round season to supplement the present 110-week summer rush of tourists, researchers and resource exploration firms. More hotels and lodges are needed but they require a constant clientele to justify the high initial investment.

His department, with a staff of 12 and a budget of about $200,000 for 1975-76, makes available four $15,000 grants a year for groups or individuals, often Eskimo co-ops, to establish tourist facilities in remote communities.

The $15,000 "doesn't really go very far" and most entrepreneurs couple it with a loan of up to $50,000 from the Industrial development branch.

They usually build "a minimal structure, but essential because there's been nothing until now in those places."

Mr. Cove said most Canadian tourists spend their time in the Yellowknife area and around Great Slave Lake or take package tours up the Mackenzie River Valley.

He is trying to coax visitors into smaller communities where they can have "the wilderness experience" and see natives pursuing the traditional hunting and trapping way of life.

Plane charters run $5 to 75 cents a mile, depending on the size of the aircraft, and Mr. Cove said visitors still have a chance to see the northern way of life before it changes too drastically, although the last 10 years have had a tremendous impact.

Commercialism has not been a problem, he said, because the high cost of getting into business discourages the operator who is looking for a fast buck.

Mr. Cove said the enterprising tourist can cut costs. At the peak of the season there are empty spaces in the territorial campgrounds where tourists can soak up the sun and even take a swim, providing they pick reasonably shallow water. The insect season lasts from the end of June to the end of August but breezes off the big lakes tend to keep the pests away.

PC Petition Requests Cabinet End Automatic Commutation

OTTAWA (CP) — John Reynolds (PC—Burnaby Richmond Delta) plans to present to the Commons today a 200,000-name petition calling for an end to the "automatic commutation of death sentences."

The petition "asks the cabinet to give more serious consideration when they commute sentences," Mr. Reynolds said in an interview Tuesday night. "They have been automatically commuting them."

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said earlier Tuesday that the cabinet will consider one week from Thursday the fate of Rene Vaillancourt, scheduled to be hanged May 13 for killing a Montreal policeman.

"There has not been — in Canada since 1961, when two men were executed together in Toronto, be it again — commuted all death sentences alone.

Mr. Reynolds said that "a lot of people refused to sign the petition because it wasn't strong enough.

"They wanted to bring back hanging right away."

A bill enacted in 1968 banned capital punishment for all but killers of on-duty policemen and prison guards. The capital punishment moratorium was renewed in 1973 and does not expire until 1977.

Mr. Reynolds and his supporters want the cabinet to review its royal prerogative of commuting death sentences, particularly in cases where clemency has not been recommended by a judge or jury.

All members of the Trudeau cabinet favor total abolition.

Eight men, including Vaillancourt, are in provincial jails under sentence of death. Clemency was recommended in all but two cases.

Mr. Reynolds said an attempt will be made in the Commons today to have an emergency debate on the commutation of death sentences.

Such a debate should be held, Vaillancourt decision, to give "all members of the House an opportunity to voice their opinions on this."

The issue also has dominated the Senate, which now has before it two opposite private members' bills on hanging.

Senator L. P. Beaubien (PC—Nova Scotia) said in the Senate Tuesday that Parliament has a responsibility to keep the peace.

Increased crime rates show "we are leaking at people who have declared war against our type of society," he said during debate of Senator Hazen Argue's bill to abolish capital punishment.

"If capital punishment isn't the solution, then we have to find one."

Senator Argue (L—Manitoba) introduced his abolition bill after Senator Louis Robichaud (L—New Brunswick) introduced a bill that would allow the cabinet to commute sentences only when clemency had been recommended by a judge or jury.

Kissinger Trying to Draft New Realistic Asian Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major task for the United States following the tragedy and to its role in Vietnam is developing a realistic Asian policy while warding off possible Communist attempts, officials say.

The form of the new policy, which State Secretary Henry Kissinger wants developed, will be on Japan, South Korea, the Philippines and Indonesia.

Thailand, which now faces a serious Communist threat, is in a special category and will be treated separately.

Speaking privately after the surrender of South Vietnam to the Viet Cong Tuesday night, officials said U.S. diplomacy in Asia has been staggering the last two years.

Events in Indochina the last few weeks also have revealed basic weaknesses in many old ties with other countries in the region, the sources stated.

The consensus follows Kissinger's view that congressional intrusion into the execution of foreign policy, particularly the removal of the military option, eliminated the basis of U.S. policy in Southeast Asia.

The idea behind the reassessment, therefore, will be to strengthen old ties and develop new ones based on mutual economic and political concerns rather than military accords.

The argument is that Japan, the Philippines and the others will feel more secure in such ties than in promises that their joint anti-Communism will lead to military aid.

At a news conference, Kissinger spoke in soft terms about a new Asia policy.

"We will now be in consultation with many other countries in that area including Indonesia and Singapore and Australia and New Zealand," he said.

"We hope to crystalize an Asian policy that is suited to present circumstances."

Whatever the outcome of the policy review, Kissinger said it must be realistic and long range.

"Surely another lesson we should draw from the Indochina experience is that foreign policy must be sustainable over decades if it is to be effective.

"The experience in the war can make us more mature in the commitments we undertake and more determined to maintain those we have.

"I would therefore think that with relation to other countries that no lessons should be drawn by the essence of our fri—ri— from the experiences in Vietnam."

The state secretary defended his policy of seeking improved relations with China and the Soviet Union. In fact, he said, Moscow was of "some help in the evacuation effort."

And while saying the Soviets must be responsible for the consequences of actions "that lead to an upset of the situation in Indochina," Kissinger also advised against expecting the Russians or Chinese to do "our job for us."

Kissinger also made these points in his news conference:

—Until last Sunday night the U.S. thought the North Vietnamese would accept a political solution. But "sometime Sunday night the North Vietnamese obviously changed signals."

—The final evacuation was ordered by President Ford when it was decided regular aircraft could no longer land safely at the Saigon airport. A month-long effort brought out 55,000 South Vietnamese and 1,200 Americans. About 4,500 people, including 1,000 Americans were flown out in the last day.

—U.S. relations with any new government in South Vietnam will have to wait "to see what kind of government emerges and indeed whether there is going to be a South Vietnam."

In this regard, the administration has asked Congress to authorize humanitarian aid for possible use in South Vietnam, but use contingent on the political evolution there.

Thomas Morgan (Dem. Pa.), chairman of the House of Representatives international relations committee, indicated support for this idea.

After Congress abandoned a bill authorizing $327 million to finance the evacuation, Morgan said a new measure to help Cambodian and South Vietnamese refugees might "be a lot more than $327 million."

Warning Given

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va. (CP) — Book publishers in the United States must recognize Canada as a separate state with its own cultural aspirations, Hugh Faulkner, secretary of state of Canada, said Tuesday.

He told the annual meeting of the Association of American Publishers that the Canadian government intends to ensure the health of the Canadian publishing industry, and will give "careful scrutiny (to) any impending new foreign presence in Canadian book publishing."

TV Teams 'Lost'

TORONTO (CP) — Both Canadian television networks are waiting for news of the whereabouts of their crews in South Vietnam.

CTV says it is best contact with reporter Henry Champ and his cameraman, Louis DeGuire. The CBC says it is not sure whether its reporters Colin Heath and Peter Kent and cameraman Ian Wilson have been evacuated from Saigon, as originally planned. They also were to be taken out on the U.S. airlift.

Lewis Says Davis Backed Oil Firms

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario NDP Leader Stephen Lewis charged Tuesday that Premier William Davis lobbied on behalf of oil companies and not consumers at the April 9 federal-provincial energy conference.

In reply to the province's April 7 budget, the NDP leader told the legislature the energy figures presented in the budget and cited by the premier at the conference are "bogus."

"And the only thing the premier was asking in Ottawa was for more money for oil companies by asking that they receive an even larger share of the take."

He said royalties calculated by the Alberta government, federal tax revenues and the Canada Petroleum Association brief show oil companies are receiving from 22 to 34 per cent more from the $2.79-a-barrel price increase granted last year.

Ontario has cited the increase at three per cent, he said.

DISEASE IMPORTED

Dutch Elm disease was probably introduced to North America in elm logs imported from Europe to the United States in the 1930s.

Southern Africa Debate Expected

KINGSTON, Jamaica (CP) — With two African nationalist leaders waiting for an invitation to speak, the Commonwealth heads of government discuss Southern Africa today.

Whether Bishop Abel Muzorewa and Chief Ndabaningi Sithole of the African National Council (ANC) will get a chance to take part in the deliberations was in question.

Communist successes in South Vietnam and Cambodia also will be discussed during the second day of the eight-nation conference, informed sources said. The summit is being attended by the heads of government of 32 Commonwealth countries.

The discussion on Indochina is expected to be initiated by prime ministers of two Indochinese states, Mrs. Indira Gandhi of India and Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore.

Yew is known to reject the domino theory that the fall of one Southeast Asian country to the Communists will lead to collapse of its neighbors. He believes the best defence against the advance of Communism is a country economic strength.

Mrs. Gandhi is a strong proponent of the Indian Ocean being made a zone of peace free from super-power rivalries.

Malaysian Prime Minister Tun Abdul Razak already has said that any new governments accepted by the leaders of South Vietnam and Cambodia would be recognized by his government.

On the subject of the two African leaders, the conference briefing officer would say only that it was a matter to be settled by the leaders of countries attending the conference.

The position of the Canadians is that the conference should be reserved for heads of government and some other forum should be found for the two men, whom Prime Minister Trudeau, among others, wants to hear.

Bishop Muzorewa told reporters Tuesday night he wanted stricter sanctions against Prime Minister Ian Smith's white minority regime, which broke away from Britain in November, 1965.

This would enable the Rhodesian nationalists to bring Smith to the negotiating table "with a degree of seriousness."

Third World delegates feel new Commonwealth action is needed to end apartheid and to liberate Rhodesia from white rule and to start Southwest Africa on the road to independence.

But the need for a new economic order in the world still is the No. 1 topic of the conference.

Changes Proposed

QUEBEC (CP) — Sweeping changes in legislation governing the administration of justice in Quebec courts are proposed in a White Paper on contemporary Justice tabled in the Quebec national assembly Tuesday by Justice Minister Jerome Choquette.

The 300-page document proposes a major overhaul in the provincial court system, creation of a special council to select judges and establishment of a watchdog committee.

Canadian Repertory Theatre Beginning For Many of Canada's Best Actors

OTTAWA (CP) — Put the names of Christopher Plummer, William Hutt, Eric House, Betty Leighton, Ted Follows and William Shatner together and you must add Amelia Hall and the Canadian Repertory Theatre (CRT).

Twenty-five years ago this spring Miss Hall, then an Ottawa high school teacher of English literature, speech and drama, became an actress and director in the fledgling CRT, and its manager for five years.

They played in the cramped quarters of Ottawa's old La Salle Academy, now being restored by the federal government as a heritage building. A special mural there will commemorate the country's first professional repertory theatre.

When Miss Hall joined the CT had just obtained its charter, long before the Stratford Festival, the Crest Theatre in Toronto, or the Manitoba Theatre Centre in Winnipeg got started.

She recalled in an interview that in the first five years, the CRT produced 140 plays, and she directed a third of them. She hasn't done much directing since, devoting her full energies to acting.

Miss Hall was seen on CBC-TV this spring as Lady Hardcastle in the Stratford Festival production of She Stoops to Conquer. And she is back in Ottawa now to play Mrs. Gardner in the arts centre's production of James Reaney's madcap comedy, The Killdeer, which runs to May 10.

Mrs. Gardner is "a small-town, narrow-minded, chapel-going mother, who treats her son as if he were still a little boy," she said. This is a far cry from the shrewish, flighty gargoyle of Lady Hardcastle. But it is a mark of her versatility as an actress.

In fact, Miss Hall was the first woman to appear on the Stratford stage when the festival started in a tent in 1953, playing Lady Anne in Shakespeare's Richard III opposite Alec Guinness. In the 22 years since then, she has played 29 roles at Stratford.

She doesn't want to be typed as a character actress. She has played, as she put it, "many funny women." But she has filled moving, dramatic roles, too. It's a mark of professionalism, she said, to be able to do anything asked of her by a director.

Miss Hall said she doesn't like to see another actress in a role she knows she is going to play. "I don't want to know how they did it. I've got to learn the part out of my own discovery."

When the CRT now defunct with the advent of the National Arts Centre—was in its heyday here, it had a small, dedicated company that staged one play one week while it rehearsed another for next week. Occasionally a production would be held over for a second week and a three-week run was a remarkable hit.

It was the only theatre in Canada offering professional stage employment in the winter months until the Crest was established in 1963. The acting profession was small; everyone knew everyone else's abilities and a director could cast parts with confident knowledge of his actors.

Now, Miss Hall said, with the growth of theatre in Canada, the situation has changed.

"It's kind of frightening. Now people want you to read for a part. Directors like Tyrone Guthrie and Michael Langham just cast you in a certain part and knew you could do it. That's the way I like to work, but it doesn't seem possible now."

Reading for a part—giving a rehearsal hall demonstration of an actor's interpretation of a role from the script—is something that terrorizes Miss Hall. She says she won't do it. "I can't do it."

She is writing a book about the CRT and its struggling days before the age of government grants through the Canada Council. Its financial backing was mainly an Ottawa businessman, Charles Southgate, who stood behind a bank loan of $2,000, which was considered an enormous debt in those days.

With her experience, she has a fund of stories about actors, directors, theatres and television work.

"I played in Death of a Salesman when it was done live for TV. That was pretty terrifying, dashing from one part of the set to another, finding doors that opened the wrong way and windows in the wrong places. The whole play was cut to ribbons to make it fit in hour and 45 minutes.

"But mind you, it made for a very spontaneous performance. Now everything is done on film or tape for TV, and you have time to catch your breath between scenes."

Miss Hall has her own thoughts, too, about the thrust stage at Stratford, which has often upset actors and directors not accustomed to working with audiences seated on three sides of them.

"On an ordinary proscenium or box stage, you know you are going to be playing in one direction only, to the audience out front. But at Stratford, you have to play to three sides.

"It's amazing how many directors of late have ignored that fact, and just sit out front, watching from the front.

"I have done a lot of things on that stage and learned to work right around it.

"Michael Langham was just petrified when he worked there first, but he became the master of that stage."

Miss Hall will be missing from both the Stratford and the Show Festival stages this summer. She isn't anxious to move far afield because of an illness in her family. She is eager to finish her book.

But there is one event to which she is looking forward—the granting of an honorary degree to her by her alma mater, McMaster University in Hamilton. Born in England, she moved to Hamilton as a child and began voice and drama studies there at the age of 12.

LONDON (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor left hospital here Tuesday night after 10 days treatment for flu.

The 43-year-old actress appeared pale and much thinner than when she flew here from Leningrad, where she is filming The Bluebird of Happiness.

She will fly back to Leningrad on Monday to resume filming.

NEW YORK (AP) — Gunsmoke is out of powder after 20 seasons on television and three on radio. CBS said Tuesday it is cancelling the durable Western, along with four other shows, including the eight-season Maude series.

CBS said it is cancelling The Manhunter, which lasted one season, its Friday night movie, and a mid-season replacement series, We'll Get By.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Director-writer Francis Ford Coppola, winner of three Oscars for The Godfather II, has been chosen alumnus of the year by UCLA, where he studied in the film department. The honor previously has been awarded to Agnes DeMille, Carol Burnett, Jackie Robinson and H. R. Haldeman.

ATHENS (Reuter) — A Greek court Friday upheld the banning of the French film Emanuelle as pornographic but acquitted 14 theatre owners who had shown it because they had obtained prior approval from the ministry of press and information.

An Athens court of misdemeanors upheld the decision by the Athens public prosecutor to ban the film a week after police raided the 14 Athens theatres and confiscated the film—then in its second week of showing and breaking all box office records.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful toward evening how you treat the property of others. Carelessness could prove expensive, either in cash or hard feelings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 2) At the last minute today you'll make a switch in plans. It will be far less beneficial for you than your original idea.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) One you've been depending upon for assistance will suddenly withdraw her offer, due to circumstances beyond her control.

CANCER June 21-July 22) Steer clear today of a friend who often acts rashly. Unfortunately, you'll be judged by the company you keep.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The more you hurry with household tasks today the more youre apt to have accidents. Take it easy. The work will wait.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be on your best behavior this evening socially. A faux pas will only serve to tarnish your image.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Keep a protective eye on cherished things in your home today. Put them out of reach of careless guests or frolicking children.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You have a tendency today to unthinkingly blurt things out. Something you say in this manner may offend others in your company.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Before making important purchases, today examine the merchandise for flaws or defects. Don't buy blindly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your mind will be centered on self-interests today. This may cause a friend to feel you are neglecting her.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll be far from your best at keeping secrets today. It's not that you're a gossip—you're just too loose with your words.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Before taking a suggestion by a friend, quit her thoroughly to be sure she knows from experience that it's workable.

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Hard luck Joe won the club lead and led the suit right back. When East discarded a spade Joe remarked, "Nothing breaks for me." Then he cashed his ace and king of trumps and led his seven of hearts to dummy's queen. East won with the king and led the club back. Joe could do nothing better than discard his 10, lose the second heart and lose two more tricks to his opponents.

Joe had been unlucky. If both opponents had followed to the second club he would have set up enough clubs in dummy for heart discards and made seven. Also if West had held the king of hearts or East the jack, Joe would have lost just one heart trick. But poor Joe had overlooked one slight extra chance.

After East had discarded on the second club, Joe should have led his nine of trumps to dummy's jack. West would have played his singleton 10 and Joe would have had an extra entry in dummy which would have been all he needed.

Just watch the play. A third club ruffed high. The ace of trumps. The king of trumps. The queen of spades led and ruffed by dummy's deuce of trumps. The sixth club would now be good and furnish a parking place for one low heart.

You bid two clubs and your partner continues to two spades. What do you do now?

Spine Curvature Needs Treatment

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have never seen in your written anything on the subject of curvature of the spine. About 20 years ago I was told I had this and that it could get worse.

I did nothing about it. I have a very good, upright back. What is curvature of the spine? What should I do about it?—Mrs. C.M.

I have discussed this before. Perhaps you missed my reference because you didn't recognize the medical term for it, "scoliosis."

My first thought upon reading your letter is that you have been quite lucky to have escaped deformity, the usual result in untreated cases of scoliosis. Only rarely has this condition in infants been known to correct itself. You don't tell us your age, so I have no idea whether or not you are one of those lucky ones.

Adolescent scoliosis is more common, and it is usually detected at about the age of 12. Females are affected more than males by a 3 to 2 ratio.

The cause is most cases cannot be determined. Somehow a sideway deviation appears in a segment of the spine, usually in the middle section. This produces the characteristic shoulder drop on one side with accompanying elevation of the pelvic bone on the other side. In severe cases, especially, it is quite noticeable on standing.

It is difficult for a physician to predict the eventual outcome or the degree of expected deformity. This depends on the age at which the first symptoms appear. The progression of deformity tends to stop with stabilization of spinal growth (at about 17 to boys, 15 to girls). Scoliosis tends to run in families.

The cause can be determined in only about 15 per cent of the cases, and these include poliomyelitis, defects in back muscle formation or birth defects.

I wouldn't want either scoliosis victims to be deluded by the apparently happy outcome in your case. As I mentioned earlier, you appear to have been a very lucky girl. Even the mildest symptoms of scoliosis bear careful attention, especially since the condition can progress very rapidly toward severe deformity.

Early treatment is essential. This usually involves use of the famous Milwaukee brace developed by Dr. Walter Blount and quite effective when relig-giously following early diagnosis.

Your scoliosis (if, indeed, that is what it was) was detected 20 years ago, and has since stabilized. Therefore, there should be no need for treatment or for concern at this late date.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I saw sparks of fire in my left eye. My doctor told me it was age, and to take it easy. Would you comment?—Mrs. A.S.

The vitreous of the eye is a jelly-like material which fills the eyeball cavity behind the lens. It is attached to the retina by very fine strands of contractive tissue. The strongest attachment is where the optic nerve enters the eye to the rear?.

The symptoms you describe might be what are called "lightning streaks," as opposed to the "halos" and the dimming symptoms associated with glaucoma. If yours are true lightning streaks, there is the possibility of a future problem of retinal tears from pulling on the connective tissues I mentioned above.

Should you visit an eye doctor if your present physician isn't a specialist in this field. Optic ophthalmologists have advised me that the flashing streaks are a prominent warning sign of vitreous detachment and of potential retinal detachment.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have cold sores. But I have found that if I dip my fingers in rubbing alcohol and pat it on the sores from time to time it is practically gone in a day's time. What do you think of this?—Mrs. J.K.R.

I have used this same method for years, and I believe it to be effective, although it may not work for everyone every time.

Ignore Warnings

FLAMANVILLE, France (AP) — This Norman village has approved construction of a giant nuclear power station, ignoring danger warnings from ecologists. France plans to build 45 nuclear reactors by 1985 and the vote was considered a bellwether.

Youths Steal Cars

GENOA, Italy (AP) — Two 13-year-olds broke into a sedan in Turin and drove it 75 miles after the owner was asleep they evaded police as they went on a joyride that involved stealing three other cars. Authorities said the youths were finally stopped when they drove the wrong way into a one-way street.

YOKOHAMA, Japan (AP) — Bills of toilet paper with 800 basic English words are the latest way to help students here prepare for Japan's tough college entrance examinations.

Food in Soviet Union Costs More Than Here

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet press and propaganda organs hammer away these days at rising food prices in the West in an attempt to portray a decline in the Western economic system. But they seldom mention what food costs in the Soviet Union.

The reason for the omission is that the Soviet housewife pays considerably more for food than housewives in Western countries.

One example from the Soviet press was contained in a recent Pravda article. The Communist party organ said: "The food crisis, like all the other present ills of the Western economy, shows the depth and inhibility of the contradictions tearing asunder the capitalist world."

It said big monopolies are making huge profits as food prices rise and the working people in the West pay dearly for it.

But when one compares the lot of Soviet and Western consumers, the Soviet Union looks a lot worse in the area of food costs.

A list of 11 typical market baskets items that cost $12.50 at a New York supermarket in an Associated Press check would cost $17.32 in Moscow. But there is much more to it than that.

Food items such as frozen orange juice and peanut butter—standard items in New York—are not available in the Soviet Union, nor are non-food items such as paper towels and fabric softeners.

Also, the average industrial wage in the Soviet Union is 140 rubles a month, or 35 rubles a week, or 88 kopeks an hour. Put into dollars the earnings would be $198 a month, $49.64 a week or $1.24 an hour.

The average Russian worker pays $1.84 for a dozen medium eggs and $2.31 for a pound of butter—1½ hours work for the eggs and nearly two hours for the butter.

The U.S. bureau of labor statistics in Washington says the average wage for a non-supervisory production worker in the United States if $4.40 an hour. A dozen medium eggs in New York cost 69 cents and a pound of butter is about $1.

So the average production employee in New York works about 10 minutes for a dozen eggs and 15 minutes for a pound of butter.

No two countries are strictly comparable, nor do statistics tell the entire story. For example, what passes for chopped chuck or centre-cut pork chops in Moscow falls below Western quality.

To get meat that compares to Western cuts, Russians would have to turn to the farmers' markets where the current price of such meat is about $3.20 a pound.

The Moscow prices cited are those at state stores where the price is fixed. But about 20 per cent of meat, vegetable and fruit supplies in Soviet cities come from collective farm markets where quality is better but prices are higher.

Potatoes cost about 16 cents a pound in New York, and in Moscow only about five kopeks, or seven cents at the official exchange rate. However, because of a poor potato harvest last year, potatoes sold here are the size of walnuts and the better product at free market costs the equivalent of 21 cents a pound.

The statistics also do not show that coffee is hard to find right now in Moscow or that there have been almost no tomatoes or cucumbers for nearly three months.

While Soviet publications do not often mention actual Soviet or Western food prices, they dwell on the fact that food prices have been stable in the Soviet Union for several years.

That is generally true, but it only means that today's high food prices in the Soviet Union were en even heavier burden on Soviet workers 10 years ago when, the average industrial wage was only 95 rubles a month.

The Soviets also argue that under socialism food prices will not go up. That may also be true, but if they don't, it will just increase what is now probably the highest agricultural subsidy in the world.

To compare Soviet food expenditures with the West it is necessary to point out that rents, utilities and public transportation are extremely low by Western standards and there is no unemployment.

To some extent that mitigates the staggering relative cost of food in the Soviet Union. But many Russians will admit spending around 200 rubles a month on food, and some say the bill for a family of four can easily reach 300 rubles.

Most Soviet women work to provide a second income and in many families there is a grown child earning wages. The Soviet economy would be in difficulty without the women who make up half the labor force, but another reason women work is to make ends meet.

A recent assertion by Tass, the official news agency, that a family of four spends about 100 rubles a month on food caused one Russian to ask in disbelief: "What did they eat?"

A 1972 article in Izvestia, the government newspaper, probably presents a truer picture. It told of the well-being of a worker's family and said the man earned 1,900 rubles a year basic pay, but the income of other family members and bonuses raised the total to 3,678 rubles.

When it came to expenditures, the yearly food bill was put at 1,309 rubles—exactly equal to the salary of the head of the household.

The average American spends 16 to 17 per cent of his income for food.

United Kingdom Oil Reserves up Sharply

ABERDEEN, Scotland (CP) — Established reserves of oil in the United Kingdom sector of the North Sea now are estimated at more than one billion tons—an increase of nearly 20 per cent since May last year. This was revealed in the British government's third annual review of forecasts of oil and gas production from the U.K. continental shelf.

Eric Varley, secretary of state for energy, said that total recoverable reserves of oil from areas now designated might range from three billion to 4.5 billion tons.

The report said that although delays in starting dates and a lowering of the estimated size of the reserves in one or two fields will mean that oil production for the next few years is not as high as had been hoped, production in the 1970s still will provide "very substantial" relief to the country's balance of payments and provide self-sufficiency by 1980.

Production in 1980 is expected to be between 100 and 130 million tons, the report said, and sufficient reserves exist to sustain production through the 1980s at between 100 and 150 million tons a year.

The report said 1974 was a year of rapidly expanding exploration, continued success in discovery and progress with oil-field development, both offshore and on land. This year would see the first production of U.K. offshore oil.

Compared with 1973, the number of offshore wells drilled for exploration purposes last year rose to 65 from 42 and the number of appraisal wells to 35 from 19.

The report said there has been a "dramatic expansion" in the involvement of British companies in building the steel modules which house the equipment and services on production platforms. In the second half of last year, the number of these modules on order or being fabricated in the U.K. was 150; at the end of 1973 it was two.

Other promising areas for Britain were offshore maintenance and the operation of submersibles.

On gas, the report said the total quantity available to British Gas Corp. is expected to rise significantly within a few years and to stay at a high level at least throughout the 1980s.

Last year gas production from the southern basin of the North Sea was equivalent to about 40 million tons of oil and averaged 3.5 billion cubic feet a day—providing about 95 per cent of the U.K.'s total consumption.

Real Ale Pubs Listed in Guide

LONDON (Reuter)—A book just published in Britain aims to help beer connoisseurs find the best of their favorite drink all over the country.

The book is the 1975 edition of The Good Beer Guide, which lists 2,300 pubs selling "real ale"—beer brewed and served in traditional ways.

The Campaign for Real Ale (Camra), which published the guide, has been fighting for four years to halt the trend towards fizzy, tasteless, weak beer.

Beer and pubs are subjects close to the hearts of British working men, who in recent years have been fighting to reverse changes taking place in the industry.

Many of the old, cosy pubs with log fires and friendly barmaids have been replaced by places with ultra-modern plastic-and-chrome fittings and often a loud juke-box in the corner.

Traditionally, pubs had a public bar, where beer was cheap and accommodations homey but sparse, and a saloon bar where comfort was paid for by higher prices.

That distinction is one of many dying traditions in the British pub. There now are few of the old public bars with sawdust on the floor and a spittoon by the fire.

Rarely is beer drawn up by strong barmaids pulling a long hand-pump. Usually there is a small tap or a little pump and the work is done by a cylinder of carbon dioxide gas.

The colorful porcelain handles on the old pumps used to depict the pub's name—perhaps a white horse, or a Yorkshire grey—but now all there is on the front of most beer taps is an illuminated advertising sign.

Camra's guide explains: "Real ale is beer brewed from malted barley and hops and fermented by adding yeast. It is served from casks made of wood or metal by any method which does not involve the artificial use of carbon dioxide gas."

The guide lists pubs selling real ale. Colorful names like Shepherd Neame and Theakston nestle with those of the big brewers, like Courage and Bass Charrington, which still sell some real ale.

There are six major brewers in Britain, selling three-quarters of the beer consumed in the country. They have been reluctant to change to real ale.

The campaign has had more success with smaller brewers, some of whom have been convinced that there is a strong demand for real ale.

Camra says hundreds of pubs now sell real ale due to pressure from the organization.

It has also succeeded in getting the government to agree to a top-level inquiry into the composition and labelling of beer. It wants strength, original gravity and other details to appear on beer bottles and pumps.

Some of the better beers have been available only in a few pubs near the breweries. Camra has been trying to arrange for some of them to be more widely sold and one of the connoisseurs' favorites, Brakspear's beer from Henley-on-Thames, now is available in London for the first time.

After just four years, Camra has 30,000 members in 90 active branches throughout the country and has formed an investment company which owns two pubs.

The company raised nearly £200,000 sterling ($460,000) when shares were sold in the public last year and the two pubs in Manchester and Bristol were bought soon afterward.

The company expects to acquire six or eight more this year but is in no hurry to buy. Director Christopher Hutt said: "We want to phase our purchases so that we can devote the small resources we have to giving individual attention to each pub we set it up."

Camra's latest campaign is against the British government's proposed capital transfer tax, which, says Camra, would hit private brewers transferring ownership to other members of their families and threaten the existence of 50 small breweries.

Only Last Reading Remains For Bill Raising MPs' Pay

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs are expected to vote final approval today of a 21 1-3-per-cent pay boost that will raise their salaries to the equivalent of $446 a week from $325.

The increase, if no last-minute hitches develop, will provide MPs more than $7,000 back pay retroactive to July 8.

Only a small group of the 264 MPs objected Tuesday as the house voted down proposed amendments, leaving only the reading to complete passage.

The pay bill also must be approved by the senate but a major opposition is expected. Senators are included in the bill.

The proposed legislation scaled down from an original 32-per-cent increase, would give MPs annual pay of $52,000, including $10,000 in tax-free "expense allowance." They also get $38,000, including expense allowances of $8,000.

They also would receive a maximum annual cost-of-living increase of seven per cent starting next year.

The $34,000 total is the equivalent of about $44,000 or $846 a week in fully-taxable income, compared with about $25,000 or $625 a week now.

New Democrats, led by House Leader Stanley Knowles, accounted for many of the 12 to 13 MPs who voted against key clauses in the bill during Tuesday's detailed study.

But there were isolated opponents among the Progressive Conservatives and Liberals, including former revenue minister Robert Stanbury (York-Scarborough) and Stan Darling (PC—Parry Sound - Muskoka). They were joined by Leonard Jones (Liberal).

Mr. Knowles, who also opposed the last increase in 1970, pleaded to a generally silent and sullen House for reconsideration.

"We have no right to be improving our economic position at this time," he argued.

Mr. Darling said the increase should be dropped to 25 per cent and the retroactive clause should be moved up to Jan. 1. This would show restraint in line with government anti-inflation program, he said.

Mr. Stanbury, dropped from the cabinet last summer, criticized Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp for his handling of the bill.

"Rarely has there been a more lacklustre effort in the history of this Parliament," he charged.

The NDP was the only party officially opposed. But not all its members agreed with the position. Derek Blackburn (Brantford) and John Gilbert (Toronto Broadview) broke ranks to vote for the increase.

The bill also would raise senators' salaries to $24,000 from $18,000. In addition, their current tax-free allowance of $4,000 would be raised to $5,300, for a total income of $29,300.

Hydro Ripoff Charged

TORONTO (CP) — James Bullbrook (L—Sarnia) Tuesday called for a government investigation of what he termed a $100-million ripoff by Ontario Hydro.

The utility overcharged thousands of Ontario residents on last December's bill, he told Energy Minister Dennis Timbrell during question period in the legislature.

Rates in many municipalities increased 12 per cent on Jan. 1. Mr. Timbrell said he will investigate the complaint.

In a statement released outside the legislature, Mr. Bullbrook said he learned of the situation through a constituent two weeks ago, who said he was overcharged $3.02 for the month.

Seek Trains

TORONTO (CP) — Tourist operators and local officials of the Grey-Bruce and Huronia areas sought Ontario government support Tuesday for reintroduction of regular train service into their areas.

Lawyer Sentenced

HAMILTON (CP) — Emil Lenko, 38, a disbarred city lawyer, pleaded guilty in county court Tuesday to 31 charges of fraud and was sentenced to five-year concurrent terms on each charge.

The charges involve $630,000 paid to Lenko for mortgages or other transactions, including more than $100,000 in fictitious mortgages.

Food Cheaper

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Food Council reported Thursday that the cost of its 127-item market basket dropped 11 cents to $103.05 from the first week of March to the first week of April, 1975.

Teachers Are Requested Not to Plant Hate Seeds

HULL, Que. (CP) — The Outaouais regional school board has appealed to its teachers to restrain their enthusiasm for celebrating May Day Thursday in the schools of this district opposite Ottawa.

In a letter to school principals, Jean Larismont, director-general, says the board has been assured that teachers "will not take advantage of the world day of labor to plant in the minds of adolescents, whose care is in their hands, seeds of hate and anti-capitalism."

The appeal for restraint follows publication by the Quebec Teachers Federation of a 76-page May Day Manual "for a school day in the service of the working class." The manual, to be used May 1, offers ideas for instructing pupils from kindergarten through high school about labor unions, strikes, bosses, unemployment and high hats and anti-clericalism.

The booklet says students will learn about their friends in such countries as Chile, China, Albania, North Vietnam and Cuba, which have or had Communist governments.
